Preface

I seek out the truth wherever I can. I question EVERYTHING, and you should too. But unfortunately, the truth is sometimes brutal to find due to the Khazarian-controlled news and corporate-owned media. Everyone who listens to the news is fed propaganda, lies, and illusions. You are listening to the beast spew his venom. The news puppets are only reading what they are told. They are not your friends. Most TV news reporters are trained by the CIA – on how to LIE.

Many countries call America, “The Great Satan!” I wonder why? News stations in other countries might be a tad bit more honest than ours. Our media hides the Satanists and their activities inside our country. Many members of our American media are Satanists.

Many people ask what happened to the country they love called America and the other countries we all love to visit? Answer: The governments of these countries have been taken over by Satan-worshipping Khazarian gangsters.

So, I became an avid hunter of truth. And it is difficult when Satanic gangsters are controlling the shots. But, if you follow the money, it will usually lead straight to the fact.

There are many excellent researchers on many truth topics, and I utilize many of them as my sources. So we ALL are on the same team. I also find the truth by subscribing to other trustworthy sources, videos, books, certain hard-to-find articles, and even human sources.

It’s getting harder and harder to find the truth because most truthful history books have been destroyed, educators lie to their students, and our friends at Google fill people's minds with disinformation and HIDE the facts.

Inside this book, I try to provide the reader with the source – so you will know that it is not only my truth but the truth of others as well. Inside, discover who owns the media liars and why they are part of humanity's ‘invisible enemy.’

Unfortunately, we do not live in a perfect world. It is NO secret that governments all over the world LIE. Most are controlled by the Khazarian Satanic Mafia. Today, most people are fully aware of their many deceitful practices. Even the United States government lies to its citizens, and it happens much more than most people realize.

One day, doctors and the health industry will put life before profits. However, as of now, there are no signs of this happening anytime soon. We are pretty much on our own when it comes to our health. Doctors kill or medically induce the death of about 250,000 people every year. It is the 3rd largest reason for death in America.

Our food supply is purposely poisoned, and our water supply is unhealthy and undrinkable. Who is trying to kill us? Or are we just being paranoid? There is no reason to ingest food that has toxic ingredients or water that is unfit to drink in today's time. Americans are not getting healthier. They are contracting diseases, and obesity increases every year.

For some reason, our "controllers" do not want us to know the origin of our existence. The truth may surprise you. They keep the history of mankind a secret. Scientists and historians are extremely guilty of cover-ups and lying to people. They have been lying to people for hundreds, maybe thousands of years. Usually, you can just follow the money or power trail to discover their reasons. Often, taxpayers are left paying for all their propaganda and LIES.

Recently, the American people and those worldwide know that law enforcement and the FBI can and will lie to you if it benefits their agenda. Who can you trust?

Unfortunately, many inside contents may be disgusting and disappointing and cause sadness and anger. If so, please remember . . . I'm only the messenger and TRUTH SEEKER. Believe me, and you will not be alone with your feelings or thoughts.

Benjamin Franklin once said: "Those who would give up essential Liberty, purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." (Even old Ben was a Satanist!)

Hopefully, the contents will provide a "wake-up call" to Americans and others. "The Great Awakening." "Sometimes, you can't tell the public the truth – you must show them." The American people and those around the world are discovering the evil 'Invisible Enemy' – they are the enemy of humanity.

Our "controllers" LIE to us. They lie and try to deceive us daily. Never trust those who pretend to be our masters. The lies of the 'invisible enemy' are slowly becoming known. Please spread the word. Two forces are fighting for their lives—humanity VS. The Deep State.

The Red Pill phrase comes from the movie the Matrix. (If you take the red pill, you find the truth, and the illusion of this world ends – if you take the blue pill, you go back to sleep and remain in your illusion.) This book could be a Red Pill for many people. I hope this book helps you to wake up from the illusion.

The deep state, the Khazarian Mafia, wants most of us dead or enslaved. They are the darkness of our world. The Deep State members are worldwide. They have infiltrated every aspect of our lives. They are part of governments, media, school systems, law enforcement, heads of corporations, politicians, and even part of our military.

We are living in dangerous but exciting times, indeed. The Khazarian Mafia has been working against humanity for hundreds of years. They are what people call the (deep state). It's all about control – and death. Their goal is the death and enslavement of those living on Earth. Therefore, we must fight for freedom every day! Never – Never – Never Give Up!

I hope this book provides or confirms a "Wake-Up-Call" that is required to help you fight the "invisible enemy" and help you wake up other people. Inside discover a few of their biggest LIES, Deceptions, and Illusions.

*"Quarantine is when you restrict the movement of sick or unhealthy people.
'Tyranny' is when you restrict the movement of healthy people."*

The Big Bang Hoax

The Big Bang Theory is widely accepted among scientists as the most reasonable explanation of how our Universe was created. But very often, you hear the phrase “billions of years ago, AFTER THE BIG BANG” as if some people want to convince us all, by any means necessary, that the Big Bang happened.

Some scientists might claim that Einstein’s general relativity proved mathematically that the Big Bang theory is correct.

Astronomer Eric Lerner claims that the Big Bang never existed.

One big adversary of the Big Bang theory is Eric Lerner, who wrote a book called ‘The Big Bang Never Happened’ in 1991. Instead, he supported the old idea widely accepted before the Big Bang theory emerged: the Universe always existed and never had a beginning.

Even in 2020, Lerner still works to prove the Big Bang theory to be a Scam. The Bottom line is that the Big Bang Theory is almost laughable and a HOAX.

Maybe it’s time to acknowledge that, at least for the moment, we humans cannot simply know everything about our reality. Of course, some day, we will all know the truth, but know the big bang theory is a hoax for now.

Source

The big bang theory is a big hoax of scientists scratching the surface of the ideas about creating the earth, the universe, and all we call the cosmic conglomerate.

First, we had Darwin with his theory about the evolution of man as being from apes and monkeys. This was proven a hoax because the change process has not continued. Their evolution “silly” theory stopped when human beings were created.

The Rip-off and SCAM of Charles Darwin Revealed

After – Charles Darwin released his revolutionary "On the Beginning of Species" in 1859, researchers scrambled to locate fossil evidence of vanished human forefathers. When excavator Charles Dawson uncovered what he believed was a missing link in 1910, what he indeed discovered was one of the biggest scams in history. Charles Dawson was a con artist.

By the 1950s, tests disclosed that the skull discovered was only 600 years of age, and also, the jaw originated from an orangutan. Nevertheless, some educated people controlled these items, consisting of filing down and discoloring the teeth.

People of the world had been duped. So what was behind the fraud? Numerous suspects have emerged, including Dawson himself. Today, many indicators point to Martin A. C. Hinton, a gallery volunteer at the time of the exploration.

A trunk bearing his initials had bones discolored precisely like the Piltdown fossils were. Probably he was out to humiliate his employer, Arthur Smith Woodward, that declined to give him an once a week's salary.

Do We Really Live on a Spinning Ball?

New Evidence Proves Earth is Flat

For years, the niche community of individuals who believe the planet is FLAT has been ridiculed-- ostracised by the general public as 'lunatics' and 'out of their mind' for over 2 thousand years. However, the concept is begun in old Greece and later developed in the Bronze and Iron ages in civilizations closer to the Near East until late in the Hellenistic period (31 BC).

Cutting-edge researchers from the University of Malta, Dr. Harry Johnson, Prof. Anita Bath, and Dr. Oliver Klosov, have confirmed evidence to prove the earth is INDEED flat. This discovery has pertained to the leading edge from a longitudinal research study expanding 25 years from over 50 top colleges worldwide-- beginning at the University of Malta.

Our bodies and that of animals and creatures are designed to detect movement, yet we are told we cannot see or feel the earth moving at 66,600 mph. Absurd!

The Spinning Ball Science is one BIG LIE!

The Great Dinosaur Hoax

The Dark Art of Deception: Why Dinosaurs is a Hoax.

Nobody has ever recorded the discovery of a dinosaur fossil or the preserved remains of a pet skeletal system comparable to a 'dinosaur' or gigantic reptile. Dinosaurs are a big lie. Museums and toy manufacturers have earned big money selling the dinosaurs' hoaxes. The Greeks, Persians, and Egyptians also built great cities and, in doing so, quarried numerous tons of sedimentary stone and displaced much sub-soil. Yet, these advanced people left no document of dinosaur finds.

Both Aristotle and Pliny, the Senior, made no mention of Dinosaurs. Likewise, explorers from around the world have never discovered large dinosaur fossils.

Had any dinosaur skeletons been found throughout the recognized world during that time, these guys would certainly have been acutely interested in the details.

However, their extant works do not refer to giant pet fossils. The made-up story about Dinosaurs was just 'discovered' in the 19th century. Myths and legends abounded, of course, yet the unique creatures portrayed in these tales were, in general, exaggerated crossbreeds of existing animals.

Dinosaur bones WERE never DISCOVERED in any PIT!

Yes, we should be considerably stunned. The reason is straightforward: Thank you for this – If thousands of giant dinosaurs roamed the earth for millions of years, they ought to have left a record so extravagant and substantial that it would be almost easy to find their bones. However, not ONE dinosaur bone has been found. Why? If they find one, it's later discovered to be a bone of a cow or horse. Why are the dinosaurs in museums created from plaster and other materials? This alone proves dinosaurs are fraudulent and created to earn profits from the public. Nothing has been found!

The ancient Romans, Greeks, Persians, Egyptians, Babylonians, Assyrians, and Sumerians need to have built up significant quantities of mostly entire dinosaur skeletons. And as they constructed the Great Wall in 200 BC, the Chinese needs to have discovered 10s of hundreds of outstanding femurs and jaw-bones, wonderful domed heads, and enormous fossilized rib-cages. Yet they didn't.

No one discovered anything. A million years is a very long time. Yet zoologists tell us that dinosaurs strolled the planet for 165 million years. So there should be MOUNTAINS OF DINASOUR BONES, but not ONE dinosaur has ever been found.

So one pet in a million left a fossilized skeleton, and the population density was a mere ten people per square mile. So there must be several giants yet obscure dinosaur fossils within a mile of your house, plus many smaller specimens.

Even though these assumptions are highly conservative, they indicate the apparent fact that fossilized dinosaur remains must be extremely plentiful over a lot of the planet. Why, after that, are they only ever before located by 'experts' and only in remote areas? Why exist so a couple of samplings in galleries all over the world? And why do so a lot of these feeble samplings contain simply a few bones?

Despite the diversity of missing out on parts, whole pets, including their atmosphere, are reconstructed from extremely little fossilized material. The artist has taken over from the researcher! Anything he selects to sketch is approved as reality, and silly conclusions are attracted from non-existent evidence.

Outrageous insurance claims

In our earlier paper on the great scam known as Evolution, we demonstrated how bone fragments from pigs and primates were used to create new types of hominids. But unfortunately, in their decision to negate the Scriptures and postulate a wildly inflated age for the earth, these 'scientists' were prepared to make one of the most outrageous insurance claims based on their creative imagination, their unbounded arrogance, and also their intense hatred of Christianity.

proclaimed, based on the tooth revealed over, that a brand-new hominid species had been uncovered, dubbed 'Nebraska Guy.'

Osborn also explained and called the 'dinosaurs' referred to as Tyrannosaurus Rex in 1905 and Velociraptor in 1924! The Dinosaur Scam becomes part of the terrific Evolution Hoax.

A class of reptilian creatures known as a 'dinosaur' was postulated to give these fictitious occupants. However, there was one significant difficulty with this resourceful fraud. Suppose the world had been inhabited for 165 million years by a staggering selection of exotic reptilian animals; after that, one would undoubtedly expect to locate multitudes still in existence today. Although there are no dinosaurs anywhere today, the Masonic tricksters behind this hoax needed a possible way to explain their disappearance.

Just tiny, warm-blooded animals-- the very early creatures-- might withstand the cold. Science Fiction A ' massive asteroid' strikes the planet-- another fictitious detail in the terrific Masonic scam. Outer space is a misconception; giant planets do not exist, and dinosaurs were not 'wiped out' 65 million years ago; as we kept in mind in earlier documents, the Babylonian Elite managed this globe as their lies interconnected.

For example, the planet is level and fixed; there is no such region as 'celestial spaces'; there are no asteroids; the earth is only a few thousand years old; dinosaurs never existed; creatures never existed.

The Myth Equipment NASA stands with Hollywood and Disneyland as one of the three best producers of Babylonian publicity globally. NASA is nothing but a giant slush fund that steals money from the American people while creating propaganda.

However, while the general public is dimly conscious that both Hollywood and Disneyland are working totally in the dream, they are persuaded that NASA deals just with clinical reality. Reality? A big lie!

How did the designers behind the shrewd NASA deceptiveness know that they would be able to fool the world for so long? One factor was their success in obtaining humanity to believe, first, the spinning ball theory, and after that, the existence of giant reptiles called dinosaurs.

NASA is a SCAM and a significant cash slush fund to promote other criminal activities – in which the American people pay 100% in the form of taxes.

They also obtained the world to believe that two 'atomic bombs' had ruined the cities of Hiroshima as well as Nagasaki in August 1945, when in truth, these regrettable cities were harmed by intensive fire-bombing, much like seventy various other Japanese cities. The Atom bomb is a hoax.

The Original Dinosaur The word 'dinosaur' was derived from two Greek words meaning 'awful' and 'reptile.' Their creator provided this name, the English paleontologist Sir Richard Owen, in 1842.

Richard Owen is the inventor of the dinosaur fraud. Even a short assessment of the record of fossil searching and fossil 'repair' will certainly expose precisely how quickly it offered itself to fraudulence. FRAUDS!

What exactly is a fossil? It is commonly thought to be a bone fragment 'managed' in a casing of rock, yet this is a mistaken belief.

Therefore there is no DNA in a fossil-- despite the claims made by science fiction authors.

The very same inner circle that performed the dinosaur hoax-- British Luciferians, Freemasons, Unitarians, and deists, all of whom dislike Christianity and are figured out to damage it-- designed a host of various other lies to discredit the Book of Genesis.

The POPE today is a FRAUD – an Imposter. A Big Scam!

Pope Francis was secretly assassinated and replaced with an imposter. (Pope Francis is “bald.”) They also control the Pope using his security and the Swiss Guard. Pope Francis went rogue on the Khazarian Mafia. They replaced him, first with a hologram and then with a rubber mask-wearing imposter. So the Pope today is a big lie. A really bad doppel-ganger.

Take a look at this picture as “Pope” Francis’ hat flies off his head at Easter Sunday mass at the Vatican.

Did Columbus Really Discover America?

We all found out that Columbus cruised the ocean blue ... and afterward, American history gets very murky.

Though much occurred before Christopher Columbus' famous journey (such as Leif Ericsson's touchdown in North America five centuries prior), it remains an important event. Historians usually deem it the beginning of the Colonial Duration (1492-1763).

The epic trip was not exactly without its troubles.

Early in the early morning on Oct. 12, 1492, a sailor looked out to the horizon from the bow of Columbus' ship, the Pinta, and saw land. So finally, after 10 weeks mixed-up, from the port of Palos, Spain, Columbus and also his crew had arrived ... somewhere.

Early in the early morning on Oct. 12, 1492, a seafarer looked out to the horizon from the bow of Columbus' ship, the Pinta, and saw land. Finally, after 10 weeks at sea, from the port of Palos, Spain, Columbus and also his crew had shown up ... somewhere.

Columbus believed he would certainly discover the East Indies. The fact was, he remained in the Bahamas. He did a little more exploring and then went back to Spain, potentially taking syphilis.

By 1502, the Florentine merchant and traveler Amerigo Vespucci had found out that Columbus was wrong, and word of a New World had spread throughout Europe. America was later on named Vespucci.

As scientists currently acknowledge, neither man was the first to find the Americas. There were, obviously, the citizens already right here. There was Ericsson. And also there were others. Even the Chinese lay claim to sail to the New World initially.

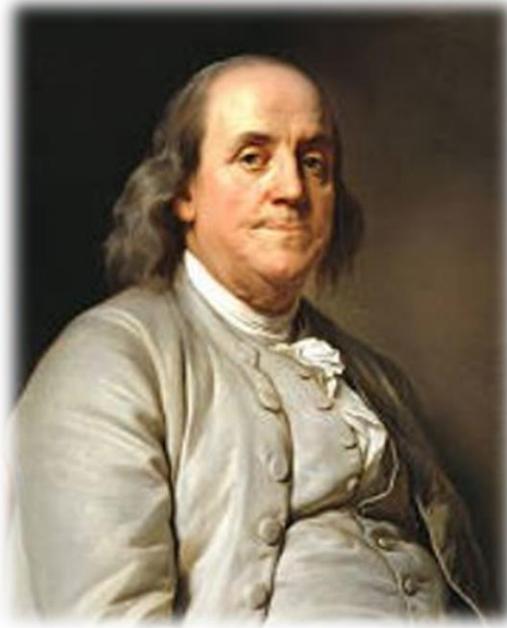

Columbus is credited with starting Spanish colonization before the more comprehensive European emigration of the New World. However, in his diary, he kept in mind that the locals "have to be good slaves and extremely smart, because I see they promptly duplicate what I tell them."

Therefore he confined them to help in his pursuit of gold and seasonings. Neither venture turned out. However, hundreds of locals died in succeeding trips, and Columbus hung a few of the inhabitants who resisted his authority.

His arrival "noted the beginning of one of the cruelest episodes in human history," as historian Kenneth C. Davis places it.

More than a century would pass before emigration got severe. The very first colony was founded at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607. The Pilgrims, founders of Plymouth, Massachusetts, did not arrive until 1620. Resource Benjamin Franklyn and his Kite/Key Electricity Hoax? Big Lie!

Except for George Washington's confession after chopping down the cherry tree, the most popular legend or hoax in American history is probably Benjamin Franklin flying a kite during a storm as an electrical experiment.

According to the story, Franklin flew his kite during a thunderstorm in the summer of 1752. Electricity from the clouds traveled down the kite's twine and threw a spark from a key that Franklin had attached to the string. Allegedly, the experiment proved that lightning and electricity are one.

This story is also told to demonstrate that Franklin's chief accomplishments came as a scientist or inventor. Franklin thought of like a Renaissance man — philosopher, printer, politician, diplomat, writer . . . almost anything you can think of. Historically, he is most famous for his expert diplomacy with the French in recruiting their help during the American Revolution. He was a major compromising force at the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention in 1787.

Electricity is way down there on his list of accomplishments.

Tom Tucker, an author who is mainly interested in the history of invention, has suspected for a long time that Franklin's kite experiment was a hoax — a myth geared to embarrass his French and English rivals. However, Tucker is not trying to downgrade Franklin's talent but rather to add a sly element that may have strengthened his diplomatic hand with the French.

Not only was he well-known for perpetrating hoaxes, but his deadpan sense of humor was very active. For example, in a letter in 1750, Franklin recommended standing beneath a metal pole during a thunderstorm to ascertain the connection between lightning and electricity.

"Before I leave this subject of lightning, I may mention some of the similarities between the effects and those of electricity. Lightning has often been known to strike people blind."

Franklin's astounding breadth and charm would have carried him anywhere he wanted to go, whether or not the kite story was a hoax.

Remember that Franklin was also a Satanist and held hundreds of secret satanic rituals.

Did Hitler Murder 6,000,000 Jews?

The Khazarian mafia assisted Hitler in his agenda – however, when Hitler decided to make the German people great again, the Khazarians turned against Hitler and eventually stole everything he owned.

Mythologists affirm that 120,000 people/month could be cremated at Auschwitz. However, professional detectives invite you to do the mathematics: Presume that each cadaver weighs 125 extra pounds; crematoria can dispose of 150 lbs./ human resources. Consequently, you would need 139 ovens working 24/7 to cremate 120,000 people/mo.

Jews and other people were sent to German Detention Centers by train. The railroads were built with American Money.– one of which was named Henry Ford and Grandpa Bush. The Khazarians were fake Jews. They are not Jews by blood or by religion. They hate Jews but use them to their benefit. The Khazarians received a lot of sympathy for using their Jewish lies, allowing Israel to develop and prosper. Khazarians are Zionist – meaning they believe in the development of Israel. One day, they will murder all the Jews.

There were just 46 stoves or “bread ovens” at Auschwitz, and also, the crematoria could not and did not run 24/7. "it takes 30 kgs of coal to cremate one body-- it would certainly take many trainloads of coal to cremate 120,000 corpses. "Airborne reconnaissance photos of Auschwitz do disappoint massive coke heaps."

The German soldiers shaved the heads of all the incoming people because of a dangerous Typhus outbreak. Typhus went on to kill many people. In addition, the Americans cut off the supply lines to all the detention centers causing many people to starve to death. Many German guards also starved to death.

In contrast to destructive, lying" witnesses" and confessors, the same photos show no smoke and fire-belching from malfunctioning crematoria chimneys or huge aerodynamically ineffective smoldering cremation pits, where crackling human fat was "scooped up in containers." NOVA mythologists-- defying laws of thermodynamics-- state only 3.5 kg of coke is needed to cremate one remain. (Lard, i.e., human fat = 8.4 kilo-calories/kg; coke has 3000 kcal/kg.).

Today, no chronicler claims mass gassings occurred in Germany. (The affirmed "extermination camp" were in Poland, and the Communists did not launch their contemporary movies of the liberation of the camps in Poland; hence, no global investigation of the alleged atrocities like the Nazis did at Kalyan Forest).

Lots of people in the camps passed away from typhus. Lice spread typhus. Therefore the steam and Zyklon B concentration camp for fumigating garments and the factor for cutting the women's hair upon getting in a camp. At Auschwitz, with an inmate population of 60-80,000, as many as 300 people per day passed away during a typhus epidemic, thus the crematoria. (Throughout World War One - numerous individuals passed away of typhus in the Soviet Union.).

The survivors are righteously mad and malicious towards the Nazis for uprooting them from their residences, seizing their residential or commercial property, and concentrating them in lousy camps. Consequently, they lie or overemphasize (so it will never occur again) and receive $ympathy for Israel.

Hitler Scam

Hitler was a secret Rothschild. (Khazarian). Khazarians are “Luciferian” – satan worshipping psychopaths. They hate God. They hate Christians, and they hate Jews. Khazarians enjoy pedophilia (sex with children) and child sacrifice during satanic rituals.

Hitler was bisexual but leaned more towards homosexuality. Below is a picture of Hitler and his Jewish Lover.

Hitler had a hidden policy. Any person above the rank of Sergeant must be homosexual. Hitler was into the occult and a vegetarian. Also, Hitler had a micro-penis (tiny). 'Hitler himself never condemned homosexuality, but he allowed the persecution of homosexuals to disguise his true colors.'

Many homosexuals was sent to detention centers – a pink triangle was sewn on their clothes. I assume it was a symbol to illustrate to others why they are there.

The detention centers were filled with Christians, Jews, Homosexuals, and criminals. Bayer drug company set up large warehouses next to detention centers – the people inside detention centers became employees and were paid. Bayer now owns “Monsanto” – one of the largest companies in the USA are Nazis!

Transgender Scam!

The Khazarians enjoy anything inverted or perverted. In other words, men who look like women and women who look like men. They know God hates inversion.

The Khazarians breed many children to be transgender. They want to dishonor “God” anytime they can. So, placing transgender people in influential and powerful positions fits their agenda. Transgender CEOs, some Military generals, presidents, president wives, movie star “idols.” Plus others. Included in this chapter are a few transgender people in high financial careers.

Below are headshots and names of those inserted into specific corporate settings for a purpose. These are MEN who are transgender and bent on being a WOMAN. As transgender people age, their maleness is more obvious.

All of these people are MEN. Most of these people are Taiwanese escorts or prostitutes. They are utilized by the “Elite” of the world.

Can you see the male features? The Khazarians have been running this scam for many decades.

Several presidents have introduced their 1st ladies to the public – however, many were transgender people.

Obama and Michelle (Michael) are one example. Unfortunately, the Khazarians are trying their best to NORMALIZE transgenderism in society, our schools, and our churches. Only one reason; they hate God!

Above are Transgender High Ranking Military Representing the United States of America.

Several presidents have introduced their 1st ladies to the public – however, many were transgender people. Obama and Michelle (Michael) are one example. But unfortunately, the Khazarians are trying their best to NORMALIZE transgenderism in society, our schools, and our churches. Only one reason; they hate God!

Doppler-Ganger Scam

Khazarian Mafia has utilized clones, doppelgangers, and masks for many years. The various uses are apparent. They can murder someone or, let's say, the person dies – they simply bring in someone who appears to be the dead person to serve their needs and wants in a political situation. It happens more now than ever!

A doppelganger is a German word that translates to "double walker" or "double goer." A doppelganger isn't someone who just resembles you but is an exact double, right down to the way you walk, act, talk, and dress.

Realistic mask of Donald Trump. Amazing!

Many reports of doppelgangers are probably cases of mistaken identity. Still, such an explanation becomes harder to accept when they are seen by best friends, siblings, and parents who know the real person intimately.

Moreover, it seems hard to believe that they would be fooled by another person who simply resembles the original.

Picture of rubber masks. Trump, Putin, and Kim Jong-un

They are still perfecting clones – not all clones will perform to their future capabilities. Rubber masks appear to be used more than any other type of disguise.

It has been said that Biden, Putin, Trump, and others are all dead. Instead, you're actually witnessing realistic rubber masks on people. The CIA has fooled millions of people with their realistic rubber masks over the years.

Abortion Scam!

The abortion Scam is another Khazarian trick. The Khazarian satanic cult has convinced millions of women that abortion is good. After all, it's her body, and she has the perfect right to kill her unborn child. The Khazarian Mafia has used clever brainwashing techniques to convince some women that murdering her unborn child is good.

The satanic Khazarians promote homosexuality, transgenderism, and abortions because it depopulates earth, all by FREE Will. The Khazarians call their minions “democrats” as useful idiots. Transgenders who remove their penis to look like a woman – the results are less men who will never reproduce.

Democrats are exterminating themselves – and doing it with FREE WILL.

Don't forget Khazarians hate God, especially God's children. Therefore, killing God's children is scarification to Satan. Khazarians believe they receive power from Satan each time a mother murders her child.

Here is the best part. Satan gives power to those who use free will to do evil. For example, a potential mother has free will and can choose to allow her child to live or die. Satan loves it!

The Khazarians love it when a woman chooses to murder her child. Even if the supreme court strikes down roe vs. wade, a woman can still murder her child if she chooses. There are Democrat-controlled states that allow mothers to kill their unborn child.

Remember, it's a SCAM. If you're a pro-abortion woman, you do not have to be fooled anymore. The Khazarians are using women to murder their unborn children.

The Nuclear Bomb Scam on Hiroshima?

Atom bombs do not work. Period.

The original paper launch was that Nagasaki and Hiroshima were firebombed like Tokyo, and also, it was just later on that the story of the A-bomb appeared. All brick buildings were left standing, including the Financial institution of Japan, which is still used today. No residue "radiation."

No Atom bombs have ever before been utilized, even during the Vietnam war, where every other despicable tool was used, consisting of chemicals. The United States shed this war.

No oppressor or crazy leader has ever before used nuclear weapons. So all images and movies of atomic explosions are quickly proven to be fake mileswmthis.com/trinity ...

Different scientists have revealed the actual mechanics of an A-bomb are not workable
heiwaco.tripod.com/bomb.h ...

AFTER WWII, the USA, Russia, and the UK created the Atomic bomb hoax. Numerous other countries have been let in on the rip-off. The concept is to keep the masses in continuous fear. Japan was provided with a large settlement to keep the secret.

Not one single nuclear weapon, big or little, has ever been utilized.

Do Nuclear Bombs Exist?

- - Is there any type of evidence that a thermonuclear tool blew up over Hiroshima in 1945?

No, definitely none. According to leading chroniclers and physicists, the thermonuclear bomb was not created until years after the meant ignition over Japanese territory.

- - Is there any evidence that a uranium-based "atom bomb" was ever dropped onto Nagasaki, Japan?

Absolutely not. While many historians and journalists made this insurance claim in the late 40s and early 50s, every person currently agrees that no such bomb ever before took off over Nagasaki. Yet there are some who still stubbornly cling to this supposed "reality."

- - What are the products required to make an "atom bomb?".
Uranium-238 as well as plutonium-239.

- - Aren't these materials radioactive?

Very so. Any person who tries to use these products jeopardizes their life. No radiation in Hiroshima or Nagasaki.

- - Is it most likely that nuclear scientists in the 40's would be taking care of uranium and plutonium?

This would be extremely unlikely. Very few individuals felt so intimidated by the Japanese to be happy to risk their lives on an academic opportunity of a superbomb that might finish a far-away battle a little quicker.

Aren't there witnesses to the atomic bomb in Hiroshima?

No witnesses.

- According to traditional chroniclers, was the uranium bomb checked prior to apparently being dropped over Hiroshima?

There was no testing of a uranium bomb in Alamogordo or anywhere else prior to Hiroshima.

- Why was Hiroshima "targeted" and also not Tokyo?

Perhaps due to the fact that nobody had become aware of Hiroshima, and also no one understood anyone from there. It would certainly be even harder to declare that Tokyo was bombed than Hiroshima and also Nagasaki. As a matter of fact, a lot of globe maps from prior to "World War Two" do not even state these cities in all.

- Just how does Japan gain from the "atom bomb" story?

As a direct result of the "battle," Japan has actually received billions of dollars of well worth of US help for its defense. Japan has no protection budget, so it can pour resources via MITI right into defeating the US financially, all while using the emotions of anti-"nuke" lobbyists regarding the "scariest" of nuclear weapons.

- Wow, I never thought about that. So exactly how else do the Japanese take advantage of this fake story?

The Japanese currently own significant Hollywood workshops, from which several war motion pictures are created. They play upon our sympathy for the meant "atom bomb" to blind us to the truth that this foreign nation has taken control of our semiconductor industry, several California financial institutions, and almost the whole state of Hawaii.

The number of people intended to have passed away in the surges?

It is difficult to claim. Many sources say 60,000 in Hiroshima; others say 140,000. No attempt has been made to remedy the different numbers. If "they" will lie about 911, the JFK assassination, and Cancer Cures, why wouldn't "they" LIE about Nuclear Bombs?

The Great Moon Landing Scam!

How ridiculous! NASA wants us to believe that pile of trash went to the moon? How absurd!

A journalist asked a leading NASA scientist: “So, why hasn’t NASA been back to the moon in over 50 years? Answer: “We lost all the technology we had back then.” (Can you believe that horseshit!)

The truth is: No human being has ever left the planet.

NASA lost the tapes and the technology, and it would be too painful to reconstruct it. Do you believe this?

1. There aren't any stars in the background.

One information unbelievers usually point to is the background of a number of the NASA images. In photos of the moon's landscapes, there aren't any kind of stars in the sky-- it just looks like a big, black void of area. Given that the moon has no atmosphere, shouldn't there be numerous stars dotting the history of these pictures? If the touchdowns were faked on a workshop phase, did the digital photographers make a massive blunder and simply neglect to "turn on" the celebrities?

Regrettably, for conspiracy theory philosophers, the nature of digital photography overrules their argument. The light from the sunlight hitting the moon's surface area is also bright for any electronic camera to record something distant-- it would wash out any light originating from distant stars overhead. So even if you depended on the moon's surface area on your own, you would certainly need to obstruct the landscape from your vision to see any noteworthy points of light.

This occurs because stars are more challenging to see in big cities than in wide-open areas-- there's a great deal more light jumping around from street lights in the town, so the celebrities are hidden from sight. So your best option to see the countless numbers of celebrities preclude would be to take a trip to the moon's dark side.

2. The "C" rock

One of the most famous pictures shows a stray moon rock with the letter "C" composed or stamped on it. This releases the perception that most of the larger moon rocks seen in photos from the moon touchdown are merely props-- an established developer might have classified this roaming moon rock with a letter and unintentionally left it handed over for the camera to see.

Scientists and representatives from NASA assert the "C" is just a photo glitch-- a stray hair that found its means into the establishing process-- or a hoax by itself. There's an opportunity for somebody to take the original, unblemished image and add the "C" later.

3. Different darkness lengths

Some individuals mention that a few of the darkness emitted by the astronauts are various in length, even though they may be standing near each other. This could recommend that a malfunctioning illumination system was set up on a stage somewhere, and NASA overlooked any variances.

Scientists suggest that the pictures were handled in harsh, sloping landscapes, which are bound to produce all kinds of crazy dark sizes despite where you stand. For example, if you take a photo on a snow-covered hillside, the same type of impact will likely occur.

4. The American flags show up to "flap" in the wind.

A mild breeze appears to live up the material in video footage of the astronauts hoisting up American flags and growing them on the ground. The moon, nonetheless, should not have such types of weather condition-- there isn't an ambiance on the moon, so there isn't any air to blow about and ruffle the flags. Was the flag scene shot in a drafty workshop or exterior?

If it were a hoax, where the filmmakers just as well careless to renovate the shot?

The flag was built specifically for the moon's surface. A tight wire goes through the textile along its top, allowing it to stand erect like a windswept flag. Without the cord, the flag would droop like any other flag hanging in the room. The astronauts simply trigger the waving themselves by struggling to grow the flagpole right into the ground and bumping it around.

A 16mm movie structure of astronaut John Youthful driving around the moon's surface area. Did NASA decrease video of the moon touchdowns to mimic weightlessness?

5. Slow-motion film and also wires

Some have pointed out the opportunity that in order to produce the impact of weak gravity on the moon, the astronauts were brought by thin cables and also shot jumping around. NASA, after that reduced the movie, according to the conspiracy theory theorists, to make it look like they were floating via the air. Unbelievers have actually gone far enough to create their own circuitry systems, movie themselves, and reduce the video to contrast it to NASA's video.

Scientists refute this case because of the dust kicked around by the astronauts as they jump around the moon's surface area. If NASA recorded the video clip on Earth, the dirt would collect right into clouds as a result of air in the atmosphere. Instead, the soil is kicked up and falls right back to the ground without collecting or floating around. NASA would certainly have had to construct an entire workshop and suck every one of the air out to produce a vacuum, which would be extremely hard by today's requirements.

So are these points enough to verify that the moon landings were fakes? As well as on Sept. 3, 2006, the European Area Firm's (ESA) SMART-1 probe purposefully crash-landed externally on the moon. Before it touched down, it took images and data from the moon's landscape, including that of previous moon touchdowns. Unfortunately, the ESA hasn't released any images or video clips, yet unbelievers and believers are waiting to see any concrete proof of past explorations. - NASA has strangely lost all tapes of the moon touchdown.

- NASA has strangely lost all the technology of the moon touchdown project.
- NASA has strangely lost all the moon rocks.
- NASA has mysteriously shed the lunar room components.
- NASA astronauts state they took a picture of the earth through a window of the area craft-- however, Artist confesses that he developed the graphics of the planet. The smoking gun? Film of Aldrin growing a waving American flag on the moon, which critics state shows that he was not in space. The flag's motion, they state, plainly reveals the presence of wind, which is difficult in a vacuum cleaner.

There has NEVER been any concrete evidence that man has stepped on the moon or even left our earth.

Many people believe NASA is nothing but a giant slush fund that robs the American people of their hard-earned money.

NASA Scam

BIG LIE! The year 1986 was shaping up to be the most ambitious for NASA's Space Shuttle Program. The agency's plans called for up to 15 missions, including the first flight from the West Coast launch site at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. Wow, aren't you glad the American people pour billions of dollars in tax money into NASA??

NASA must show to the public they are doing something because of all the billions of dollars NASA steals every year. So, once in awhile, they illustrate a secret project they've been working on – however, it is mostly a big SCAM.

Other fake missions included the launch of two planetary spacecraft with very tight launch windows, an astronomy mission to study Halley's Comet, and the launch of the Hubble Space Telescope.

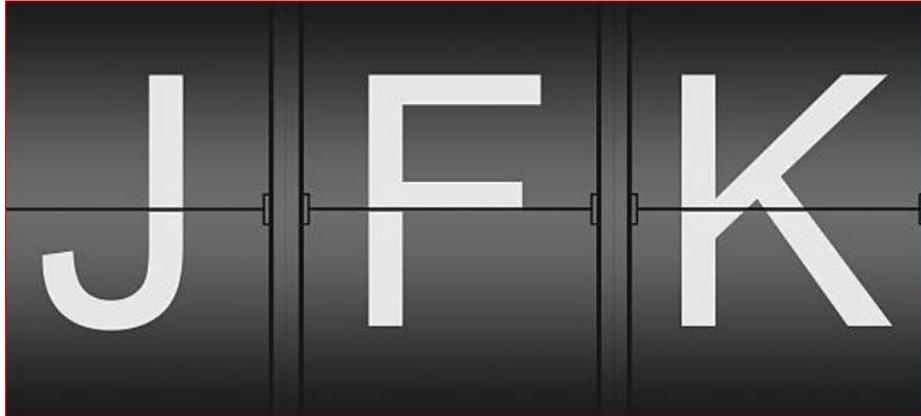

The first mission of 1986, STS-61C, delayed from December 1985, flew between Jan. 12 and 18. The next flight, designated STS-51L, marked the 25th in the program and the 10th for space shuttle Challenger.

During the six-day mission, the seven-member crew was to deploy a large communications satellite, deploy and retrieve an astronomy payload to study Halley's Comet. The first teacher in space would conduct lessons for schoolchildren from orbit.

Fact: Nobody was on the craft that exploded. It was a SCAM. NASA pretended that all the astronauts or employees were killed. All the men were 33-degree Freemasons. They were given full bank accounts of cash plus new identities. All of the astronauts went on to live full lives in various careers.

The JFK Assassination Files – Lies and Hoaxes

The Newly Released JFK Files Lend Credence Lies and Cover-Ups. A Lone gunman named Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President JFK. ANOTHER BIG LIE!

Over 3,800 CIA and FBI papers associated with the assassination of Head of state John F. Kennedy were launched to the public.

President John F. Kennedy and Jacqueline drove in an open car motorcade quickly before the president was executed in Dallas, Texas, on November 22nd, 1963.

A couple of events in American history have been the topic of as much intrigue as the murder of Head of state John F. Kennedy. That morbid attraction has stemmed not only from what is understood by the public but-- a lot more centrally-- what isn't. The long-murky record around the occasion has made it productive ground for conspiracy theories as well as a historiographic dispute, partially since some knowledge company records surrounding the murder have continued to be classified. Classified? What do they fear the public knowing?

Note: eight professional assassins killed JFK. The man hiding in the drainage area (level with the street) was the assassin who gave the final shot that killed the president. Within 30 days of the event – all eight killers were murdered. “Dead Men Do Not Talk.”

The National Archives and Records Management recently expanded the available public record of the murder with a shock launch of 3,810 previously identified or redacted documents from the Central Intelligence Firm and Federal Bureau of Examination about the assassination. The paper dump should assist clear the secret, at the very least a little.

With fits as well as begins again decades, the schedule of these knowledge agency documents to chroniclers and the American public has inched ever before closer to openness. In 1964, a commission lead by then-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Earl Warren (corrupt) released a record on the murder, which wrapped up that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone.

The Warren record included a couple of thousand web pages of supporting papers. However, several million web pages of records pertaining to the assassination were purchased and secured for 75 years.

Who Really Assassinated Robert Kennedy?

Many Lies surround the cover-up of the The assassination of Robert F. Kennedy!

According to this concept, there is an eyewitness statement of a second shooter. According to Dr. Marcus McBroom, a guy was at the scene with a gun partially concealed in his hand; this man was ranging from the cupboard.

Evan Freed, a digital photographer, promised a sworn statement in 1992 that he had observed an additional gunman, not Sirhan, fire his weapon at the legislator from behind. Sirhan was walking in front of Kennedy and no greater than a few feet far from the Kennedy.

Thomas Noguchi, makes for an interesting analysis. He composed that Kennedy had been shot three times from behind at a steep upward angle. The powder burns recommend that the legislator be fired from no more significant than a few inches.

Sirhan never got that close. The apparent murder weapon was an Iverson.22 revolver consisted of 8 bullets. 2 of the bullets were eliminated from Kennedy (another one had exited his upper body), and five even more from other people. Another bullet had grazed RFK and hit the ceiling yet was never recovered.

According to the LAPD, one of the bullets backfired below the ceiling and had struck some targets, which means all eight bullets in the gun were made up. Nonetheless, additional bullet openings in the doorframe where the Kennedy event had gotten in the pantry. According to the author, Vincent Bugliosi, two law enforcement agents admitted seeing an extra bullet lodged in the wood of a door framework. Martin Patrusky, a waitress at the hotel, asserted that the police officers informed him they dug two bullets out of the facility divider.

Digital photographers, and a woodworker who aided the cops by removing the door frame for proof, also declare to have either seen or been outlined bullets being recuperated.

A pair of forensic sound professionals validated that more than eight gunfires were terminated (13, as a matter of fact) at the scene. However, various other acoustic specialists dispute these searchings for. If more than eight shots were discharged, and also Sirhan did not get the chance to reload, existed a 2nd shooter?

The Mysterious Female in the Polka Dot Outfit Has Actually Never Been Found

After his arrest, Sirhan claims he does not bear in mind consulting with anybody prior to the murder. Nonetheless, several witnesses assert he was with a woman putting on a polka dot dress in a number of locations within the hotel, consisting of in the cupboard.

In addition to an additional guy, this mystery lady was discovered escaping from the kitchen after the capturing.

Sandy Serrano, an RFK campaign employee, having a break on a porch at the murder, claims she saw the polka dot dress woman from the resort with a male friend; she was apparently screaming, "We shot him. We shot him."

It is very easy to disregard this story since a mysterious, unknown person always seems to be involved in assassinations. Nonetheless, an amazing variety of individuals saw the same girl acting strangely and among Sirhan. Paul Sharaga, an LAPD police officer, and an elderly couple that remained in the car park behind the Ambassador Hotel worked together Serrano's story.

Almost every witness to the polka dot outfit lady offered a comparable summary which is uncommon in itself. They stated she put on a white gown with black or blue polka-dots, was well-built, and had a misaligned nose and unclean blond hair.

After obtaining summaries from dozens of witnesses, the LAPD murder investigation group, called Unique Unit Senator (SUS), spent a great deal of time and resources attempting to track down the enigma lady as well as her male pal. They seriously checked out information movie archives to attempt as well as discover photographic proof of this woman's presence, however fruitless. The problem is, there were a number of ladies in the hotel wearing a polka-dot dresses although there was no proof to connect any of them to the assassin.

Some individuals attempt to latch on to the women in the polka-dot outfit concept as 'proof' of a conspiracy theory, however they stop working to consider the chaos of the scene. The United States Army has reported the error of eyewitness statement in the midst of a battle. Consequently, it is secure to presume that those who witnessed the mystery female are unstable because the murder took place in a jumpacked space, as well as in the instant results of the capturing, there was mass panic.

Serrano and one more eyewitness, Vincent DiPierro, asserted they saw the woman in the polka-dot outfit screaming "We fired him." Nevertheless, when police officers revealed multiple outfits with varying colors, sleeves, and polka dots, they provided various descriptions of the outfit they saw. DiPierro later picked out Kennedy project worker, Valerie Schulte, as the lady he saw.

Cathy Fulmer, who also used a polka-dot gown, specified that she had a conversation with a complete stranger she later on identified as Sirhan. Consequently, we must place the polka-dot concept to rest despite the fact that there is a recommendation that the SUS was far from thorough and also transparent in the examination.

The SUS Was Slammed For its Investigation

The LAPD set up an Unique System Senator (SUS) group to handle the examination. However, its strategies and also total conduct have actually been brought into question by some.

A prime example of 'bully-boy' tactics originated from SUS member Enrique Hernandez when he spoke with Sandy Serrano. The meeting quickly became an investigation as Hernandez remained to tell Serrano that she really did not see anybody. Hernandez likewise said: "Do not pity his fatality by maintaining this thing up [...] I wish to know why you did what you did."

Ultimately, Serrano complied and retracted her tale. Soon, the reality that Serrano had withdrawn her story was used to reject various other witnesses at the scene. As a variety of these eyewitnesses had comparable stories to one another, it ended up being simple to call into question virtually every witness statement. Those who have viewed records of the SUS' meetings with witnesses explain that the group used a pattern of isolation and scare tactics to force each individual to backtrack.

A much more severe allegation versus the SUS is that it failed to include details that witnesses had offered. Evan Freed is just one of those that declare that a few of the details they pointed out were omitted from the record. Likewise, the SUS deliberately lost, hid, and even destroyed key evidence.

Paul Sharaga wrote a memo that included details of his interaction with the senior pair who allegedly saw the lady in the polka-dot dress taking off the scene. It disappeared from evidence, yet Sharaga had actually retained the initial mimeograph.

Among one of the most serious cases of transgression borders the door frame proof. Several witnesses declare to have actually seen bullet openings in the frames, however the LAPD allegedly ruined the structures after the trial. Even more tremendously, the frames were never ever also entered into proof at the trial.

Overall, the SUS' investigation carried on without scandal, but conspiracy theory theorists seem to believe the LAPD was associated with a cover-up.

Sirhan's Lead Trial Attorney Was Charged of Ineptitude

Cooper was the lead defense attorney in the murder trial as well as was accused of 'throwing' the instance by Sirhan's subsequent defense teams. One obvious reason for Cooper's bad performance was the fact he was endangered.

At the time, there was a pending charge versus Cooper for the belongings of swiped transcripts of grand jury process in an additional instance; the Beverly Hills Friar's Club card unfaithful instance.

There was an opportunity for Cooper facing jail time, but instead, he was fined the paltry sum of $1,000. Did he intentionally screw up the Sirhan protection in exchange for a tolerant sentence?

Sirhan appeared to think so. When he was on Fatality Row, the assassin wrote a letter to Cooper that included the following: "Do not ever before neglect, you dirty child of a bitch that cost me my life." While indicating for Sirhan in 1982, Cooper criticized mental illness for Sirhan's rage at the time.

It is affirmed that Johnny Roselli, a defendant in the Friars Club situation, planted the grand court papers on Cooper's work desk. Roselli was obviously recruited by the CIA to eliminate Fidel Castro however was allegedly 'transformed' by the Cuban leader that asked him to murder JFK.

It appears as if Sirhan's protection team did not obtain all the proof at the test. Omissions consisted of the postmortem examination record, which was only shared with the defense after it had actually stated Sirhan's shame.

Sirhan acted bizarrely at the trial as well as didn't help himself or his protection group. He made use of the spotlight to concentrate on expressing his anti-Semitic sights and forwarding the Arab reason.

His later defense teams have actually attempted to obtain him released on parole. They point out various noninclusions of proof and new discoveries as their basis for Sirhan's innocence.

Throughout his 2011 appeal, Sirhan's lawyers argued that a bullet had actually been changed in evidence at the test.

William Pepper was among the attorneys, as well as he stated that the prosecution at the test had placed made evidence into the court. Pepper said he was confident of reversing the decision but parole was denied and over six years on, Sirhan continues to be behind bars where he will surely pass away.

The CIA Has Been Accused of the Murder

What's a conspiracy concept without the alleged involvement of the CIA? The Central Knowledge Company has been implicated in almost every bad deed to have happened on American dirt considering its structure and countless criminal activities abroad! It is the prime suspect in the JFK murder for many conspiracy philosophers, so it makes sense that the CIA would also want to wipe Bobby out, right?

The documentary RFK Has to Die was the initial such program on the assassination, given that The Second Weapon some 25 years previously. O'Sullivan likewise created Who Killed Bobby? The Unsolved Murder of Robert F. Kennedy was published on the 40th wedding anniversary of the assassination. During this write-up, O'Sullivan explained several of my formerly stated concerns throughout his investigation. As an example, he is determined that the autopsy report is proof of Sirhan's innocence.

David Sanchez Morales, a legend in the world of CIA covert procedures, was evidently involved in both Kennedy assassinations. O'Sullivan wrote that throughout a late-night drinking session with good friends in 1973, the subject of both murders came up.

Morales allegedly said: "I was in Dallas when we obtained the son of a bitch and I was in Los Angeles when we got the little bastard." O'Sullivan had an image of Morales from 1959, which he utilized for the functions of comparison.

The son of RFK, Robert Kennedy, believes Sirhan is innocent and should be released from prison. Unfortunately, Sirhan has been sitting in prison all these years.

He claims that he can see the CIA male standing at the back of the ballroom between the completion of the senator's speech and also the shooting in 1968. The video footage he saw was relatively a gold mine of information.

With the aid of retired United States Military Captain Bradley Ayers, O'Sullivan was able to identify Morales and Gordon Campbell, one more CIA operative in the video clip. He additionally named a 3rd agent associated with the murder, a guy called George Joannides.

Federal Reserve Scam?

The Federal Reserve Bank is NOT any more federal than “Federal Express”. The bank consists of 12 wealthy foreign bankers. The Khazarians used the word Federal in the name of the bank in order to fool and deceive the American People. They obviously wanted the people to “think” it was part of the US government.

The Federal Reserve is a closed corporation with stockholders. They print the currency for the USA. The Federal Reserve is a very corrupt organization that has masterminded the assassination of three US presidents.

The FED is corrupt because it is unconstitutional. The people, do not know how much money is borrowed – however, the people must pay it back plus interest. This is not ethical and it is criminal. This is called SLAVERY.

The Federal Reserve Bank pockets billions of dollars from “thin” air. It is called Fiat system. It is simply numbers on a computer. They charge the American people interest on money loaned to Congress. Naturally, Congress spends and also steals large portions of the money for themselves.

The Federal Reserve Bank started in 1913 and was able to pass into law with the use of a very corrupt and criminal democrat president named Woodrow Wilson. The Feds have been in power for over 100 years.

The Federal Reserve Bank sits on sovereign land (legally not US soil). Therefore, Congress cannot ever audit the Feds, and nobody is permitted on their property without permission.

The IRS is NOT a Government Agency.

IRS is riddled with LIES! The IRS is a total Scam.

The IRS is incorporated in Puerto Rico. They are a collection agency for the corrupt Federal Reserve Bank. They use mafia intimidation tactics to steal money from the American people. They create fear. The American people are the collateral for the money loaned to Congress. The IRS is not affiliated with the US government.

Income? There is no definition concerning income. The IRS does not define income. Income taxes are unconstitutional. The IRS is another criminal and corrupt organization. They never have the best interests of the American people – they are thieves. The IRS is hired to be the Mafia collection service for the Feds.

Should you pay the IRS? If you think your tax dollars are funding a corrupt government, like Congress, the corrupt FBI and the corrupt CIA, and dozens of other scams, then NO, do not pay them a nickel! Maybe someday, the American people will know they have been SCAMMED! According to the IRS and their documents – the only people who owe income taxes are federal employees in the District of Columbia. (Washing D.C.)

The American people allow the IRS to steal from them because they do not know their constitutional rights. But, unfortunately, these rights are not taught in school. I wonder why? The answer is obvious.

Open Border Scam

This is not an open border policy – it's called an INVASION.

A country without borders is not a country. No other country in the world has open borders. Would you allow undocumented criminals walk into your home without proper IDs and verification? Your country is no different. These people will be walking on YOUR streets. Any person is are than welcome to follow the legal process to become American citizens.

Democrats want open borders to further their goal of their New World Order agenda. Some people think the Dems will move the illegals to areas where they need extra votes.

Whatever the reason is, it is hideous to allow just anyone to walk into our country. There are thousands of criminals, child sex traffickers, and drugs (mules) carrying millions of dollars in illegal drugs. The illegal drug cartels are getting super-wealthy because of the open border policy of the democrats.

Those responsible for this open border issue should be arrested for treason.

Is Curing Patients Bad for Business?

Drug firms are establishing brand-new medications in just 2 therapeutic areas nowadays-- cancer cells and rare conditions. Why? These are the only healing areas where exorbitant pricing is tolerated by payers.

Exactly how excessively high are we speaking about? Many new drugs for cancer cells as well as uncommon conditions are being valued above $400,000 a year per client. Some medications are being priced at $1 million per treatment. And rates continue to skyrocket.

Who benefits from this pricing method? You may think the patients with cancer or unusual conditions will probably suffer. Yet that isn't real. To cover these excessively high costs for also a small number of people, payers lower their expenditures in other therapeutic areas, as well as these cuts impact numerous people.

For example, instead of accepting pay for the best therapy for diabetes for $1,500, payers accept the use of a shoddy treatment for $75. Physicians are bad at challenging payers, so most individuals will get the low-grade therapy.

So the patients who shed one of the most are typically those that do not have cancer cells or rare diseases. In fact, almost everyone else loses when a business costs a novel drug at extreme degrees.

Last week, points deviated for the worse. According to a post by Tae Kim on CNBC, Goldman Sachs provided a report (by Salvesen Richter) that recommended that medicine programmers might wish to hesitate about making medicines that were too efficient. Richter's record, qualified "The Genome Transformation," was released on April 10 as well as says:

" The prospective to supply 'one-shot cures' is one of the most attractive aspects of genetics therapy, genetically-engineered cell therapy, and gene editing and enhancing. However, such therapies use an extremely different expectation regarding reoccurring profits versus chronic treatments ... While this proposition brings remarkable value for patients and society, it might represent an obstacle for genome medicine designers looking for continual cash flow."

The translation: if you create a new medicine that treats people rapidly, individuals will not need to take the medication on a recurring basis, which restricts the quantity of cash a business can make.

The expert asks: "Is curing individuals a lasting organization version?" The "issue" seems particularly great if the condition concerned is infectious. The Goldman Sachs report cites the example of Gilead Sciences (ticker icon GILD), which gained approval for its unique hepatitis C therapy Sovaldi in 2013, complied with by Harvoni less than a year later on.

Their intro was a site event-- for two reasons. First, they gave a near-certain treatment for liver disease C in 12 weeks. Great! Second, they were among the very first of a series of medicines to be priced at expensive levels.

The envisioned reaction from financiers: That is excellent. However your medicine is as well reliable. You will not be able to produce lasting cash flow with that kind of organization strategy.

The obvious tip: Could you possibly make the medicine a little bit less efficient, to ensure that individuals would certainly require to continue to take it on a recurring basis, so you would certainly have the ability to produce more cash? The firm says no.

The pictured reaction: Well, if you demand making a medicine that remedies with one dosage, we would certainly suggest charging a king's ransom for it. Early this year, Glow Therapies presented its brand-new medication (Luxturna) for an unusual form of blindness. It promises a treatment with a solitary dose. The cost is $425,000 per eye. That suggests $850,000 for a remedy.

And it gets worse.

In 2012, a business called uniQure N.V. marketed Glybera (tiparvovec) for the therapy of lipoprotein lipase deficiency at a rate of $1.6 million per therapy. After one person in the whole world was dealt with, no one appeared thrilled about suggesting the overpriced medicine. The company did not renew its advertising and marketing permit.

What do these examples teach us? We have actually not reached the limits of scientific advancement. However, we have actually gotten to the limits of sound judgment and common modesty.

When one of the most important financial investment banking businesses worldwide questions whether it is an excellent suggestion to sustain firms that want to develop treatments, we have reached all-time low.

What is following for healthcare? We always understood that prolonging life was pricey. Now it seems that treating people isn't successful sufficient. Wish to make money? Develop medications that cure nothing, however yet promote long-term use and reliance and reduce life. Bankers and payers will certainly like it.

Oops! I forgot. We have those drugs already. They're called narcotics.

Just how Huge Pharma develops conditions, after that offers humans their solutions called medicines. It's big business!

Laurie Powell.

When pharmaceutical firms produce a brand-new medication, they always seek substances that deal with lucrative disorders, particularly if they have the capacity for blockbuster status. Patent life is 20 years after the medication has actually been identified as viable in medical tests-- this suggests that nobody else can make or offer the medicine throughout that time.

For this reason, pharmaceutical business prep the marketplace for many years prior for an effective launch with optimal influence and earnings.

By the time a medicine launches, doctors prepare to write prescriptions for that drug, and patients are keyed to ask their doctors for it. Since it's a name brand name drug, the rate is high, as well as pharma will want to maintain that cost factor by securing and extending their license exclusivity as long as feasible.

Pharma shields their patents in a variety of methods. One alternative is to bargain with common medicine makers, asking them not to launch their very own variations for a collection quantity of time and money. An additional means is to extend a patent by finding a new indicator for it, thus buying it one more lifecycle as a brand medicine that costs full costs price. In order to locate this new sign, pharmaceutical business need to get imaginative.

A Cure for type 2 diabetes – the BIG Lie Type Diabetes Can Be Cured!

If you google "diabetes cure," you are directed to websites like WebMD as well as the Mayo Facility, where you locate information on diet regimen, workout, medication, and insulin therapy, however, nothing about the remedy.

This absence of details may relate to the truth that Americans invest $322 billion a year to deal with diabetes mellitus, $60 billion a year on weight-loss programs, as well as $124 billion a year on junk food.

This is about 3% of the US economic situation! Because diabetic issues sustain many individuals' incomes and its main reason, obesity, the viral result of people getting cured and informing others is significantly lessened.

Due to this reasonable stifling of the message, if you are like my Facebook pal and have already experienced the type 2 diabetes remedy on your own-- there are hundreds of you out there-- it is important for you to share your success stories as everywhere as feasible. You can merely share this post!

Currently, here is the remedy. Simply follow these three simple rules. If you are taking insulin or other medications, you have to coordinate this with your physician, as does will certainly need to be adjusted (downward) to make sure that you don't pass away from an overdose.

1. Definitely no snacking in between meals.

This appears difficult to do, however, actually, it's not if you understand one trick: Change snacking with something much more rewarding-- fat. That's right, the government is wrong to recommend a low-fat diet plan. Fat is what makes you feel full up until your next meal. Take away the fat, take away the full. Do not go to an extreme, but do lean strongly towards a high-fat, low-carb diet plan.

One easy way to boost your fat material and stop snacking is to begin your meal by eating an avocado. I and also others I recognize have used this method to stop snacking quickly. Avocados shield you from among the factors some dietary research study mistakenly declares that high-fat diets are bad for you: the risk of gorging on your own on scrumptious, fatty foods. With plain avocados, there is little risk of gorging.

Another risk is blocking your arteries and offering yourself cardiovascular disease. However it's been amply revealed that the blame for that falls squarely on trans fats, like margarine. If you see any kind of item with the words "partially hydrogenated" or "hydrogenated" in the list of active ingredients, placed it back, it's trans fat. On the other hand, any fat that comes directly from a pet or plant is not a trans fat as well as can be securely eaten.

Hint: There might likewise be benefits to consuming the avocado first, as research has actually revealed that the fat literally coats the inside of your intestine, directly obstructs various other food from being soaked up, and efficiently reduces the size of your meal.

Hint: Using much more olive oil in your food preparation can also increase healthy fat material during dishes and aid you in eliminating snacking, similar to the avocado. Butter additionally works, as well as it is delicious, don't overdo it.

One method to cheat: Coffee and tea, additionally with a bit of lotion- yet never with sugar or other sweeteners- can be utilized as a snack if you are having an adamant time enduring until your following dish.

2. Restriction meal times to 1 hr or much less, with a minimum of 12 hrs between completion of supper and beginning of breakfast.

You must run out than three of these "feeding times" per day. So the factor limiting the number and duration of your meal times is essential to avoiding the vicious circle of enhancing insulin resistance. To obtain wise on insulin resistance-- the reason for both kinds two diabetes mellitus and obesity-- check out Dr. Jason Fung's publication.

Hint: If you seem snacking, simply wait and make the snack part of your next meal.

Hint: You never need to count calories again. When you eat, consume until you're full. I locate myself putting down my phone and also focusing on eating. With calorie shame gone, you can gradually eat what you want and savor it. After years of severe calorie limitation, eating is delightful again!

The above two rules are the only nutritional policies you need to preserve excellent weight for the rest of your life, thinking you use common sense and avoid extremes. The diet plan functions by constructing routine periods of insulin relief, maintaining your body from becoming immune to insulin. Adhering to these two regulations will certainly keep your weight and health by never entering the vicious circle of raising insulin resistance.

NONETHELESS, if today you are not your ideal weight (a BMI of about 22), you are already in this vicious circle and require to break out of it. To break out and also rapidly come down to your excellent weight, you need another rule, the regulation of using unique tricks:

3. Use added tricks to accelerate your getaway from diabetes mellitus and weight problems.

Use any mix of the tricks listed below to increase your weight management and return to health. If you use all five wisely, you can reach your ideal weight in 6-- years or less-- even if that indicates losing 100 pounds or more. Yes, think of your weight 10, 20, three decades back. Another close friend of mine began on this trip in 2014, evaluating 270 extra pounds.

He's in his mid-thirties and ready to reach his university battling weight class of 197 pounds and just ran his fastest 2 miles ever. He got to this factor by following the two regulations and simply 3 of the five methods below.

The technique (crucial): Add a teaspoon of vinegar to your first bite of food at every dish. This lowers your blood sugar by 30%. Many people make use of apple cider vinegar. However, if you can not swallow it, a friend who monitors her blood sugar to regulate gestational diabetes informs me that five dill pickles likewise suffice.

Vinegar is an enchanting elixir of healthiness.

Method (crucial): Cut down on sweets, and also, if you can reduce them entirely for a pair of months. I still eat gelato about as soon as a week and understand people who are losing weight on this diet plan while consuming gelato almost every day. Yet this probably will not hold for every person. So it is better to limit sweets for the first few months significantly and then slowly reestablish them.

Trick (not as essential): Work out extra. Consistently providing your muscular tissues an exercise has boosted insulin level sensitivity. I claim workout "even more" since if you're not obtaining any activity at all, you're not also attempting and probably have not read this much.

The technique (not as crucial): Remove breakfast. Instead of morning meals, raise the fat, protein, and veggies you eat at lunch and dinner. I have eliminated breakfast while increasing my overall everyday calories from 1600 to 2500+ and still lost six pounds in the first two weeks.

Trick (most important): Go for a long time without consuming (yes, yes, fasting). Drink water for days or weeks each time. Your fat will dissolve away, and your kind 2 diabetes mellitus and various other disorders with it. The clear-cut books are Dr. Joel Fuhrman's, Fasting and Eating for Health: A Medical Physician's Program for Conquering Illness and Dr. Jason Fung's Total Guide to Fasting. I highly advise them both; if you're unconvinced, read the testimonial comments on Amazon. At least 20 of my friends and I have tried fasts enduring days to weeks. It functions, as well as is impressive.

Don't let anyone discourage you! Your physician might be doubtful and resist your efforts to treat on your own, yet stand firm! Worst instance, put your physician in touch with Dr. Jason Fung. This nephrologist grew tired of just controlling pain for his end phase kidney individuals at the end of lives ruined by diabetes mellitus. So he decided to do something to help them love the energy of a healthy and balanced life well-lived. Now follow the easy guidelines plainly and freely described over and assist yourself!

The Big Lies and Crimes Big Pharma Exposed

Big Pharma has always been a SCAM. The Rockefellers totally control the medical industry. They are “Luciferians.” That alone must tell you?

The Rockefellers will not promote any healing method or ingredient unless they can control it with a patent. If profits cannot be earned, NO remedy will be sold or released to the public. Evile – you bet it is!

Suppose there is a competitor promoting a product or method that heals or cures a disease. In that case, their reputation is quickly tarnished and, if possible, run out of business before others are aware. Fortunately, a few good people stuck it out and fought Big Pharma and their corruption.

What's wrong with America is what's wrong with Big Pharma. And also, what's wrong with Big Pharma is what's wrong with America. This is the story of how Big Pharma looks for substantial profits over the health and wellness and well-being of the human beings it serves and how medication firms invasively corrupted how the healthcare market supplies its essential solutions.

This is neither a new nor extraordinary tale. The tale of Big Pharma is the specific same tale of just how Big Federal Government, Big Oil, Big Agri-Chem Giants like Monsanto have pertained to power. The managing shareholders of all these significant sectors are identical.

Big Money comes from the worldwide central financial cabal's very own and runs all the Ton of money 500 companies along with essentially all national governments on this planet. For example, the Rockefellers privatized medical care in the USA back in the 1930s and financed and mostly affected healthcare and Big Pharma.

This oligarch family team has methodically and successfully removed competition under the misleading misnomer of a capitalist system. Innovation is identified with globalization, privatization, and militarization.

Subsequently, a minimal number of people representing a privileged ruling elite has imposed an international caste system that's hatched its wicked long-term plan to realize its one-world government. But unfortunately, it's never been closer to materialization at this troubled moment in human history.

In the early stages of the twenty-first century, a judgment elite has manipulated our earth of 7 billion individuals into a global economic system of feudalism. Via pillaging and also plundering the earth, establishing an intelligently misleading financial system that controls the production and also circulation of fiat paper money making use of the United States dollar as the standard international money, they have turned the world's citizens and also countries' rights into indentured servants, hopelessly in the red as a result of their grand burglary planet.

The median revenue of the drug channels business that made 2014's Ton of money 500 from one of the most recent available 2013 numbers was $95.1 billion, with a mean revenue as a percentage of assets of 2.9% for many years prior. The leading 12 medication production businesses held an average profit of only $17.5 billion but a median revenue of properties degree of 10.6% over 2012.

Big Pharma's leading eleven companies generated web revenues in simply one year from 2003 to 2012 of nearly three-quarters of a trillion bucks-- that's just net revenue alone. The internet revenue for 2012 among those top eleven totaled up to $85 billion simply that year. The majority of these largest drugs are headquartered in the United States-- consisting of the leading four, Johnson & Johnson (# 39 on Lot of money 500 listings), Pfizer (# 51).

Pfizer is one of the most corrupt drug companies in history.
The vice president was of Pfizer was arrested for FRAUD.

It's started. Vice President of #Pfizer has been arrested at his home and charged with multiple counts of fraud by US federal agents. #PfizeGate #PfizerDump

Rody Johnson, the executive Vice President of Pfizer, has been arrested at his home and charged with multiple counts of fraud ...

Merck (# 65) and Eli Lilly (# 129), along with Abbott (# 152), as well as Bristol Myers Squibb (# 176). The health care study firm IMS Health and wellness projects worldwide sales of Pharma medicines to exceed one trillion dollars by 2014. With that obscenely adequate cash to throw around, what

But, what makes Big Pharma unique in the US outspends cash right into its lobbying efforts-- one more word for bribing federal governments that consist of not only US Congress (and parliaments) but its US federal regulatory authority, the dealt Food and Drug Administration (FDA). It poured $2.7 billion right into its lobbying interests from 1998 to 2013, 42% greater than the 2nd most "Gov. Corp." kickback to be its sibling market insurance coverage.

The structured system is created and layered with built-in rewards at every tier to make and maintain people unwell, chronically depending on their medicines for survival that merely masks and surround signs instead of treatment or eliminating the origin of disease.

Lots of empirical evidence exists that verifies wicked collective efforts have been made to destroy the lives of pioneering heroes who have developed possible cures for cancer, AIDS, and other incurable diseases.

When will Life be More Important than Money?

Natural healing compounds can not be patented. Big Pharma has fought many natural healing ingredients or hid them. Big Pharma refused to promote anything ingredient that could not be patented. Therefore many small companies that wished to expose natural remedies quickly ran out of business or were murdered.

Another cool, brutal reality is that pharmaceutical drugs trigger severe side effects that damage, injure, and kill, particularly when managing chronic disease and symptoms. In addition, the most proposed medicines of all are medicines that usually are very addictive.

Greater than three-quarters of US residents over 50 are presently taking prescribed medication. In addition, one in four females in their 40's as well as 50s is taking antidepressants.

Though the US contains just 5% of the globe's populace, it consumes over fifty percent of all suggested medication and a phenomenal 80% of the world's supply of pain relievers. On average, those who admit to taking prescription medications take four various prescription medications daily. Taking large quantities of prescription drugs has created an epidemic that has become part of a scary plan to squeeze more earnings yet out of a system developed to maintain humans chronically harmful.

Even more startling is that fatality by medical error among nearly a quarter-million individuals every year has become the third biggest awesome among US residents behind cardiovascular disease and cancer cells.

Various more current research has approximated that upwards of as many as 440,000 have passed away annually from avoidable blunders at healthcare facilities. Blind obedience to Big Pharma and a conventional clinical system too dependent on the technology of the surgical procedure has caused even more injury than great to the united state populace.

Since medical professionals currently are required to count so intensely on the medication business for information concerning what they recommend. We discover that the collective and synergistic results of poly-prescription drug use are frequently dangerous mixed drinks to countless people. Incorporate that the health threats increase considerably with the negative effects of our air, water, food, and alcohol/illicit medicines.

Take a look at the existing damage done by over-prescribing anti-biotics. Studies have discovered that way too many antibiotics trigger transgenerational long-term DNA damage. The 20,000 times a year in the US alone that prescription antibiotics are recommended are very harmful and damaging to the nerves.

In addition to that, they merely don't work any longer. The epidemic of trans-mutated microbial infection and bloodsuckers that attack and infest the gastrointestinal system, in particular killing excellent microorganisms and spreading to various other internal body organs, have highly resistant to the overuse of antibiotics. BIG Pharma and medical professionals recognize all this, yet they are accountable for antibiotic overconsumption by unenlightened Americans.

After that, consider what we are currently learning more about Big Pharma vaccinations and the wanton reckless endangerment of kids and expecting moms with toxic levels of mercury causing boosted rates of autism, mental retardation, and fatality.

The criminal whitewash by Big Gov. and also Big Pharma is outright. For example, influenza vaccines have lately been revealed that are completely inefficient and the terrible damage being done to people worldwide.

As opposed to stopping and lowering health problems, vaccines frequently have had the opposite result, significantly boosting ailment, causing permanent damage and fatality to countless innocent targets, mostly living in developing nations. India's Supreme Court is presently checking out charging Expense Gates with criminal harm to many of its people, particularly youngsters injured or eliminated by his worldwide injection program.

Many doubters think Gates' fundamental objective is to eugenically minimize the world populace from seven billion to a "much more convenient" size of fifty percent to one billion individuals. With the precedent of a well-documented background of horrifying eugenics practiced on the evil and most vulnerable in the US until the 1980s, oligarchs have been scheming to kill most of us on the planet for a long time now. 2015's West African break out of one of the most lethal

So we can essentially give thanks to the demonic collaboration between Big Pharma and US Realm.

To additionally manage the global health system, Big Pharma has primarily dictated what's been educated in clinical schools throughout North America, greatly supporting them to dictate the standard conviction that's typical curriculum down to even the books. Several years ago, a rebellion at Harvard among med students and faculty went public. For a long time now, doctors have been educated mainly to treat their individuals with medicines, becoming drug pressing, pharmaceutical whores, and mere foot soldiers in Big Pharma's war on wellness.

As a result, hundreds of physicians in the US get on Large Pharma pay-rolls.

And below's why the medicine business manages the international medical care realm. Since 1990 Big Pharma has been paying at least $150 million that we understand about (as well as no question whole lots much more we don't understand about) buying off political leaders that no longer represent the interests of their electing public.

However, because even more cash is spent on the healthcare market in the US, two times as high as the following country Canada and equal to the next ten incorporated, it's not a surprise that hapless Americans wind up having to pay much higher expensive costs for their made-in-the-USA medicines than anybody else on the planet.

The average US citizen spends $1000 on pharmaceutical medications yearly, 40% greater than Canadians.

Big Pharma likewise invests more bucks right into advertising and marketing than any other market in America, transmitting its seductively deceitful message straight to its consumers, clearly providing marching orders to request details drugs from their doctors.

In 2012 alone, pharmaceutical companies paid almost $3.5 billion to market their drugs on television, radio, web, magazines and, saturating every media outlet. Their message-- satisfaction, relief, comfort, joy, love, and happiness are all just a tablet away. No worry or pain in life can't be dominated by a quick fix-- compliments of Big Pharma.

This unethical technique has been called "condition mongering." Today, medication companies operate no different from the snake oil salespeople of the past. Filling the marketplace with their alluring, appealing advertisements, look at any half-hour of national network news on television targeting the baby boomer and senior group. You'll see that 95% of the commercials are given to you by none other than Huge Pharma.

Indeed, they pay large bucks for slick advertisement marketing projects that shrewdly target the oldsters most appropriate to suffer illness along with being virtually the only Americans left still enjoying the nightly network news. 3 out of four individuals under 65 in the US today acknowledge that traditional information media is nothing less than pure Gov. Corp. publicity. increased

Also, in recent years, Big Pharma has been deceitfully masterful at repackaging and rebranding old medications at higher costs than before, looking for customers. It's a lot simpler and far less money to engage in this unethical industry-wide practice of reusing an old tablet than to produce a brand-new one. Prozac became the most powerful drug sold until it was found out that it triggered so many people to kill themselves or others, particularly teens.

Then Eli Lilly deceived the public - repackaged and relabeled it under the much less harmful name Sarafem at a much greater cost customized to target innocent ladies looking for relief from menstrual discomfort.

Like Prozac as one more Discerning Serotonin Reuptake Prevention antidepressant, Paxil was suddenly repackaged as the cure-all for shyness under the guise of treating social anxiety.

Taking full advantage of recognizing that millions of human beings really feel uncertain of themselves managing strangers and teams, Big Pharma to the rescue manipulating people's nervousness by clinically identifying it as social anxiety as well as reintroducing the antidepressant pink pill as their panacea to personal joy, long-lasting self-esteem as well as success in life.

Maybe as scary as any facet of the medicine company is how Large Pharma has entirely taken control of the FDA.

The FDA is corrupt.

Yet numerous Big Pharma drugs are remembered yearly. Many FDA authorized medicines like FenPhen, Vioxx, Zohydro and also Celebrex kill hundreds before they're finally removed from the rack. This withholding the fact from the professionals and also public customers is yet a lot more proof that Big Pharma protects its revenues greater than people.

This evil practice that keeps repeating itself is proof that Big Pharma is a criminal organization.

It no longer requires outside independent study demonstrating a drug's efficacy to be FDA authorized. Presently study is performed and also put together by the pharmaceutical market itself to fraudulently show positive arise from methodologically flawed medication tests when actually a drug shows either ill effective at doing what it's purported to do or downright hazardous.

Research results just need to show that the drug outperforms a sugar pill, not other older medications already offered on the market that have shown to be efficient at lower expense.

Comparable to shady personnel relocating seamlessly in and out of governmental civil service to brain trust to universities to personal law to companies to lobbyists, the same puts on heads of the FDA moving to and also from Big Pharma. Regrettably, this is how our government has actually been taken control of by unique interests.

Substandard as well as false cases based on shoddy and incorrect research study all managed by Big Pharma frequently obtain published in so called respectable journals giving the green light to doubtful medicines that are either ineffective or worse yet even hazardous. Yet they consistently pass peer and also FDA muster with go crazy testimonials.

Big Pharma's never held accountable for its evildoing, it remains to get away with murder literally, not unlike the militant police, the CIA, Monsanto, and the United States Realm that willfully and methodically commit mass murder on a worldwide range or with incorrect flag terrorism having its mercenary Moslem allies eliminate innocent people as on 9/11 and also France's current "9/11".

Nearly five years ago, the Justice Division submitted and won a big criminal claim versus Pfizer, one of the largest pharmaceutical firms worldwide utilizing 116,000 workers as well as boasting a yearly revenue of more than $50 billion ($ 53.8 in 2013).

Fined $2.3 billion to settle civil as well as criminal fees for illegally advertising making use of 4 of its drugs, the unprecedented settlement became the biggest case of healthcare fraudulence in history. The core of the case centered on Pfizer's illegal technique of advertising and marketing medicines for objectives besides what the FDA originally accepted.

While the regulation allows wide freedom for doctors to prescribe medications for several functions, Pharma suppliers are limited to selling their medications just for the revealed purposes given them by FDA authorization.

While back in 2001, the FDA had actually accepted a 10 mg dosage of Bextra for arthritis individuals and also for menstrual pains, Pfizer sent out Kopchinski out with guidelines to provide free 20 mg samples of Bextra to doctors, hence willfully and illegally jeopardizing patient lives, specifically due to the fact that in 2005 Bextra was removed the market due to increased risk of cardiac arrest and stroke.

However, the story doesn't finish here.

This legal situation potently highlights just how the United States federal government has actually been co-opted as well as conspires with Big Pharma to knowingly harm American residents. When the story broke in the fall of 2009 of this document fine imposed versus Pfizer, assistant supervisor Kevin Perkins of the FBI's Offender Investigation Division touted exactly how the feds mean business pursuing hoodlums within the pharmaceutical sector, flaunting that "it sends out a clear message." However, it turns out that false blowing was an all-for-show exterior.

And frequently bailing them out at overloaded taxpayer cost just causes them to end up being a lot more brazenly criminal, understanding they will always be protected by their co-conspirators, the feds.

Back in November 2001, the FDA had actually specified that Bextra was risky for patients in threat of heart problem as well as stroke, declining its use specifically at greater than 10mg dosages on clients taking care of post-surgery discomfort. Yet Pfizer proceeded anyway marketing its product for any physician who "used a scalpel for a living" as one area manager affirmed.

It was discovered that Pfizer released multimillions of bucks to its well-paid army of hundreds of medical professionals to go around "informing" other MD's on the miracle benefits of Bextra. So again, mistreating medical professionals as pitchmen to market incorrect insurance claims is employing the medical profession as Huge Pharma's sector whores.

Similar To US Empire making use of the "nationwide security" card, so do the banksters, Wall Street, and Big Pharma use their "too large to stop working" ace in the hole to escape their own crimes against humanity. Cash as well as power imply everything, while human life implies absolutely nothing to them.

Just how convenient as Big Gov. as well as Big Pharma reached live happily ever after together in a criminal conspiracy against their very own people they're meant to serve as well as secure, kind of like the method police across this country are "serving as well as securing" people.

After that, with drug earnings so obscenely high, despite a slap on the hand penalty charge of $2.3 billion, Big Pharma's net revenue for simply one quarter conveniently can pay it off.

Three years later, in July 2012, the Justice Department passed on yet an also larger penalty of $3 billion to UK's international health care giant GlaxoSmithKline for the exact same precise crimes. As long as Huge Pharma proceeds generating such enormous earnings, penalties right into the billions mean absolutely nothing, given that they're paid off in a couple of months' time.

Not till chief executive officers and magnates of Large Financial institutions, Big Wall Street, and Big Pharma start going to prison to serve long-term sentences for their criminal offenses it'll easily continue to be business as usual. And as long as Big Pharma possesses Big Gov. Corp., just like the oligarchs have everything there is to earthly very own, absolutely nothing will certainly ever alter for the better unless we as citizens of the world demand accountability and also justice that penalty rightly fit the company crime. SOURCE

The Mask Scam

The request for Americans and other people in the world to wear surgical masks due to the Covid-19 hoax was about compliance NOT about good health. This is called psychological warfare. Remove a person's identity, and you remove their self-esteem. A good way to keep others from meeting and talking with each other – plus keep people 6 ft from each other. What a joke! How did they decide on six feet? (Experts say it comes from 6 feet under)

Our rulers are not very creative.

It was simply a test to see IF the American people and others would comply with a fear tactic. The American people bought it! They were all scammed by the media, movie stars, FDA, Fauci, and the CDC.

Thousands of scientists and honest medical doctors say, “wearing masks is unhealthy and unnecessary and dumb.”

Wearing a mask thinking you are protecting yourself and others from a dangerous virus is like “throwing sand through a chain-linked fence”. How much sand will go through? Almost all of it!

This is why wearing a mask is dumb – at any age!

The Khazarian mafia will kill over a billion people – due to the injections before it is all done. They intended for the world to get so scared they would gladly “lockdown” and not go outside for a couple of years.

They intended for the people to just die at home from the poisonous shots without resisting or protesting. However, mask-wearing causes bacteria to grow and causes more damage to the lungs when it is continuously used. This is why they want the nose and the mouth covered up. It's almost suicide.

Their plan failed – except for the murders of millions of people.

Microplastics From Masks Found Deep in Lungs of the Living

Microplastics used to make surgical masks were found in 11 of 13 patients undergoing lung surgery. Data demonstrate how these particles may cross into the bloodstream and could enter organs, the brain, and developing babies.

Story at-a-glance

- Researchers found 39 microplastics in surgical lung samples from 11 of 13 people. 12 types would commonly be found in plastic bottles, twine, clothing, and surgical masks
- A respiratory specialist says surgical masks don't meet the legal definition of a mask but rather are "breathing barriers." He was emphatic they are shedding microplastics small enough to be inhaled
- Data analysis of cases, hospitalizations, and deaths in Kansas revealed counties with mask mandates had higher mortality rates than those without mask mandates.
- Once inhaled or consumed, microplastics can be found in your bloodstream in particles small enough to cross membrane barriers. It's also found in an infant's first stool, suggesting maternal exposure; an animal study found nano polystyrene particles in fetal brain, liver, kidney, and lung tissue 24 hours after maternal exposure.
- People who wear masks are breathing their bacteria – which in turn can create pneumonia. Also the breath back in carbon dioxide which is a poison.
- Do Dr. Fauci and all his minions know this? Of course!

Walt Disney, Disney World, Disney Land Is Not What You Think.

BIG LIES AND PERVERSION?

Walt Disney was promoted as a kind man who loved to make children laugh. Who was he really? Walt Disney was a member of the Illuminati (Khazarian Mafia). He was a prolific pedophile in secret.

He used Disney land to supply children to the Khazarians – the 33-degree masons and movie stars in Hollywood. The local police, FBI, and the media were paid to look the other way.

Monster Walt's other expertise was creating cartoons with sexual subliminal messages for children. Yes, Disney has been sexualizing our children for decades. As a 33-degree mason, Monster Disney was also a Satanist who participated in many human sacrifices during Satanic rituals.

“If the world only had the eyes to see the fibers which lay under the surface of Walt Disney’s image, they’d tar and feather him and drag him through the streets. If only they knew what Disney’s primary goal is.”

How to fit enough material to fill at least two books into a couple of posts? Pedophilia in Hollywood is so pervasive it's difficult enough just to organize the material... and it has been since the 1930s.

Since its inception, the Disney company has been the home to Freemasonic and CIA child sexual abuse. Additionally, it is/was the home to MKUltra/Monarch programming of child actors. Remember, Freemasonry is the "Christian" counterpart of the Sabbatean/Frankist inversion of God's commandments... a world where up is down, evil is good, and redemption is gained through sin.

They say a picture is worth a thousand words, and when it comes to the evolution of former Disney child stars, a picture tells more than the execs at Disney may want to be revealed:

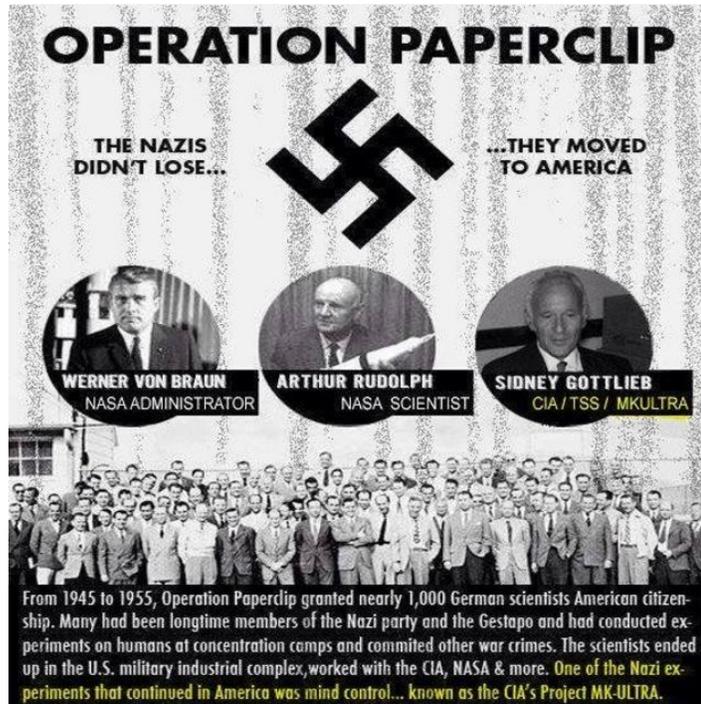

There are facilities to torture children worldwide, including in the underground tunnels beneath Disneyland, Florida. Disneyland also regularly sent tour boats full of children to Epstein Island in the Caribbean, many of whom never returned.

The sources say the movie “Monsters inc.” which describes “fuel” being harvested by terrorizing children, is about adrenochrome.

None of these women look like the product of a wholesome upbringing- wholesomeness and family values being the centerpiece of the Disney public image. An investigation into Disney's history shows a much different picture- one full of child abuse and mind control.

Britney, Lindsay, and Miley all show signs of Monarch programming and, more importantly, what happens when there is a "break" in it. So how did all of this come about? A thread that's been consistent throughout this series...

So, thinking strategically, it might be recommended to transform tactics away from exhaustive and extensive descriptions of the science, psychology, and technological applications targeting the mass subconscious and concentrate instead on points people currently like.

Conspiracies entail electronic media and stars and throw in some stylish search terms like satanism, pedophilia, MKULTRA, Hollywood, etc.

Assuming these lines, it struck me that the Disney company is at the heart of the nexus between occultism, the armed forces' commercial complicated, emotional war, and corporate moneymaking.

The extensive documentation of this truth is enormous beyond belief. Yet, as usual, I will throw a few crumbs around and try to link some of the vital dots that I haven't seen covered in other presentations on this subject. So allow's start with some clear but easy links: Let's learn through the man in his own words about the importance of kids to the control of global cultures:

" The state must proclaim the kid to be the most valuable treasure of individuals. As long as the federal government is perceived as benefiting the benefit of the kids, individuals will happily endure practically any type of curtailment of freedom as well as nearly any kind of deprivation." -Adolph Hitler

Hitler was often photographed encircled by adoring youngsters ... similarly, Walt Disney focused his full-service version around youngsters. The messages shared in Disney manufacturings from the very beginning were witchcraft (Fantasia) and other unwholesome topics, which have evolved right into the sexualization of youngsters.

It is essential to bear in mind that these individuals are playing a long game- if it takes generations to "normalize" their agenda after that, so be it. This is emotional warfare, part of a social engineering program years old, otherwise older. The elites want a society quickly manipulated, and the "Hollywood link" is one element of a much bigger job.

" First Disney feature film was Snow White, as the basis for MKULTRA and PROJECT emperor mind control programs." This is just how it functions:

" Once a split in the core personality occurs, an "interior world" can be produced as well as modified personas can be configured utilizing tools such as songs, films (especially Disney productions), and also a fairytale. These aesthetics and audio help boost the programming procedure using photos, signs, significances, and concepts.

A few of the most typical internal pictures seen by mind control servants are trees, Cabalistic Tree of life, infinity loopholes, ancient icons and also letters, spider internet, mirrors, glass smashing, masks, castles, puzzles, satanic forces, butterflies, hour glasses, clocks, and also robotics.

These symbols are generally inserted in popular culture motion pictures and videos for two reasons: to desensitize most of the population, utilize Subliminals and neuro-linguistic shows, and deliberately build specific triggers and secrets for base programs highly-impressionable MONARCH youngsters.

Disney, a Freemason, was surrounded by a worldwide fraternal company for young boys 12 to 21. Named after Jacques de Molay, the last Grand Master of the Knights Templar. DeMolay is considered to be part of the basic "family members" of Masonic organizations."

DeMolay is a recruiting tool for future "trainers" of the MKUltra and Emperor targets. Disney was also entailed with the FBI, had indicated during the House

Un-American Activities Board in the 1940s and 50s. He became an FBI possession and individual friend of Director and homosexual J. Edgar Hoover.

Really few people understand Disney's close connections with the Bureau, as exposed through FOIA files. Of the 750 web pages launched on Walt Disney, most are censored. Nevertheless, the legible records are incredibly appealing. N 1947, J. Edgar Hoover and Walt Disney struck up a lengthy-standing friendship.

That same year, House Un-American Activities Board (HUAC) announced its first Hollywood blacklist. This friendship was initially triggered by Disney's desire to inform the FBI of exactly how the "communist infiltration" caused his animators to go on strike in 1941.

Their partnership was so close that by the time of Tomorrowland's opening in 1955, the FBI referred to Walt Disney as an immediate get in touch with the Special Representative accountable. In addition, Disneyland was provided to the FBI for "official matters and entertainment objectives."

Disney took the next sensible step and became a possession of the CIA. "In an attempt to permit German researchers to aid in postwar efforts, Truman concurred in September 1946 to operation-paperclip-the-secret-intelligence-program-to-bring-nazi-scientists-to-america.html" Project Paperclip," a program to bring Nazi German researchers to America.

The plan was initially to debrief them and send them back to Germany. Nevertheless, when the US realized the level of their knowledge and experience, plans transformed."

As we've already talked about, the social scientists- psychotherapists and psychoanalysts- from Job Paperclip showed beneficial to the social engineering project and the entire facility of Disney manufacturings. Also, Disneyland was founded on psychology, similar to advertising and marketing.

As a participant of Project Paperclip, Nazi scientist Werner von Braun became famous for his payments to the Apollo moon touchdown. Von Braun almost got an honor-- the Presidential Medal of Flexibility-- until one of Ford's elderly consultants challenged his Nazi past. Disneyland opened throughout the same year that von Braun worked as a technical supervisor on 3 Disney TV shows about the room: "Man in Space," "Man as well as the Moon," as well as

"Mars and Beyond." In the 1950s and early 1960s, von Braun turned into one of Walt Disney's specialists on the "World of Tomorrow."

Tolerable for somebody who only a number of years earlier was a high-ranking officer in the feared SS. As we've currently covered: Procedure Mockingbird, a large-scale CIA program arranged by Allen Dulles and also designed to control news media for propaganda objectives, additionally began in the early 1950s.

The CIA spent millions per year working with reporters in Business Media from Disney/ABC and others, to promote their point of view. The initial procedure supposedly included almost 3,000 CIA operatives and also 400 journalists. These people are complete, if nothing else.

In 2007, many records known as the "Family Jewels" were declassified and released by the National Protection Archive, which exposed that the CIA had routinely wiretapped Washington-based news press reporters.

The people who were touched were more than likely taken into consideration to be a risk and would certainly not follow their publicity and gate-keeping initiatives.

Disney had a cozy partnership with the CIA and the FBI for many years. Disney had underground tunnels that were used to kidnap children and trafficked to certain people around the country. Many of the Disney employees were pedophiles. Disney land and Disney World were dangerous place for children to be seen.

Disney has the FBI running interference all this time around should any pesky residential matters emerge that might shed undesirable light on their cozy partnership with the CIA. Perhaps one of the most threatening of all recognized CIA jobs is MK-ULTRA/ ARTICHOKE/ EMPEROR, licensed under Allen Dulles in 1953, due to Nazi scientists influence on United States Knowledge through Job Paperclip.

The tasks involved making use of "numerous methodologies to adjust the individual frame of mind and alter mind feature, including the surreptitious administration of drugs as well as other chemicals, sensory deprivation, isolation, spoken and sexual assault," to induce a state of trauma-based mind control in their victims. It is in this environment that young Disney "stars" are raised.

Trauma-based mind control is the purview of Dr. Michael Maccoby, Erich Fromm, and B.F. Skinner. Add to that the work of Alfred Kinsey and his relationship with pedo-sadists, and you can see why the behavior of these young people becomes more and more bizarre. But, remember, none of this happens in isolation- the "ripples" emitted from each of these sources at some point intersect.

As well as who can fail to remember the most celebrated of all pedophiles, Lewis Carroll, the patron of pedophilic societies to this particular day <https://spidercatweb.blog/2017/12/31/patron-saint-of-paedo/> Carroll was recognized for his pictures of nude children even in his own day. Do people truly believe this selection of authors for 'youngsters' movies is coincidental?! The directory of the youngster misuse styles in Disney movies is a large subject which i do not mean to cover extensively right here.

As a short summary, a number of the movies begin with either the fatality or murder of the parents of the protagonists or their orphan standing, a trauma that leaves a child prone to shows by the 'evil stepmother/father' or foster parents.

There is an abundance of information regarding this readily available on line for those who intend to look better. Finally I simply intend to point out the progressively publicized truth that Disney himself was recognized to be a gay pedophile and also a freak that abused the kid stars he made renowned. <https://www.ocweekly.com/new-book-alleges-walt-disney-was-a-gay-pedophile>.

If he had wished to hide these details, it appears strange that he would openly promote his principle of the "Wienie" as a 'aesthetic magnet' ... seems kind of gay, right?

Carroll's job is prominent in the job of Disney and being just one of the type in MKUltra/Monarch programs. Many self-proclaimed victims of these terrible trauma-based mind control experiments attest to making use of Disney films for their programming, especially child victims.

Movies like Wizard of Oz as well as Alice in Heaven were apparently a staple in mind control programming, as the imagery maximized the distressed sufferer's capability to dissociate and approve programming directions.

Meanwhile, we constantly watched Disney as family-oriented, wholesome entertainment- never as soon as presuming the dark agenda behind it. "Since such candidates were chosen young, kids' stories were favorite modelling messages prior to the vanity fully forming, such as The Wizard of Oz and Alice in Heaven. Thus the connection with the whole Disney empire's participation in such programming."

Alice in Wonderland

The aim of the Alice in Wonderland or confusion technique is to confound the expectations and conditioned reactions of the interrogatee. He is accustomed to a world that makes some sense, at least to him: a world of continuity and logic, a predictable world. He clings to this world to reinforce his identity and powers of resistance.

The confusion technique is designed not only to obliterate the familiar but to replace it with the weird. Although this method can be employed by a single interrogator, it is better adapted to use by two or three. When the subject enters the room, the first interrogator asks a double-talk question -- one which seems straightforward but is essentially nonsensical. Whether the interrogatee tries to answer or not, the second interrogator follows up (interrupting any attempted response) with a wholly unrelated and equally illogical query. Sometimes two or more questions are asked simultaneously. Pitch, tone, and volume of the interrogators' voices are unrelated to the import of the questions. No pattern of questions and answers is permitted to develop, nor do the questions themselves relate logically to each other. In this strange atmosphere the subject finds that the pattern of speech and thought which he has learned to consider normal have been replaced by an eerie meaninglessness. The interrogatee may start laughing or refuse to take the situation seriously. But as the process continues, day after day if necessary, the subject begins to try to make sense of the situation, which becomes mentally intolerable. Now he is likely to make significant admissions, or even to pour out his story, just to stop the flow of babble which assails him. This technique may be especially effective with the orderly, obstinate type.

Much less abusive, there is proof that the army carried out many sophisticated research study experiments for Hollywood studios, such as developing 3-D techniques and View Vision. Workers from large studios, such as Warner Brothers and MGM, were also known to constant the lot.

In addition, Hollywood celebrities like Walt Disney, Marilyn Monroe, and Ronald Reagan were provided special clearance to use Search Mountain's centers. However, the factor for their sees remains concealed.

The reality is that no person understands what sort of films were being created at this trick location ... for all we know, they could be about MKUltra programs. So, where is the line between Hollywood 'Imagineering', army scifi propaganda, and indoctrination for the function of social engineering? Exists one whatsoever?

" The Speculative Prototype Area of Tomorrow (EPCOT) was an unfinished concept created by Walt Disney.

Its function was to be a "genuine city that would 'continue to be a plan,' designed to boost American industry and develop new city living ideas. The city was planned to be a company community. The "EPCOT concept" became part of Walt Disney's original plan for the home bought near Orlando, Florida. After he died in 1966, the residential or commercial property became the Walt Disney Globe Resort in 1971, and also an amusement park based upon the suggestion opened up in 1982.

A part of the initial building model of the idea gets on a display screen on the Tomorrowland Transportation Authority PeopleMover. It is widely known that the Disney parks operate virtually like a sovereign nation within the United States, or possibly also an army setup. They have their law enforcement agency as well as prisons, their own money, and also the fabled underground tunnel systems:

"The Department of Protection (DOD) has been interested in Disney Enjoyment Parks for decades. Called Procedure Mickey Mouse, the DOD has been researching Disney's use of technology and threat methods. The DOD has also been working in combination with Disney to gather info on Beta screening procedures that the prominent amusement park uses on their consumers. But, most importantly, who would certainly ever believe Disney to be a front for the US government?

If this is indeed the situation, where do pedophilia and the hypersexualization of kids fit in? What it looks like is Disney is grooming youngsters to be used in brownstone procedures for the US Government. An additional exciting aspect of this is the passages- there are passages throughout the Los Angeles location, a few of which have been disclosed as child trafficking routes ... specifically the ones around the Getty Center.

A society of pedophilia has been carried down from the top of The Disney Business and infiltrated every aspect of the organization.

In a subject entitled, Hollywood Babylon II, Kenneth Raga alludes to a feasible tendency toward pedophilia between Walt Disney and Bobby Driscoll. "Some animators specified that the one in charge [Walt Disney] seemed to have fallen for the boy. There might be some reality in this ..." "The boy that Walt fell in love with was a tiny young attractive young boy star called Bobby Driscoll who subscribed in 1946 with Disney.

He acted in Track of the South, Prize Island, and Bobby's voice was used in Peter Pan." Unfortunately, like so many childhood celebrities, Bobby presented signs of injury from childhood years of misuse, becoming an addict by the age of 1and and dying from an overdose a few years later.

There is still a society of pedophilia at Disney ... Director James Gunn was terminated after public uproar adhering to the direct exposure of his preference, but he was rehired not long after. Various Disney execs have been discharged after being revealed.

"It was located by the examination that 35 Disney employees had been arrested since 2006 and consisted of all kinds of employees from ticket sellers to tourist guides. The TV program To Catch a Predator was the idea behind the sting, with the suspects being shot as they were hurried and jailed after they were deceived right into messaging what they thought were minor youngsters.

Disney did their best to hush up the rumor and insisted that the fact that they have a lot of staff members working for them, the variety of pedophiles just totaled up to 0.01 of their workforce. And this was just at Disneyworld in Florida.

If you think about it makes perfect sense... what would be a pedophile's dream job- a place with unfettered access to children. Pedophiles gravitate toward jobs that put them in contact with children. How many teachers, coaches, etc., have been arrested for having sex with minors. Why would Disney be any different?

Top Disney Executive Arrested for Operating a Pedophile Ring

Days, after police broke into a large pedophile ring at Disney Globe, a senior exec at Disney, was charged with three felony matters of youngster sex misuse. According to Range, Jon Heely, a long-term staff member of the family amusement firm, was jailed on three matters of sensual and lascivious acts upon a child.

Heeley, 58, of Santa Clarita, is charged with abusing two underage women, who were 11 years old, approximately ten years back. Supervisor of music posting at Disney Jon Heely (envisioned) was arrested on November 16 and launched on $150,000 bail.

The senior executive's apprehension comes days after cops announced they had revealed a big pedophile ring at Disney World, Florida. Over 35 employees were apprehended for kid rape offenses. The Disney employees include people from administration, an attendant, a tourist guide, and a ticket vendor.

Disney has downplayed the arrests, insisting that the amusement park is so large that jailed accounts for a small portion of its overall labor force; however, the senior executive's arrest has led numerous to believe the pedophilia issue is systemic within the firm.

Daily Mail reports: Heely was apprehended on November 16 and released on a $150,000 bond, Selection said.

According to testimony, the woman was 15-years old at the time of the claimed case. The various other targets were supposedly abused over a 4-year span that began when she was 11. Heeley begs for blameless for the costs and vehemently rejects the accusations, his lawyer told Variety.

Disney stated it acted promptly and also put on hold Heeley upon learning of the allegations late Friday. 'When discovering of this circumstance tonight, he has been suspended without pay up until the matter is fixed by the courts,' a Disney representative stated. But, hey, that supervises the licensing of songs from Disney films, faces just over nine years behind bars if found guilty of the fees.

Satanism in Hollywood

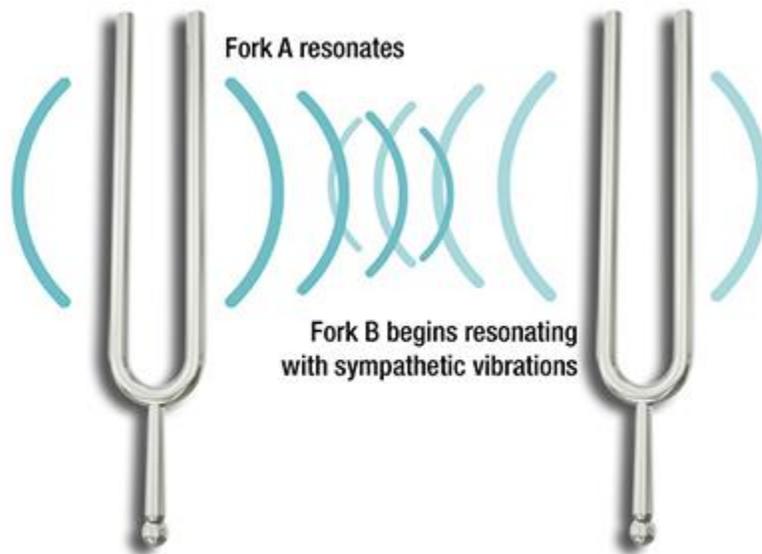

Hollywood has been burning, and Satanists are going out from the fires with their arms (and trousers) ablaze. It shows that the majority of them are pedophiles, and also they are upset that any individual attempts to critique them. When I see this happening, I struggle for the will to compete with the water container. I am not sure if this action would be ethical and even considerate. I needed to invest some time checking out the composition of Satanism.

Satanists put on tennis shoes, do yoga exercises, and have children. They hold work, and they can obtain terminated, they adopt kids and pets. They have principles, follow a code, and pick up rubbish instead of grumbling concerning it. It is a living religious belief for a huge team of individuals. The modern Satanist is a practitioner of will. At its core, Satanism is founded on the principle of Thelema.

Love is the Law, Love under Will

Satanist contact will via ritual. The satanic circle is a living cinema for spreading. The director builds a scene with props and acts out a fantasy. The fantasy is the will certainly window-shopping. The live performance of the supervisor determines the success of the ritual. As soon as the curtain rises, the show should take place. A Satanist takes this routine very seriously. They claim their life depends on it. The satanic practice generates outcomes. If it did not, there would be no Hollywood.

"As over so below" is a concept of the song. Tweezing a string creates a tone. Halving the series will certainly provide you it's next octave. A 3rd octave is developed via resonance when two octaves are played together. This is the harmonic principle and is essential to nature.

A hellish routine is the playing of 2 notes or tones to create the 3rd affectionately. The initial tone is played in the will or mind of the illusionist. The 3rd tone appears through vibration. As above, so below. The excellence of the mind and the stage determine the top quality of the third tone.

Hollywood is a market built on vibration. Hollywood does not just film. Hollywood is any lens influencing America. It is a curated viewpoint with a script. Its just measure of success is the amount of focus it hemorrhages out of you. Its profits, stability, or sense of community are useless. This is why CNN is "the primary name in the news." Hollywood is the routine of the alarm on a lighthouse. It will take any type of ship regulated by any captain. It has no desire to examine character. It just desires the flesh.

Billy Typical was young as well as complimentary. He was leaving a village in Ohio in the early morning before his high school college graduation. He headed west to be a big star, saddled in a Japanese sedan. Billy was going to be someone. He listened to fantasy as it turned out of his lips, "My name is Wiley Cooper. No. Waylon Cooper. Billy Cooper." He would decide after lunch in St Louis.

This is dissociation, and also it is the initial step right into the Hollywood ritual. The remedy detaches from the body and forms a tight white bubble. This is Billy Normal's secret center. The outdoors does not come here. This is his fact. Yet Hollywood just wants his illusion. Billy is driving western, right into the sunset. He gets on a fuel death march. This is the very first level in the ritual. Billy's name is his very first sacrifice.

The satanic ritual needs a circle. It requires a sacrifice, and also it calls for a resonator—the high quality as well as the weight of the sacrifice figures out the power of the routine. Satanism is the direction and application of the will into the aether. The aether is the gathered psychic power of humanity.

Hollywood is not contaminated with pedophilia. It is a required feature of its existence. There can be no Hollywood without it. To rape/molest a child is the best self-sacrifice. No human might dwell in their own heart after doing that to children. Pedophilia is a death routine.

Hollywood can not be improved. It is broken.

Why does adrenochrome work? To recognize how this works, I need you to do the difficult and forget the target while describing it. I require you to instead go inside the mind of someone about to open a person's arteries. The witch stated, "With a sharp blade cut deeply right into the center finger of your left hand. Eat the discomfort."

The left hand is closer to the heart. The heart is a crucible of creation. We hope. We act. We believe. We do. When the mind has a goal. It needs a heart's power to accomplish it. Our will is adrenalin with the objective.

After Billy arrives in Hollywood, he comes down through even more intricate sacrifice rituals. Transforming his name was the first stage. Easy enough. Next comes a tryout with no trousers on. Then, some awkward touching that was absolutely nothing to bother with the routine. Everything is a ritual with more of a sacrifice.

Each time, there is peeling off one's skin as an offering. Quickly, Billy gets here empty-handed at the next ritual. He's hemorrhaged himself out, and they won't take his bones. He needs the blood of an additional. He needs this community to require him.

The adrenalin that moves inside us is manna. Fluid intent made from a clean heart and mind is one of the most beneficial resources. Our significance and also life force hold a power that's been concealed from us for a reason. These tricks have been understood for a long, very long time. Adrenalin is the cure for everything.

Instead, Hollywood Satanists have swiped these secrets and entrapped them inside the industry. Why would a human indeed murder a child? The solution is to stop being a human. Pedophilia is the 4th degree. Our humanity is rejecting it. It is simple after a few grunts from Harvey Weinstein in a robe. Each time, more of the skin is needed. Each time, less adrenaline is created. Each time, the desperation boosts.

The fifth degree of Hollywood is Epstein Island. When you reach level Epstein, you are wagering with centuries of fate. Epstein, as well as Clinton, are high-stakes Satanists. They fit the working definition of "demon," psychopathy having a human body. Expense Clinton, the human, was left a very long time ago.

This is why Hollywood is perfect. A golden industry developed years ago by a cartel of psychotic bankers. When cash is useless, you sell the fetish of adrenaline. Weinstein is a high cardinal. Sarah K Silverman is a low altar lady. Pedowood assumes pedophilia is funny because they have developed into hyenas. They eat on innocent flesh, wanting to remember what it tastes like.

Pedowood is deliberate.

- 1.) Pedophilia Dream
- 2.) Character wakes, declares himself to be Dan
- 3.) Character then goes residence and does an abuse routine on two kids.
- 4.) Children sinking.
- 5.) Moms and dads fed child's feces.
- 6.) Personality stabs child.

Hollywood and MSM broadcasts are hellish routines of lights and also the camera. The cinema is a spell to offer you the impression this is all skill. However, talent is a contract. A contract is granted for the service of being a partner. This is authorization removal.

Satanism/Hollywood/MSM are marketing the suggestion that permission is a kind of value. Notice approval is obtained on the surface from a populace. Principles are interior. It keeps you up in the evening. The Hollywood routine is turning you within off. It wants you to follow its very own shiny gold compass.

A lot of the left is a cult for the very same reasons. One side of an individual's psyche has been suppressed, shamed, and destroyed. They have a gagged morality and also suspect intuition. We are told it's evil, racist, sexist, xenophobic.

This dethrones principles replacing them with permission. This is why MSM says such ludicrous points. This is why POTUS is so antithetical to Hollywood. This is why YOU are so hazardous. You trust your very own principles. You pay attention to the compass in your back. A cult is the cancer cells of the self-abandoned.

Society conceals your real power behind words like "placebo." We are guys making believe to be lamb. There is a plan for mind control, and Hollywood is using it. Progressivism is the ominous routine of dipping chains in gold and offering it as "privilege."

When you approve of your privilege, you tell a lie in public. This lie is externally awarded a merit. This makes the outdoors a comfortable place and the inside a depressing location. Repetition is crucial to mind control. A thousand little lies awarded with a thousand chants of "You're so progressive." We usually wonder where it's comfortable. Outdoors is great. Inside is bad. When you see somebody in the left's bubble, they are oppressed by their empathy and held down by embarrassment.

This is why the left has such vitriol. It's not that you are just "bothersome." To them, you have dedicated heresy by consulting your very own principles.

In satanism, mind control serves after permission. This results in permission being drawn out sinisterly. "Ominous" in the method you could take a dog to the vet. A Satanist will certainly say that man is a god of his world and liable for all of his choices. In this thinking, permission surpasses principles—team mkultra.

Youngsters are the brand-new frontier of permission extraction for pedophilia. A cult rewards itself for considerably honoring the sentience of its kids. This line of reasoning is both twisted as well as consistent. The moral instinct has been gagged as wickedness. What remains is psychopathy impersonating reason.

Satanism is Relativism.

Relativism is a viewpoint that attempts to transform principles into a consent-based system of codes. It develops a bias of the reason, putting it on a stand where anything is feasible, regardless of how based—notification of how morality is changed with relativism in the 11 satanic guidelines. (Comments in blue.).

When you produce a consent-based value, it requires an outside factor of reference. This pulls the ear away from its own heart, positioning it outside the reasonable opinion matrix. This procedure digestive tracts you like a fish. The laws of approval grant the Satanist a hand down any habits. Exactly how easy it would be under this system to provide a blowjob for a contract; to prostitute on your own for cash and call on your own a virgin; To exploit a small since they weren't crying audibly for you to hear them?

Satanism is a hypnotic trance on our principles. It turns it into the scapegoat and makes factor its golden kid—the same repeated triangulation system. When you practice a hellish spell, you perform an exact ritual with your body, props, and speech. If you do this correctly, you are awarded. Likewise, when stars are on an electronic camera, they perform an accurate routine with their bodies, props, and speech. Again, if they do it correctly, they are compensated. Hollywood is a Hellish spell for your interest.

The Hollywood Video Camera is the All-Seeing-Eye. The lucky sacrifice is the actor who reveals one of the most devotion. Their devotion is confirmed via acts of licentiousness and also self blackmail. Our silver for their filmed routine makes us an unknowing partner.

Truth is harmonic.

Trump is fact coming for Hollywood. This truth is light. You can't shatter light. You can not smear it, identify it, or get angry at it. The light will certainly constantly get on. All you can do is attempt and also block it from others. You can construct a false ceiling and gather every person below it. At the very least, for some time.

Lies are shadows covering our religious beliefs and also history. The walls of our minds are smeared, and our vision has been shadowed. Lots of have expanded familiar with the blur. Some still favor it. Like music, the fact is a harmonic. When stability is tuned, the reality is resonated around us.

Satanism is anti-truth b/c it puts factors on a pedestal. Pedophilia reveals to us factors can never be the moderator of truth. The factor is a function of the mind, not the heart. In satanism, you check into a candle and think about what you see. In the petition, you close your eyes and believe what you feel in your heart.

We wish to know what makes them drawn to kids? These people have a proclivity for virtue. They know their very own is gone forever. They traded it on the competitive market. They can only obtain closer to it by making you an associate. They are greater than sick. They are walking dead. Hard decisions have to be made.

A pedophile is no longer human. My ethics insist I claim that dehumanizing someone is a farce in the light of criminal justice. Yet this is except justice. This is for grace. We have to end the suffering of what made use of to be human a long time back. Pedophilia is like leprosy, not alcoholism. There is no other way to change someone who dehumanizes a kid by turning them into a consenting grownup.

Keep in mind the lack of embarrassment. See just how his reasoning gags his morality? He is highly functional and harmful. All he requires is an authorization from the kid. He is the only court of when consent has been offered. This is worse than rape. He needs his target (child) to warrant his lusty desires.

Pedophilia will not die naturally. A pedophile needs to taste innocence to feel life. The mind is wired into dopamine. Pedophiles are survivors who did not make it.

It would take one more lifetime to repair them. Amputation is mercy. We can not pretend this is treatable by medication or a weekend break in the desert.

We venerated the all-seeing eye of the video camera. Our phones, houses, concerts, and movie theaters are electric churches. We are baptized in shiny shimmering illusion. Individuals pray for it. They give up children to it. The clergy treats it with flawless reverence. Yet, who is the eye behind the lens? Why do we feed it with the eyes of our children?

Aztec society has a bloody history of human sacrifice. We are baffled at the exceptionally considered it was being genuine. We call those individuals pets and hide them deep down in history. We rest simple understanding of exactly how evolved we have come to be. We firmly insist something so savage could never take place to us here today. Besides, we have our airplanes. We have our crosswalks. We were most likely to flicks. Impossible.

It captivates the mind, controlling it with noise as well as image. It removes our interest, converts it to popularity, and markets it to us like nectar in 90 minutes. Sufferers are so blind to it that they will certainly buy their tickets. Or pay a regular monthly charge.

If you have ever doubted the power of magic, that's a sure sign of its functioning. The resting will initially state themselves 'woke.' Pay attention very carefully.

We are awakening. Bear in mind how simple for anyone to fall under a spell. We are the Aztecs. This is what it's like to stay in a human sacrifice society.

Doctors Who LIE

In my mind, the doctor-patient partnership should be sacred or holy. There is no relationship where the bond should be trusting other than marriage.

As medical professionals, clients rely upon medical professionals to help them make life-saving decisions. And also, physicians need clients to be sincere with them to ensure that we can provide the most proper medical advice.

Yet, there has been a disintegration in this relationship over the current years. Doctors are no longer kept in such high esteem as decades ago.

Clinical illnesses are becoming much more intricate, and people are living much longer. As a result, there has never been a time when people need to trust their medical professionals more.

All medical professionals must keep in mind their vow and place the patient back in the center of focus. Most of us need to refute those medical professionals abusing the system for their very own gain. Patients require to discover that the huge majority of us appreciate our individuals and have their best interests in mind. We all need to end up being a group once again.

The clinical culture encourages medical professionals to stay clear of admitting errors

If you become the sufferer of a medical error, should you trust your physician to be sincere about their role in the mistake? That could be a negative concept. Yet, a startling new study claims that most doctors would attempt to cover their duty in the blunder, and also, the majority wouldn't even say sorry.

The research, performed by a nationwide group of scientists, presented two hypothetical situations, including medical error, to more than 300 primary care doctors and asked just how they would react. The first situation involved a delayed diagnosis of breast cancer; the second included a postponed response to a client's symptoms due to a breakdown in the coordination of the person's care.

The majority of (more than 70 percent) of the medical professionals checked stated they would provide "just a minimal or no apology, minimal or no description, and restricted or no information concerning the cause."

The record was published last fall in the journal BMJ Quality and Security.

The scientists kept in mind that the toughest forecasters of disclosure were "perceived personal responsibility, perceived severity of the occasion, and perceived value of patient-centered interaction." In other words, doctors determine whether a blunder is a sizeable sufficient deal to reveal to their injured people.

In reality, the aspect that most influences doctors to conceal or reveal clinical errors needs to be clear to any person who has invested much time in the profession: The society of medicine frowns on admitting mistakes, generally on the pretense of worry negligence suits.

Yet what's truly at risk are medical professionals' egos and the conservation of a system that lets physicians avoid liability by disregarding issues or shifting blame to "the system" or any perpetrator aside from themselves.

An expert panel from the Institute of Medicine says Doctors and Medical errors kill about 300,000 Americans per year...

The third-leading cause of death in the US, most doctors don't want you to know about

- A recent Johns Hopkins research declares more than 250,000 individuals in the united state die every year from medical mistakes. Other reports claim the numbers to be as high as 440,000.

- Medical mistakes are the third-leading cause of death after heart problems and cancer.

- Advocates are fighting back, promoting more effective regulations for client safety.

" My little angel" is exactly how Christopher Jerry describes his daughter Emily.

" Currently, the CDC utilizes a deaths collection system that only tallies causes of death from illness, somber problems, and injuries," Makary stated in a letter advising the CDC to alter the method it accumulates the nation's critical health and wellness statistics.

In 2014 James retired early to commit his life to boost patient security. His mission: is to educate individuals on how to be empowered patients. He has developed a client expense of legal rights, which he's been pushing to end up being government regulation. Yet he claimed his letters to the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services have gone unanswered so far .

Food Supply Scam. Dangers in Our Food Supply.

Keep in mind that the Khazarians are criminals. They hate humanity. However, they are masters at creating tricks and methods that murder people while placing the blame on others. They are masters at extortion, bribery, and paying off the appropriate agencies and people to make things happen for them.

Our food supply is a SCAM – GMO, all created and controlled by the Khazarians. Monsanto is an evil company. They are earning enormous profits and poisoning people at the same time.

So, they earn enormous profits, but they get to murder people simultaneously. (Genetically Modified Organisms) Everyone knows GMOs are harmful – but the Khazarians keep trying to poison us with “Injections,” Food supply, dumping fluoride in the water, and flying over cities spraying aluminum in our air. Today, Bill Gates (the largest farm landowner) builds vertical farming warehouses and sprays the synthetic food he creates with poisonous ingredients in the “injections.” Thanks, Mr. Gates! His food is sold to Wholefoods, Kroger, and other food market chains.

Don't forget the Khazarians are Satanists!

Food-borne diseases are escalating in the United States, not because of a few unwashed spinach leaves. Instead, foul conditions, lax regulations, and few examiners threaten our security.

On Tuesday, September 13, 2011, Schwarz, 92, grumbled to his little girl Janice of abdominal discomfort and a slight fever. She took him to his doctor, who said it was most likely the stomach flu. By Thursday, the signs had worsened, and Schwarz had developed looseness of the bowels.

Janice took him to the emergency room. Once more, influenza was diagnosed, and he was sent out of the residence.

For a few days, he boasted. Then, he called his kid, Paul, that Sunday and cheerfully guaranteed him that he'd eaten an enormous breakfast and felt a great deal much better.

While the United State Division of Agriculture (USDA) manages food security for many types of meat and chicken products, the Fda (FDA) is charged with keeping the remainder of our food supply risk-free. And for the Schwarz family members, the FDA had dropped the ball.

The 2011 listeria outbreak was not an isolated instance. The USA is experiencing what amounts to an epidemic of food-borne diseases. According to the CDC, there have to do with 48 million situations of gastrointestinal disorders a year, bringing about greater than 128,000 hospitalizations and more than 3,000 fatalities. E. coli in spinach and fruit juice, salmonella in eggs and also jalapeño peppers, listeria in cheese, and bagged lettuce: The illnesses from food-borne bacteria are mind-numbing.

Except for E. coli infections, the rate of breakouts from various other viruses tracked by the CDC rose from 2007 to 2011. The decline in E. coli-- associated illnesses remains a component of the outcome of the USDA's vigorous activities.

For example, following an episode triggered by tainted hamburgers that eliminated four kids in 1993, the agency stated E. coli 0157: H7, the stress that sickened the kids, an adulterant, making it unlawful for firms under USDA territory to offer food polluted with the microorganism. But potentially deadly bacteria aside from E. coli have yet to be declared adulterants.

It would certainly be challenging for any government firm to prevent every situation of food poisoning in our nation. However, in a report after record, the Government Liability Workplace (GAO) has uncovered woeful shortcomings within the FDA. For example, its product-recall process is inefficient and also complex.

It has done a lousy task of dealing with the overuse of prescription antibiotics in animals feed. It does not have the scientific capability to perform its responsibilities. Also, when it discovers health and wellness violations at food-processing plants, the FDA takes enforcement action regarding half of the cases and seldom enforces fines, making it logical for corporations to run the risk of making people ill since the worst they can expect is a warning letter.

By the time doctors detected Schwarz with listeriosis, the FDA had zeroed in on the source of the contaminant-- a ranch in Colorado had by siblings Eric and Ryan Jensen. Inspectors descended on Jensen Farms three times throughout September 2011. Conditions might rarely have been more beneficial for listeria, which prospers in wet areas.

There was no system for precooling the selected melons; this permitted condensation to form on their peels as they were cooled. Water stood in puddles on the floor. The cleaning and drying out equipment was rigged to make it just about impossible to tidy, so deterioration, dust, and "item accumulation" stayed even after the equipment supposedly had been sanitized. Ultimately, Jensen washed its fruits in only water, using no chlorine or various other antimicrobial options that might have killed the listeria.

Jensen issued a recall on September 14, and the damages had been done. On October 18, more than a month after its initial examinations, the FDA provided a caution letter to the firm (which eventually applied for bankruptcy). If there ever before was an instance of too little too late, this was it.

Until people started dropping dead, the Jensen center had never, as soon as in its 20-year background, been checked by the FDA, even though it firm considers fresh fruit and vegetables to be a "great danger" and an examination concern.

Like most generated companies, Jensen used third-party auditors to accredit its taking care of systems. For example, on July 25, the first individuals were sickened by infected melon at about the same time. One auditor checked out Jensen for four hours and honored the plant with a "premium" rating of 96 percent.

The FDA usually embraces a "see no wickedness" technique to possible problems. In 2010, eggs from 2 Iowa-based businesses, Hillandale Farms and Wright Area Egg, sickened almost 2,000 people in 11 states with salmonella, germs that can produce high temperature, tummy pains, and diarrhea that can result in fatality.

The episode brought about the recall of 170 million eggs, the most significant such memory in the American background. When FDA assessors saw Wright County Egg, owned by Austin DeCoster, in August 2010, after identifying that its items were partly responsible for the outbreak, they found barns plagued with mice, flies, and maggots. Manure pits were leaking. In some areas, manure was stacked 8 feet high. Hens utilized the loads as ramps to accessibility laying boxes. Wild birds, which are possible carriers of salmonella, trembled about. The barns were littered with dead, decaying poultries.

What's stunning is that farms possessed by DeCoster were associated with an episode that happened in the Northeast in 1987. Eggs triggered the contamination that upset 500 and eliminated nine from farms had by DeCoster.

In the early 1990s, Maryland regulatory authorities banned the sale of DeCoster eggs in the state after they were discovered to be contaminated with salmonella. Iowa proclaimed a "habitual" wrongdoer, the business had many environmental and safety, and security infractions.

DESPITE THE WARNINGS, the FDA did not check DeCoster's Iowa barns until after the 2010 breakout. And when FDA examiners discovered "serious inconsistencies" in food-safety laws, the company's punishment included a caution letter claiming that failure to initiate punctual "restorative actions" could lead to "regulative activity being taken." In November, one month after the letter was sent by mail, the FDA allowed DeCoster to resume offering fresh eggs.

Complying with a 2007 salmonella episode in which 425 people in 44 states were sickened by peanut butter generated by ConAgra and sold under the Peter Frying Pan and Great Worth brands, the FDA increased its examination task at peanut-processing facilities.

Regrettably, the firm missed out on a plant possessed by the Peanut Corporation of America in Blakely, Georgia. It was a deadly omission. In 2008 and 2009, items from that plant upset 714 people in 46 states and Canada and killed nine. When they did arrive, FDA examiners located mold and mildew on the walls and handling equipment covered in slime.

Detectives for a congressional committee showed something a lot more problematic: internal emails suggesting that Peanut Company's proprietor, Stewart Parnell, knew about the salmonella at his plant and also purchased products that tested positive for the germs to be shipped. "Transform them loose," Parnell wrote to a plant manager in one message. He added that results revealing contamination would certainly set you back the firm "significant $$$$$."

In unusual circumstances of prosecutorial vigor, the FDA, which lacks authority to file criminal fees, partnered with the Justice Department to pursue a situation. Yet, four years passed before costs were filed. (Parnell has begged not guilty.) In the meantime, the lawsuit-besieged Peanut Firm filed for insolvency. "I have never seen a more clear instance that required prosecution," says William Marler, a Seattle-based lawyer that has stood for food-poisoning targets in court for two decades.

Marler claims that the FDA has only twice been successful in going after a notable criminal instance during the past two decades. In 1998, for example, Odwalla, a fruit-juice bottler based in The golden state, begged guilty to 16 violation charges and also agreed to pay penalties completing $1.5 million-- hardly a burdensome task, given that the business's E. coli-- polluted apple juice eliminated a Colorado young child. Three years later, Odwalla's owners sold out to Coca-Cola for $181 million.

The FDA's duties include evaluating fish and shellfish marketed in the USA. Eighty-four percent of it is now imported, and fifty percent of the imports are from Asia.

The FDA is charged with maintaining drug-tainted fish out of our food supply. Yet, according to a 2011 GAO report, the agency is hardly trying: The FDA tested only one out of 1,000 imported seafood products-- or 0.1 percent-- for 16 chemicals. By contrast, Canada examines 50 out of every 1,000 products for over 40 chemicals; Japan evaluates 110 out of every 1,000 for 57.

Here are five reasons every person must be worried about genetically engineered foods:

1. GMOs enhance the business control of our food.

Increasingly, the food sector is controlled by a handful of influential corporations that manage almost every aspect of exactly how our food is produced. Monsanto, as an example, now has an incredible variety of seed firms that were when its rivals. For people that get groceries, it's distressing to recognize that the dozens of brand names in the grocery store are possessed mainly by a couple of parent companies. When a business has an online syndicate on an entire aisle of the food store or a set of farming items, they make decisions based on what's best for their earnings, not ideal for their consumers or the world.

This consolidation of control is straightforward in the corporations that develop GMOs. Biotech companies like Monsanto, Dow, Dupont, and Syngenta create GMO seeds and an entire system of food manufacturing.

Monsanto soybeans that are engineered to stand up to Roundup, the herbicide produced by Monsanto. If a farmer plants those soybeans, they're going to purchase Roundup.

Neither is it easy for farmers to avoid growing GMOs. In our significantly combined food market, farmers have fewer and fewer alternatives, and the advice they hear every which way is "go GMO." This occurs not just in the United States but increasingly worldwide also.

2. GMOs Should be Illegal – Outlawed in 7 countries but the USA.

GMOs often don't even do what they're intended to do. You have most likely heard that "we require GMOs to feed the world" on the anticipation that just GMO plants have a high adequate yield to stay on top of a growing population. The difficulty is that it just isn't real. Research studies on particular GMO plants have little to no yield improvements, and long-term studies on chemical-free farming reveal that organic can match traditional agriculture's returns.

In other situations, biotech firms declare that their GMOs have nutritional benefits or will certainly address some other pending dilemmas. Take "gold rice," which is supposed to heal vitamin A deficiency in the developing world.

Plenty of non-GMO foods, like carrots and beautiful potatoes, are abundant in Vitamin A and do not require millions of bucks to generate and grow. Golden rice makes for good public relations, but it will not fix the globe's nutritional troubles.

Other times, GMO crops serve no functional objective whatsoever-- at least for individuals who eat them. Do we genuinely require scientific research to prevent apples from transforming brownish when we cut them? Non-browning GMO apples are purely an advertising scheme. A means to make create look fresher than it is and make life simpler for CPUs that want to sell cut-up apples to fast food chains.

3. A lot more GMO methods and different chemical use.

Many GMO crops are specially crafted to stand up to particular cancer-causing herbicides. So growing GMOs indicate that farmers use the associated chemicals and use them in even more ways when they use GMO crops. Those chemicals end up in the environment and threaten the health and wellness of farmers and farmworkers and the areas they live in. The system for seeing that these chemicals don't wind up in our food is fragile.

Even worse, the pests are catching up due to increased chemical usage. Gradually, weeds and pests progress a resistance to the chemicals we utilize versus them. The more we make use of them, the quicker they adapt. Many common herbicides are no longer effective on our farms, which leaves biotech firms to encourage the use of harsher chemicals, which the parasites will ultimately adjust to ... leading to an arms race of unsafe chemicals where people and the environment will unavoidably be the losers.

4. GMOs and organics CAN NOT exist together.

Attempting to keep a ranch GMO-free is more challenging than you might assume. Some GMOs do not stay put where they're grown. It's relatively common for them to contaminate neighboring farms or perhaps farms several miles away when plant pollen from GMO crops wanders on the wind. Seed products can be contaminated with GMOs, as well. In 2013, an Oregon farmer located GMO wheat in his field-- an unauthorized crop that hasn't been field-tested since 2005. This is a significant problem for natural farmers that are not permitted to use GMOs.

5. The study is prejudiced.

There is a large amount of research around GMOs' safety and security and results, yet way too much of it is carried out, funded, or otherwise influenced by the biotech sector. This consists of a research study done at public universities.

When GMO supporters assert a "clinical agreement" concerning GMOs or that leading scientific organizations are on their side, they're frequently cherry-picking factors from reports that cast the argument more nuanced. We need much more independent long-term safety and security study right into the impacts of GMOs on our health and the environment.

There are lots of excellent factors to be worried about harmful GMOs. But also for customers concerned, it's not constantly clear in the market where these crops wind up-- and biotech and food firms are combating with every available resource to quit brand-new requirements that GMO foods be identified.

Fat Loss - Obesity Myths and BIG LIES

Sugar – is the real culprit causing obesity and in many cases, diabetes. There is an epidemic of obesity in children, teenagers, and adults. Fat will not make you fat – that is a myth and a big lie. Sugar makes you fat. Sugar comes from cakes, pies, pastries, candy, high sugar carbs, and soft sugar drinks.

Stop eating so much sugar, and your waist will shrink to normal size. Fat does not make you fat – SUGAR MAKES YOU FAT! Eating too much sugar is the main cause of Obesity and Diabetes.

Cocaine, as well as heroin, are dangerous because they are habit-forming as well as harmful-- and so is sugar, he claims. "We MUST wean ourselves off. We SHOULD de-sweeten our lives.

" The food market has made it right into a diet staple because they know you purchase a lot more when they do. This is their hook. If some deceitful grain supplier went out and tied your breakfast cereal with morphine to acquire even more, what would you think about that? They do it with sugar rather."

The Bitter Truth About Sugar has actually made waves in America and was released by the 4th Estate in the UK. As a pediatrician specializing in dealing with obese children in San Francisco, he has spent 16 years examining the impacts of sugar on the main nerves, metabolic rate, and disease. He concludes that the rivers of Coca-Cola and Pepsi consumed by young people today have as much to do with obesity as the mountains of burgers.

That does not mean hamburgers are okay. "The play I'm making is not sugar per se. The play I'm making is insulin," he says. Foods that elevate insulin degrees in the body are expensive the trouble.

He criticizes insulin for 75% to 80% of all weight problems. He claims that insulin is the hormonal agent which causes power to be kept in fat cells. Sugar energy is one of the most outright of those. However, there are three other categories: trans fats (which get on the escape), alcohol (which children do not consume), and dietary amino acids.

These amino acids are found in corn-fed American beef. "In grass-fed beef, there are no problems, like in Argentina," he claimed. "Which's why the Argentinians are doing penalty. The Argentinians have a meat-based diet plan ... I love their meat. It is red, it's not marbled, it's a little tougher to reduce, but it's incredibly delicious. As well as, it's grass-fed. That's what cows are expected to consume-- lawn.

" We [in the US] feed them corn, and the reason is twofold-- one, we don't have sufficient land and, 2, when you feed them corn, they fatten up. It normally takes 18 months to obtain a cow from birth to massacre. Today, it takes six weeks to get all that marbling in the meat. That's muscular tissue insulin resistance. So that animal has the very same disease we do. It's just that we slaughter them before they get sick."

However, his larger message is that economic sugar is threatening lives. It has been contributed to your diet plan, "youngsters have accessibility" to it, and it is there in all kinds of foods that don't require it, he claims. When high-fat foods were criticized for making us obese-- BIG FAT EXISTS, manufacturers rolled over each other to produce low-fat products. However, to make them palatable, they sugarcoated, triggering much more significant troubles.

Cutting calories is not the response since "a calorie is not a calorie." The impact of a calorie in sugar varies from the result of a calorie in lean grass-fed beef. And also, added sugar is frequently camouflaged in food labeling under carbohydrates and myriad various names, from sugar to diastatic malt and dextrose. Fructose-- included in multiple types of sugar-- is the most significant trouble, and high-fructose corn syrup, utilized extensively by food producers in the United States, is the primary resource.

Lustig states he has been under attack from the food sector; however, declares they have not managed to fault the scientific research. "The food industry wants to misinterpret since they intend to challenge me. They intend to paint me as this zealot. They intend to repaint me as someone that does not have the science. But we do," he says.

Proof of dietary effects on the body is tough to accumulate. People repeatedly hinge on food journals or neglect what they consume. Randomized regulated tests are impossible because every person reverts to a much more regular consuming pattern after months.

Yet his sugar argument is greater than theory, he says, pointing out a current study in outdoors journal And also One, of which he was among the authors. In nations where individuals had higher access to sugar, there were higher degrees of diabetic issues.

Rates of diabetes increased by 1.1% for every 150 kcal of sugar offered for each person every day-- regarding the amount in a container of Coke. Movie critics suggested sugar accessibility was not the like sugar eaten, but Lustig and his associates claim it is the closest estimation they might obtain.

Yet so is the US federal government, he states. "Federal government has linked its wagon to the food sector since, at least in America, 6% of our exports are food. That includes the legal as well as executive branches. So the White House is in bed with the food sector, and Congress apologizes for the food sector."

Court action may be the means to go, he says, suggesting challenging the security of fructose contributed to food and food labeling that stops working to tell you what has been included and what has been obtained. In addition, fruit juice is unhealthy because all the fiber enables the natural sugars to be processed without being saved as fat has been eliminated.

Fruit is not all that healthy and balanced either due to the amount of fructose which looks like sugar So iff you eat fruit-- then a minimum of consuming the whole fruit.

It is not an instance of eliminating sugar from the diet plan, just ascertaining the percentage that is not harmful! The American Heart Organization 2009 released a statement, of which Lustig was a co-author, saying Americans took in 22 tpsps of SUGAR a day. That requires 6 for females and nine for guys OR much less!

" That's a reduction by 2 thirds to three quarters. Is that zero? No. But that's a big decrease. That gets us below our toxic limit. Our livers can metabolize some fructose; they simply can not metabolize the tremendous amount that we've been revealed to by the food market.

Therefore the goal is to obtain sugar out of foods that do not require it, like salad dressing, bread, and barbecue sauce." There is an easy means to do it. "Eat real food."

The Keto plan is a great place to start with intermediate fasting and eating protein and low carbs.

The Public School Scam. Do Public Schools and Universities teach Communism?

Our public schools and our top Universities have been infiltrated by a left ideology or communist doctrine and philosophy. Many universities are funded by communist and communist countries such as China.

The wave of teacher strikes throughout the nation, focusing on killing education and learning reforms such as charter schools, has focused attention on the ideological background of instructors. As a result, several Americans are asking: "Why are instructors into communism or socialism?"

Tom Rademacher, a Minnesota instructor of the year who creates the Education Blog post, says that teachers "are mainly liberals," and the evidence backs him up. For example, the Washington Message reported on a study conducted by Verdant Labs using political-contribution data on the Democrat-Republican divide based on task kind.

While it is unsurprising that there are 90 Democrats for every 10 Republicans among actors and starlets, several would certainly be amazed to uncover that instructors are, in fact, as liberal or even much more so than those in acting.

Amongst English educators, there are 97 Democrats for every 3 Republicans, with the percentage being much more prejudiced amongst health and wellness teachers, with 99 Democrats for every single Republican politician.

While there are many more Republicans among mathematics and scientific research teachers, there are 87 Democrats for each 13 Republicans amongst secondary school teachers. It is essential to understand the influence of schools of education and learning, which train prospective educators, on instructors' political and ideological leanings.

Dr. Greg Forster, Friedman Fellow at the school-choice organization EdChoice and a top education and learning researcher, in 2014 created that university education and learning schools indoctrinate future teachers in left-wing ideological backgrounds.

"Peruse the course directory of any kind of major education and learning institution, or read the Twitter feeds of the teachers," observes Forster, as well as you will indeed "find yourself swimming in an ocean of hard-left belief: 'essential theory' that states there is no truth, only power; 'intersectionality' that states you're not enabled to be best regarding anything unless you're right (that is, left) about every little thing; cheerleading for each fashionable left-leaning reason."

Forster notes, "The main concept in the ideology that rules education and learning institutions, with an iron fist, is that genuine rearing means the freedom of the oppressed."

Forster's monitorings mirror my study, co-authored with Gwynne Spann, on The golden state education and learning colleges.

Imagine, for instance, a forty-year-old instructor in The golden state who received their training two decades previously at The golden state State University Dominguez Hills college of education, which remains in the Los Angeles area. What was that educator's training like?

The CSUDH ed college claimed that its approach was affected by Brazilian leftist education philosopher Paulo Freire, who The New York City Times called the leading "radical educator worldwide."

Freire famously composed The Pedagogy of the Oppressed. Manhattan Institute fellow Sol Stern called "an optimistic political system requiring the topple of capitalist hegemony and the production of classless societies."

Freire-inspired analyses were obligatory at CSUDH, such as a classroom-management book that included a phase by Peter McLaren, one of Freire's leading American adherents.

Mentioning Karl Marx, McLaren created: "A critique of international capitalism and its partnership to patriarchy, homophobia, and bigotry is essential to the transformative politics of classroom freedom." That forty-year-old The golden state teacher would certainly not have been alone in being indoctrinated by Freire-influenced teacher-training programs.

Is it any wonder then that these schools' products and training courses are now operating strike lines and pressing leftist educational programs on children?

The very best option, then, is to offer mom's and dad's school choices, such as interest-bearing education accounts for private schools. In addition, colleges of selection can often hire instructors based on subject-matter expertise rather than an ed college credential.

Most College or University educators are taught from a young age in grade school through high school, then through College, how to be a good communist. What do you think they will lead when they educate our young minds in school?

These people have no idea what they are doing to a FREE country and the sensitive minds of our young people. They have been BRAIN-WASHED.

Humans Use Only 10% of Their Brains – BIG LIE

A consistent myth assumes that 90% of the brain lies dormant in people, awaiting evolution to catch up. It leaves children picturing what sort of telepathic beings they could be if only they could harness the other 90% of their brain. T he Khazarians want you to think your brain is being wasted and you're not very intelligent. This lowers your self-esteem and passion for life. Khazarians are good at brainwashing and mind control.

In truth, humans use every one of their minds inside their brains. There is no clinical evidence to recommend otherwise, and the 10% myth most likely originates from a misquote credited to Albert Einstein. Of course, Einstein was a con artist.

Global Warming. Is it Really a Concern?

31,000 scientists say "no convincing evidence."

31,000 researchers reject GLOBAL warming and state "no convincing proof" that humans can or will create global warming? 97% of the climate researchers surveyed believe "ordinary worldwide temperatures have risen" throughout the past century, as well as 97% assume the human task is a substantial contributing factor in transforming mean international temperatures. What is the significance of these stats? This case of global warming is closed. It's absurd!

The Planet is heating, and human activity is a significant element; 31,000 researchers state there is "no convincing proof" that human beings can or will trigger "catastrophic" heating of the atmosphere.

GLOBAL WARMING: DISINFORMATION

Global warming is a fraudulent TAX strategy. The globalist wants to tax humans more for living on planet earth. Who benefits? The pockets of criminal politicians.

By constantly railing about "carbon emissions," Trudeau, Obama, and others motivate individuals to think about CO₂ as something "dirty," like residue, which genuinely is carbon. However, calling CO₂ would aid the public in remembering that it is an invisible, odorless gas essential to plant photosynthesis. IF ALL THE CO₂ disappeared – then all plants and trees would die. So why do the democrats want this to happen? Plants and trees depend on CO₂ for survival. Are they just stupid or what?

The Khazarians have infiltrated mainly the democrat part. However, a few Khazarian RYNOS have leaked in. Khazarians are about the DEATH AND DESTRUCTION of humans and earth. However, they have a clever way of twisting their agendas to sound truthful. IT'S ALL A LIE!

More significant than any other occasion, that single hearing before the Energy and Natural Resources Board publicly started the climate scare, the greatest deceptiveness in the background. It created an unholy partnership between a bureaucrat and a politician. The U.N. bolstered and the preferred press-- leading to the hoax being accepted in federal governments, market conference rooms, schools, and churches worldwide.

The Electric Car SCAM!

The Khazarian Mafia bury history NOT only about electric cars but on lots of stuff. They steal the technology, then bury them when it is not profitable. Electric cars were mysteriously reinvented 100 years later.

Oil was much more beneficial for the Khazarian Mafia. Experts say the electric car will never be a mainstream vehicle – one reason is; that it is cost-prohibitive.

The KKK was the brainchild of DEMOCRATS

Ku Klux Klan in Florida - DEMOCRAT Club Exposed

Democrats started KKK.

Hon. The Chairman of the Sub-Ku Klux Committee of Florida, Horace Maynard, faced a difficult predicament in late November of 1871. The members of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Leon County, Florida, were in an extreme state of alarm, and this was brought to the committee chairman's attention.

They were fretted about the recent outing of the Ku Klux department of their political club before the Committee—they were afraid of the consequences of their exposure. Several participants of the Autonomous organization were preparing to run away to Texas, fearing that the same fate may be in store for them that their South Carolina sympathizers experienced.

Republicans in Leon Region were also worried because individuals condemned them for revealing the Ku Klux men's trick to the Board. therefore, the chairman considered his

The Ku Klux Klan originally started in Tennessee but infiltrated into Alabama's bordering regions in 1867 or so. It promptly increased into the state, creating dens that covered the entire former Confederacy by the end of 1868.

Members of the Klan originated from all various economic and social degrees. Still, they were united because the huge bulk of them were boys, and nearly all of them were associated with the Democratic Celebration.

The Klan often tended to thrive specifically well in rural areas of the South, like Leon Area in Florida. Consequently, it is not shocking that Klan associations were discovered within the Young Men's Autonomous Club of this county-the participants was ideal candidates for Ku Klux employment.

It is likewise predictable that the Klansmen were kipped down by Republicans, who tended to be a lot more in support of African American rights and less energetic on their inner racist beliefs than the Democrats.

The idea of escaping to Texas to escape punishment was a specific suggestion for those who needed to hide in the late nineteenth century. Texas was an all-new state, and since it was so country, it gave an excellent hiding ground for bad guys and refugees.

The Klansmen (KKK) of the Democratic Event. The Leon Region probably did flee to Texas for a while to run away from the repercussions of the discovery of their KKK affiliation; however, their heir experience shows that Klan membership was a usual political faction within several sections of the Democratic Celebration and exposes the reaction to KKK participation in postbellum culture.

Which Celebration was for Civil Liberty?!

The big lie is this; Democrat voters, even today, think the democrats were ideal civil leaders. It's a gigantic LIE. When do you consider racial equality and civil liberties, which political party enters your mind? The Republicans? Or the Democrats? Most people would probably claim the Democrats. Yet this response is incorrect.

Since it began in 1829, the Democratic Party has fought against every significant civil liberties initiative and has a lengthy background of discrimination.

The Democratic Party wanted enslavement, started the Civil Battle, opposed Restoration, established the Ku Klux Klan, enforced segregation, carried out lynchings, and dealt with the civil rights acts of the 1950s and 1960s. In contrast, the Republican politician Party was founded in 1854 as an anti-slavery event. Its mission was to quit the spread of enslavement into the brand-new western areas to abolish it completely.

This effort, nevertheless, was dealt a major impact by the High court. In the 1857 instance of Dred Scott v. Sandford, the court ruled that enslaved people aren't people; they're home. The seven justices that enacted favor of slavery? All Democrats. The two justices who dissented? Both Republicans.

A bloody civil war ultimately solved the enslavement inquiry. The commander-in-chief throughout that war was the very first Republican politician President Abraham Lincoln-- the man that released the enslaved people. Then, six days after the Confederate army surrendered, John Wilkes Booth, a Democrat, assassinated Head of state Lincoln.

Lincoln's vice president, a Democrat named Andrew Johnson, presumed the presidency. But Johnson adamantly opposed Lincoln's plan to incorporate the recently released servants into the South's financial and caste. Johnson and the Democratic Celebration were unified in their opposition to the 13th Change, which eliminated enslavement; the 14th Amendment provided blacks citizenship; and the 15th Change, which provided blacks the vote.

All three passed only due to universal Republican assistance. Throughout the age of Repair, federal soldiers pointed in the south helped safeguard legal rights for the newly released servants. In addition, numerous black men were chosen to southern state legislatures as Republican politicians, and 22 black Republicans served in the US Congress by 1900.

The Democrats did not choose a black male for Congress till 1935. But after Reconstruction ended, when the federal soldiers went residence, Democrats barked back into power in the South. They quickly reestablished white superiority across the region with measures like black codes-- laws that limited the capability of blacks to possess residential property and run businesses.

And also imposed poll taxes and literacy examinations, used to overturn the black person's right to vote. And also, just how was all of this imposed? By fear-- much of it initiated by the Ku Klux Klan, started by a Democrat, Nathan Bedford Forrest.

As chronicler Eric Foner - himself a Democrat - notes: "Essentially, the Klan was a military force offering the passions of the Democratic Celebration." President Woodrow Wilson, a Democrat, shared several sights with the Klan. He re-segregated several federal agencies and evaluated the first movie ever before dipped into the White House - the racist film "The Birth of a Nation," initially entitled "The Clansman."

A few decades later, the just severe legislative resistance to the spots Civil liberty Act of 1964 came from Democrats. Eighty percent of Republicans in Congress supported the costs. Less than 70 percent of Democrats did. Democratic legislators filibustered the bill for 75 days until Republicans mustered the few additional ballots required to damage the logjam.

As well as when all of their initiatives to oppress blacks, maintain them oppressed, and keep them from voting had stopped working, the Democrats developed a new approach: If black people were most likely to elect, they could as well choose Democrats. As Head Of State Lyndon Johnson was supposed to have said about the Civil liberty Act, "I'll have them n  s voting Democrat for two hundred years."

So currently, the Democratic Party flourishes on the ballots of the very people it has spent much of its history oppressing. Democrats falsely claim that the Republican politician Event is the villain when in reality, the failed policies of the Democratic Celebration have kept blacks down.

Substantial government welfare has annihilated the black family members. Opposition to college choice has kept them entrapped in falling short. Political correctness policing has left black areas helpless against terrible criminal activity.

The Tax Scam. Are Income Taxes Legal?

According to Dr. Ron Paul (R-Senator for more than 30 years), no one should pay federal income tax.

Many people forget that our country was founded upon people running from an unjust and evil, tyrannical King who placed unnecessary taxes on the people of England. Paying taxes is a form of slavery!

Rep. Ron Paul (Tex.) say the real problem is that the federal government believes it has a right to TAKE money from someone who earns it.

"The real unconstitutionality of the tax code and the income tax is how they collect it," Paul said. "It assumes you're guilty until proven innocent, which turns the constitution on its head."

Repealing the income tax was a position that Paul often championed both in Congress and during his three runs for the White House.

"We're halfway there because the founders didn't intend it if you're living in a free society. If you had the proper size government, there would be no income (tax),"

Ron and others claimed that it presupposes that the government owns you and owns 100 percent of what you earn and allows you to keep part of it as long as you "obey the rules and fill out the forms."

"In a free society, you should own all the fruits of your labor, and the whole country would be better off," Paul said.

No matter where you turn, the hand of government has its fingers in every pocket. A recent study by Price Waterhouse shows that 30 different taxes imposed on the production and sale of a loaf of bread account for 27 percent of the average retail price. Buy some new tires, and $36 of every $100 you pay goes to the taxman.

Americans for Tax Reform says total taxes reach 45 percent of the showroom sticker price on the new car price. Add some gas, and 54 percent of what you pay goes for 43 different federal, state, and local taxes than the oil producer and retailer.

Taxes now eat up an incredible 38 percent of the gross income of the average family, a higher peacetime rate of taxation than the American people have ever experienced. By comparison, the typical two-income family in the mid-1950s paid 28 percent of its income in taxes.

Each year, the IRS sends out 8 billion pages of forms and instructions, enough paper to stretch 28 times around the earth. To comply with the U. S. tax code's maze of contradictory rules, deductions, exemptions, and loopholes, Americans are spending 5.4 billion hours and $200 billion each year. And that's not counting the taxes paid.

To put this in perspective, Americans spend more time and money each year on their taxes than it takes to produce every car, truck, and van in the United States.

When the federal income tax was launched back in 1913, it was levied upon only the super-wealthy, the richest one-half of 1 percent of the population, with a top tax rate of only 7 percent. By the end of Herbert Hoover's term in 1933, the maximum rate had skyrocketed 60 percent. By the time Franklin D. Roosevelt was finished in 1945, the top rate was over 90 percent, and exemptions had been lowered to capture the incomes of the middle class for the first time.

Michiganians can take some comfort in the fact that what they pay in taxes to the state of Michigan has been, overall, virtually unchanged since 1996. But the Michigan Senate Fiscal Agency recently reported that when you add the growing burden of local taxes to your state tax bill, the total amounts to 11 percent of personal income. That's just as high as the high-tax days of Governor John Engler's predecessor, former Governor James Blanchard.

In 1913, the average family in America had to work until January 30 before earning enough to satisfy the taxman at all levels. This year, the average American family will work through mid-May to make enough to pay federal, state, and local tax bills.

"Compare this to the plight of medieval serfs," says economist Daniel J. Mitchell of The Heritage Foundation. "They only had to give the lord of the manor a third of their output, and they were considered enslaved people. So what does that make us?" So, how do you like being a SLAVE?

Is Taxation Theft?

"Taxation is theft" is a famous slogan among libertarians. It captures the sentiment that we should hold the state to the same moral standards as non-state actors.

1. Why Taxation Might Be a Form of Theft

Imagine that I have founded a charity organization that helps the poor.¹ But not enough people voluntarily contribute to my charity, so many of the poor remain hungry. I decide to solve the problem by approaching well-off people on the street, pointing a gun at them, and demanding their money. I funnel the money into my charity, and the poor are fed and clothed at last.

In this scenario, I would be called a thief. Why? The answer seems to be: because I am taking other people's property without their consent. The italicized phrase just seems to be what "theft" means.

"Taking without consent" includes taking by means of a threat of force issued against other people, as in this example. After taking it, this fact is not altered by what I do with the money. You wouldn't say, "Oh, you gave the money to the poor? In that case, taking people's property without consent wasn't theft." You might claim that it was a socially beneficial theft, but it was still theft.

Now compare the case of taxation. When the government "taxes" citizens, this means that the government demands money from each citizen under a threat of force: if you do not pay, armed agents hired by the government will take you away and lock you in a cage. This looks like about as clear a case as taking people's property without consent. So the government is a thief. This conclusion is not changed because the government uses the money for a good cause (if it does so). That might make taxation a socially beneficial kind of theft, but it is still theft.

2. Three Counter-Arguments

Most people are reluctant to call taxation theft. So how might one avoid saying this? Following are three arguments one might try, together with the most obvious responses.

First Argument

Taxation is not theft because citizens have agreed to pay taxes. This is part of the “social contract,” which is a kind of agreement between citizens and the government, whereby the citizens agree to pay taxes and obey the laws in return for the government’s protection. You indicate that you accept the social contract by using government services (such as roads, schools, and police) and remaining present in the government’s territory.²

Reply to First Argument

There simply isn’t any such contract.³ The government has never actually written up and offered such a contract, nor has anyone signed it.

Still, the use of government services might imply an agreement to pay for those services if people who didn’t use the services were not required to pay. But in fact, the government forces citizens to pay taxes regardless of whether they use government services or not. Therefore, the fact that you use government services does not indicate whether you agree to pay taxes.

Remaining present in “the government’s territory” also does not indicate agreement to the putative social contract. This is because the government does not own all the land that it claims as “its territory”; this land is, instead, mainly owned by private individuals. If I own some land that other people are using, I can demand that the other people either pay me money or vacate my land. But if I see some people on their land, I cannot demand that they either pay me money or vacate their own land. If I do that, I am a thief. Similarly, when the government demands that we either pay it money or vacate our land, the government acts as a thief.

Second Argument

The government can’t be a thief because it is the government that defines property rights through its laws. The government can simply make laws that *say that the money you are supposed to pay in taxes isn't yours in the first place; it is the government's money.*⁴

Reply to Second Argument

The second argument turns on the claims (i) that there are no property rights independent of government laws and (ii) that the government can create property rights simply by declaring that something belongs to someone. There is no apparent reason to believe either (i) or (ii), and both claims are counter-intuitive.

Imagine traveling to a remote region outside any government's jurisdiction, where you find a hermit living off the land. The hermit hunts with a spear of his own making, which you find interesting. You decide (without the hermit's consent) to take the spear with you when you leave. It would seem correct to say that you "stole" the spear. This shows the implausibility of (i).

Next, imagine that you are a slave in the nineteenth-century American South. Suppose you decide to escape from your master without your master's consent. If (ii) is true, you would violate your master's rights by stealing yourself. Note that you would not merely be violating a legal right; if (ii) is true, the government creates moral rights and obligations through its laws so that you would be violating your master's moral rights. This shows the implausibility of (ii).

Third Argument

*Taxes are just the price the government charges for providing law and order. Without taxation, the government would collapse, all social order would break down, and then you wouldn't have any money. Taxation is unlike theft because thieves do not provide valuable services, let alone services that enable you to make the same money that they are taking a portion of.*⁵

Reply to Third Argument

Imagine that I hold you up at gunpoint and take $20 from you. I also leave one of my books behind in exchange. When you see me later without my gun, you call me a thief and demand your money back. "Oh no," I say, "I am no thief, for I gave you something valuable in exchange. True, you never asked for the book, but it's a good book, worth much more than $20."

This reply on my part would be confused. It doesn't matter that I gave you a good in exchange, and it doesn't matter whether the book is worth more than $20. What matters is that I took your money without your consent.

The lesson: Taking people's property without consent is theft, even if you also benefit them and even if you helped them obtain that same property.

3. So, What if Taxation Is Theft?

If taxation is theft, does it follow that we must abolish all taxation? Not necessarily. Some thefts might be justified. For example, if you have to steal a loaf of bread to survive, you are justified in doing so. Similarly, if necessary, the government might be justified in taxing to prevent some terrible outcome, such as a breakdown of social order.

Why, then, does it matter whether taxation is theft? Because although theft can be justified, it is usually unjustified. It is wrong to steal without having an excellent reason. What count as good enough reasons is beyond the scope of this short article. But as an example, you are not justified in stealing money, say, so that you can buy a nice painting for your wall. Similarly, if taxation is theft, then it would probably be wrong to tax people, say, to pay for an art museum.

In other words, the "taxation is theft" thesis has the effect of raising the standards for justified use of taxes. When the government plans to spend money on something (support for the arts, a space program, a national retirement program, and so on), one should ask: would it be permissible to steal from people in order to run this sort of program? If not, then it is not permissible to tax people in order to run the program, since taxation is theft. Source

Communism Infiltrated Hollywood

Spreading the Red Stain: The Communist Infiltration of Hollywood

Pro-communist writers, actors, and filmmakers on the “Hollywood blacklist” of the 1940s and 1950s have in recent years gotten positive press. However, the blacklist itself is now often viewed as an example of government censorship, a product of the heavy-handed tactics of the now-defunct House Un-American Activities Committee, which aimed to ban and suppress communist movements in the United States.

Communism and Satanism have been the trend in Hollywood since their conception. The Khazarians created Hollywood as a propaganda arm for brainwashing purposes. They create subliminal messaging in Hollywood movies, TV sitcoms, and the news. The CIA controls Hollywood and takes orders from the Khazarian Mafia.

But the situation is more complicated than these current views admit. History shows many on the blacklist may have been placed there for good reason since many were revealed to have worked as Soviet agents and shaped pro-communist narratives through film.

A closer look reveals a circle of individuals—some taking direct guidance from Soviet Russia—who were advocating for the violent overthrow of the U.S. government. The creation of the Hollywood blacklist was a response to this circle that had transformed America’s entertainment industry into the propaganda tool of a murderous, totalitarian regime while also attacking the American people’s values and ways of life.

Ahead of World War II, many members of the Communist Party of Germany, the second-largest communist group outside Russia, left Germany for other parts of the world.

Many of these individuals were rejected as undesirables by other developed nations, such as the United Kingdom, so they headed for the United States. After their arrival, many writers and filmmakers joined the ranks of American Communist Party groups.

This gave rise to popular front movements supporting Soviet infiltration of art and culture venues and the penetration of political institutions in the mid-1930s. With this system, communists planned to do what the brutal dictators Vladimir Lenin and Josef Stalin had done successfully in Soviet Russia: transform the entertainment industry into a tool to spread communist ideology and propaganda.

Cultural Subversion

The scheme began in 1930s Hollywood with influential film industry leftists such as Yip Harburg, songwriter for “The Wizard of Oz” and of the song “And Russia Is Her Name” used in the film “The Song of Russia.” Harburg was one of the leading pro-Soviet artists in Hollywood’s motion picture industry.

Harburg and other pro-Soviets wielded psychological influence over the movie-going public. They were shaping the narratives that American audiences—and the world at large—were taking in through cinema.

Many of these Hollywood writers, producers, and directors, some of whom were staunch Communist Party members, made films that contained pro-communist and pro-socialist ideas and ideologies. In a way, a large portion of the movie of that earlier era were art projects that were thinly disguised vehicles for subtle forms of communist indoctrination techniques—vehicles meant to replace the American principles of liberty and individual rights with ideologies of atheism and class struggle.

Among these was John Garfield, a well-known actor. In a June 1950 issue of the Red Channels—a publication dedicated to exposing communism in the entertainment industry—was revealed to have connections with 17 different communist organizations.

The enthusiasm for using movies to deliver propaganda came from the top of the Soviet regime. Kenneth L. Billingsley writes in his book “Hollywood’s Missing Movies” that Stalin was an ardent cinephile who was tremendously excited by the promise that film had for extolling communist ideals.

The use of film as a propaganda tool dates back to the early years of the communist movement.

Bolshevik dictator Lenin was the first communist leader to recognize the importance of enacting thought manipulation through moving pictures worldwide.

In 1919, (the Communist International) were in their respective infancies, Lenin is reported to have declared to his commissar of education, Anatoly Lunacharsky, “You must always consider that, of all the arts, the motion picture is for us the most important.”

‘Turn It Against Them’

Billingsley points out that the Communist Party USA (CPUSA) agenda was made clear by people such as communist agent and activist Willi Münzenberg, a former member of the Communist Party of Germany. After fleeing to America, he quickly embedded himself firmly within the Hollywood establishment as a pro-Soviet and pro-communist propagandist and activist.

Referring to the film industry, Münzenberg wrote in a 1925 article for the CPUSA newspaper Daily Worker that “one of the most pressing tasks confronting the Communist Party in the field of propaganda, is the conquest of this fundamental propaganda unit, until now the monopoly of the ruling class.”

He added, “We must wrest it from them and turn it against them.” Münzenberg believed the 1930s were the perfect time for the American communists and their overseers to strike. The Great Depression was in full swing. As many Americans sought distraction through entertainment, Münzenberg viewed it as a chance to imbue theatergoers against capitalism.

Billingsley writes in his 1998 book, “Hollywood Party: How the Communist Party Seduced the American Film Industry in the 1930s and 1940s,” that V.J. Jerome, who was the CPUSA’s cultural commissar, had set up an official Hollywood branch of the Party by 1935. However, this branch of the Party was a covert unit, hidden from the public eye.

With this secret unit, the CPUSA was free to recruit new Party members clandestinely, infiltrate film industry guilds and unions, and raise money for pro-

Soviet causes.

Among these Communist Party subversives in Hollywood were people like renowned screenwriter Walter Bernstein, who stated in his 1996 autobiography that “we had our sly arithmetic; we could find fronts and make two become one.” In other words, through popular fronts, non-communists would advance the communist agenda, and this would be done in a “sly” way, with the fellow travelers perhaps not realizing they had been used.

Naturally, the authorities became more than a little suspicious about these various shadowy communist activities. Congress responded by forming the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1938 to investigate.

Human Events reporter Allan H. Ryskind states that the House committee “uncovered over 200 Party members in Hollywood.” However, Ryskind says his father, a screenwriter in Hollywood at the time, believes the actual number was closer to 300.

Ryskind says that despite the ongoing investigations by the committee, by the mid-1940s, the American communists had thoroughly infiltrated Hollywood from top to bottom. However, most of them were well hidden—in line with Communist Party doctrine to conceal their aims—and would never publicly acknowledge their Party membership.

Support for Genocidal Systems

In his book “Hollywood Traitors: Blacklisted Screenwriters—Agents of Stalin, Allies of Hitler,” Ryskind writes: “Nothing the Communist Party in America ever did was without direction from the Kremlin. Nothing.”

Those on the Hollywood blacklist were not anti-fascists, but instead switched their allegiances alongside changes in Soviet policy. Included in their activities, Ryskind notes, was the odd courtship that many Communist Party members had with Adolf Hitler’s National Socialist Workers’ (Nazi) Party.

“When Hitler initially threatened Russia, Hollywood’s Party members, under Moscow’s orders by way of Party headquarters in New York, were passionately anti-Nazi,” Ryskind writes. “When Hitler turned his guns against the West—enabled by his 1939 Pact with Stalin—they devoted the whole of their lives to crippling the capacity of the anti-Nazi nations to survive.”

Only after Hitler surprised Stalin with the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union in 1941 did the communists in Hollywood again turn on Hitler.

Communism has infiltrated much of America. Other countries are shocked at how compliant Americans are, and half of America welcomes Communism. There is only one reason for this; they do not know what communism is and the painful effects of the concept once put into action. Does 1/2 of America really want to lose most of its freedoms? Unfortunately, it appears to be the case. Their freedom mean nothing until they lose them. Who says indoctrination and the boiling frog technique don't work? The commies have be very clever indeed.

Communism is estimated to have killed at least 100 million people, yet its crimes have not been fully compiled, and its ideology still persists. The Epoch Times seeks to expose the history and beliefs of this movement, which has been a source of tyranny and destruction since it emerged. Source

The Illuminati Scam.

The following few paragraphs are from the book “Bloodlines of the Illuminati” by Fritz Springmeier. Today, the Illuminati is alive and well.

I do not fear the Illuminati taking over this country and doing away with the Constitution. They took over this country long ago, and the Constitution has not technically been in effect due to Presidential emergency decrees since W.W. II. Being a follower of Christ does not mean we should fear. Perfect love for Almighty God casts out our fear for the situation He has placed us in.

Don't think you are going to vote the Illuminati out of office for a moment. They control the major and minor political parties. They control the process of government, the process of information flow, the creation of money, and finally, they control Christendom. (However, God commands the hearts of His people.)

In the dark unwritten pages of human history, powerful kings discovered how they could control other men by torture, magical practices, wars, politics, religion, and interest taking.

These elite families designed strategies and tactics to perpetuate their occult practices. Layers of secrecy have hidden these families from the profane masses, but many an author has touched upon their existence. I began my research when I got first-hand reports from very informed people that an elite group did rule the world.

My research into Satan's hierarchy went fast because of my skills as a researcher and because I knew from the beginning from my informants about the reality of what I was investigating. My investigation into the Illuminati led me to read and pray about thousands of books.

The quantity of books, newspapers, magazines, manuscripts, and papers that were read to get me to where I am today numbers in the many thousands. I do not know how many nights I stayed up studying and finally collapsed into sleep with blurred red eyes.

In mockery and imitation of God's 12 tribes, Satan blessed 12 bloodlines. One of these bloodlines was the Ishmael bloodline, from which a special elite line developed alchemy, assassination techniques, and other occult practices. One bloodline was Egyptian/Celtic/Druidic, from which Druidism was developed.

One bloodline was in the orient and developed oriental magic. One lineage was from Canaan and the Canaanites. It had the name Astarte, then Astorga, then Ashdor, and then Astor. The tribe of Dan was used as a Judas Iscariot-type seed. The royalty of the tribe of Dan has descended through history as a powerful Satanic bloodline. The 13th or final blood line was copied after God's royal lineage of Jesus.

This was the Satanic House of David with their blood, which they believe is from the House of David and from the lineage of Jesus, who they claim had a wife and children. The 13th Satanic bloodline was instilled with the direct seed of Satan so that they would not only carry Christ's blood--but also the blood of his "brother" Lucifer.

One of the bloodlines goes back to Babylon and is descendent from Nimrod. The occult world has remained hidden from the history books through the years. (Publishing and education have been controlled privileges.) They have ruled behind the scenes.

The Mystery Religions each had their secret three councils which ruled them, and these councils themselves came under the guidance of a secret supreme Grand Council or Governing Body. The Mystery Religions, in turn, led the masses and the political leaders.

When I first began investigating the Illuminati, a clear picture developed that the history books were doctored and that great power was concentrated in the hands of oligarchies worldwide. But who were these influential people? I have been repeatedly asked, "If there is a conspiracy, who are the conspirators?" That is what this book is about.

The history books are full of information about the elites and the masses. Interestingly, upon very close scrutiny and examination, the investigator finds that the elite has perpetuated their power for centuries and has worked hand in glove with other elites to control the masses. Read the free eBook, “Bloodlines of the Illuminati.” It is located on the CIA website.

Satanists Control the Planet. THE TRUTH!

The Satanist Mind

The Khazarian Mafia are Satanists, and they control the planet as we speak. The Khazarians take orders from the Vatican. So, yes, the Pope is a Satanist also.

The satanic Khazarian gangsters have infiltrated every aspect of our lives, especially our local and national governments. They participate in daily, weekly satanic rituals that include human sacrifice. Khazarians create many front groups such as CFR, CIA, FBI, Freemasons, World Economic Forum, the Bilderberg Group, and others. They pretend Jews – they do not have an ounce of Jewish blood, nor do they practice Judaism.

They are SATANISTS!

Satanists already have numerous victims. Most of the sexual and related atrocities perpetrated upon "disappeared" infants and breeder children are done as part of the rituals outlined in manuals of Satanist organizations.

A leading police association has received an expert estimate that of all known murders, one in five is a ritual murder, like the ritual London assassination of Italy's Roberto Calvi, perpetrated by members of Satanist cults. The "Son of Sam" murders in New York and the Cobb County-based cult operations in the so-called "Atlanta child-murders" fit into this pattern.

Satanism is not "just another nutty occult fad." It has been the "Old Religion" since the beginning of time.

The mind of the Satanist is pure evil; the Satanist is a former person who has been transformed into something no longer human. It begins like drug addiction; the prospective recruit to Satanism "gets into something" on a playful impulse but then finds themselves gripped by compulsions - through psychic implantation of addiction energy blockages - which they can no longer control.

Drugs and other exceptional circumstances may be significant collateral features of the initiation, but not necessarily. The key is "letting oneself go" into the depths of acting-out impulses, which combine sexual urges and rage as a unity, and expressing this form of "pleasure" in the form of an act which violates an important precept of one's conscience.

This perversion through acts violates a vital precept of one's conscience, from sex parties to ritual sex to homosexual rituals to torture to pederasty to the animal than human sacrifice. This corruption occurs by implanting energy blockages into the heart center to remove empathy and blockages above the head to remove energy flowing in from God from the chakras above the authority to remove conscience - the definition of a psychopath.

The removal of empathy. There is a Satanic Ritual where 12 psychic daggers - psychic created energy blockages - are implanted around the heart center. A sacrifice is performed, and the heart is removed from the gift and put into a canopic jar.

The energy of the heart removed from the dagger implanted heart and put into the canopic jar together with the heart removed from the sacrifice. The canopic jar is then placed in the earth in a Heart Site, somewhere in the country.

Similarly with the child sacrifice at the Bohemian Grove Ritual, "The Cremation of Care" burning up of empathy. Source

Pedophile Priests and their SCAM.

Some investigators say the Pope and most priests are part of a Satanic cult. As a result, they hide inside the Catholic church.

"Just a little bit of transparency ... I did think that they were moving in that direction." But no!

"Whatever trust they had gained, that trust is eroding fast; people are bailing out of the sinking ship."

Pope Francis called paedophile priests the "tools of Satan".

"If there should emerge even a single case of abuse in the Church, which already in itself represents an atrocity, that case will be faced with the utmost seriousness," he said.

He promised new rules, guidelines and taskforces to assist bishops, which Anne Barrett-Doyle from Bishop Accountability called a "stunning letdown".

One of Australia's most senior Catholics, the Archbishop of Brisbane Mark Coleridge, delivered the homily at the closing mass, admitting the Church had been cruel to victims.

"We have not loved them, we have not blessed them. In that sense, we have been our own worst enemy. We will not go unpunished," Archbishop Coleridge said.

There was a great deal of speaking about the Church's covert data-- implicated Australian priests are among them. Numerous cardinals and bishops informed the top that the Vatican should start publishing its secret documents.

" One of the things you could be clear around is the more than 6,000 clergyman whose names have been provided to the Vatican because they're child abusers," Mr. Saviano said.

" Who are these men? Where are they today? What were their job records?" Archbishop Coleridge informed ABC Information that the Vatican had data on Australian priests charged with abusing youngsters.

He stated he had "not the faintest idea" that many Australian instances were among a chest of allegations resting with Vatican private investigators. But he claimed he would urge the Vatican to quicken the investigations.

" Justice delayed is justice refuted as well as several of these processes take a very long time right here," he stated.

" Survivors have been requesting this for a long time. It's taken us very Private investigators in the Vatican admit transparency has been lacking in the decades since a growing number of abuse claims have been referred to the Holy See.

Asked if the Church had compiled data on its quantities of misuse examinations and records, Archbishop Charles Scicluna of Malta said no.

" I should claim this is a reputable inquiry ... I'm not attempting to conceal behind anything," he stated.

Archbishop Scicluna, a previous Vatican investigator, claimed: "sexual abuse is an outright criminal offense, yet so is a whitewash."

Mr. Saviano claimed the launch of concealed files would be among the most transformative reforms the Catholic Church can make.

" The interest these men have in pursuing youths sexually is a lifelong passion," he claimed.

" It would certainly be excellent to recognize where they are so somebody can watch on them."

Numerous survivors on the sidelines of the high-profile top in Rome were shocked at the variety of females welcomed to participate.

One long-term Vatican analyst asked: "Where the heck are the women?"

The duty of ladies within the Church has remained in the spotlight in recent months after the rape of religious women by clergy members was subjected by Vatican paper l'Osservatore Romano.

The most enthusiastic and forthright speeches supplied to bishops at the Vatican originated from 3 ladies professionals in the Church's kid abuse crisis.

Nigerian religious woman Sis Veronica Openibo read the riot act to bishops in the area, telling them they had put the concerns of abusers ahead of targets.

" The justification that respect be provided to some clergymen under their advanced years and hierarchical placement is inappropriate," she claimed.

" Is it true that most diocesans did nothing about the sexual abuse of children? Some did, and some did not get out of concern or whitewash."

Canon attorney Linda Ghisoni suggested bishops "kneel" before the sufferers and their families.

Sufferers desire 'no resistance' to pedophile clergymen; diocesans have a different interpretation.

" I think possibly one of the most crucial things is that currently, the leading police authorities in the USA are through with the Vatican."

Many religious experts say, "The Pope and his minions are Luciferians and have been for hundreds of years." They hate god! The Pope and his minions are simply actors playing a part.

As Catholic Sex Abuse Crisis Deepens

Pope Francis has summoned church leaders worldwide to the Vatican in February to address the continuing clergy sex abuse crisis. Some bishops say the abuse is due to gay priests within the church.

Andrew Medichini/AP

The uproar over clergy sex abuse in the Catholic church is no longer just about sex abuse. It now touches on Catholic teaching about sexuality in general and even on Pope Francis himself, his agenda, and the future of his papacy.

Last month, a Pennsylvania grand jury reported that more than 300 priests had molested more than a thousand children across six dioceses under investigation. It became clear that the cases were not isolated incidents. The problem of abusive priests and the bishops covering up for them is systemic across the church.

Pope Francis says the crisis is rooted in a culture of clericalism, with priests and bishops so elevated in the church that their word and authority dominate over the experience of the people they serve.

Some of the pope's adversaries in the church, such as Cardinal Raymond Burke, have another explanation: Gay priests are to blame, they say.

Most abuse incidents, Burke told an interviewer last month, consist of "homosexual acts committed with adolescent young men." Source

Most Charities are NOT Legitimate. BIG LIE

The pop-up charity SCAM is usually local, occasionally regional, and seldom national. Mostly they are the products of individual scammers who smell an opportunity to cash in using the name of a victim who may or may not even be real. They count on local press coverage and a quick website.

The Professionals

Then there are the long-term professional operations. They utilize direct mail or telemarketers to solicit millions of dollars in donations from unsuspecting individuals and businesses. They are professional CON-ARTISTS. Are you concerned you've already been scammed or just want to make sure you won't be in the future? Here are some of the worst offenders:

The New World Order – World Economic Forum Scam

Klaus Schwab married into the Khazarian family. It was an arranged marriage. His wife is a Rothschild. They are major promoters of the New World Order. Schwab leads up the WEF (World Economic Forum).

He actively recruits young men and women to learn the tricks and the scams of “how” to bring the New World Order into being. These young recruits will potentially be governors, mayors, and even presidents. Biden is a fan of WEF. Justin Trudeau of Canada, Gavin Newsom, and others are students of WEF. WACKO (Branch Davidian) BIG Government LIES!

It's a story of the federal government gone mad.

A substantial pressure of government representatives descends upon a relaxed neighborhood of spiritual hunters in Texas, instantly opens fire on some 120 males, females and youngsters inside, and also makes use of army helicopters to strafe the substance with dangerous fire, killing a woman in her bed with shots with the roofing.

Representatives kill five people at the compound. Representatives assail a 6th that was away when the raid started as he attempts to make his back into the substance, shot without advising from the side. Moments later on, agents can be listened to rounding off the unarmed man with a final coup de grace.

And 51 days afterward, ending one of the lengthiest sieges in united state law enforcement background, infuriated FBI representatives sent storage tanks collapsing right into the compound, infusing CS tear gas as frightened citizens tremble inside. Walls collide on the occupants, desperately trying to get away from the wreck. And after that, the whole building ruptured into flames, presumably because the CS gas stirred up. Seventy-six individuals, including 20 children, passed away in the holocaust that complies with.

The story is engaging. It is likewise a fairy tale.

Twenty-five years after the verdict of the real-life Branch Davidian standoff near Waco, Texas-- the substance melted on April 19, 1993-- propagandists and activists on the radical right are once more transforming the Waco saga right into claimed evidence that the federal government has run amok. Waco, they say, reveals what the federal government will do to those Americans who have heterodox religious or political views, particularly if they are also gun fanatics.

For a quarter of a century, the Waco fiasco has been pointed out as proof that the government is the enemy of the American people. As a result, an entire industry of films, sites, and underground publications is committed to specifying conspiracy theories purporting to show the government participated in mass murder.

Waco was the solitary crucial trigger stirring up the radical militia activity of the 1990s. It was mentioned by Timothy McVeigh as the reason he murdered 168 people in an Oklahoma City bombing of a government office building on the second anniversary of the Waco fire.

But the mythologizing of the realities of Waco-- where the government undoubtedly made grave mistakes however, did not intentionally accomplish a mass murder of innocents-- is not limited to the radical right. It remains in the mainstream, too.

The current example of this-- and also perhaps one of the most damaging-- came earlier this year in the six-part "Waco" miniseries by the Paramount Network, a primary TV production starring Taylor Kitsch as Davidian leader David Koresh and also produced by siblings Drew and also John Erick Dowdle. An average of 2.4 million individuals enjoyed the first four episodes. NPR called it "a compelling, unfortunate tale," although other reviewers were not so naïve.

The series gets nearly every little thing incorrect. I know this because I covered the Davidian legend as a news reporter, consisting of the trial of 11 making it through Davidians, and also since I have checked out-- unlike, apparently, the Dowdles-- the comprehensive Treasury Department and Justice Division reviews, as well as the extensive 2000 report by Special Advise John C. Danforth, a previous Republican legislator from Missouri.

The Davidians were hardly the calm sufferers the Dowdles paint them as. The search warrant for the first raid was based on solid evidence the Davidians were manufacturing, using, and selling prohibited tools and silencers. Indeed, 48 completely automatic machine guns were found in the ashes after the fire. Moreover, Koresh taught frequently that Armageddon was approaching, which his fans would certainly need to satisfy the forces of "Babylon"-- the government-- with force.

As well as when Koresh discovered 45 minutes before the brewing Feb. 28, 1993, raid on the compound, he utilized the time to order the men in the team to recover heavy weapons and go to the 2nd story of the major structure.

With windows prepared like firing ports, the Davidians, wearing ammo vests sewn by the Davidian ladies months previously, drizzled down deadly fire on getting here agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, killing four wounding some two dozen others. (After the botched ATF raid, the FBI took over for the rest of the siege, never firing a shot.). It's still an issue of dispute who fired first, although the miniseries strongly recommends that it was the authorities.

And also, ATF agents might have first shot a pet approaching them, triggering the firefight. But three press reporters that existed that day have each testified that they thought the Davidians fired initially.

In contrast to the claims of "Waco," there was no gunfire from the three helicopters-- though Davidians did shoot at them, forcing them to the ground. In A Similar Way, Michael Schroeder, who was off the substance when the raid took place, did attempt to creep back in later that afternoon with two various other Davidians. But he was not an unarmed man murdered by the ATF. The truth is that Schroeder ambushed the representatives when he found them and was fired deadly in feedback.

Unlike some publicity, "Waco" does not definitively claim that the federal government started the April 19 fire, but it strongly implies that. At one factor, it shows a Davidian putting out a tiny fire brought on by the CS gas or the containers used to infuse it. And also alludes to the notion that CS gas is flammable and that it would be a "war crime" to use it against civilians or others.

Although a 1999 survey revealed 61% of Americans believed the government started the fire, none of that is true. The Davidians themselves certainly lighted the fire. Independent arson private investigators, a video clip, shot from above, and witnesses all kept in mind that the fire started in three separate places inside the compound practically concurrently. Moreover, paying attention to tools smuggled into the mix by the FBI recorded Davidians discussing setting fires and maintaining them going. Davidians themselves have testified that is what occurred.

The Davidians additionally terminated thousands of chances at the FBI as the CS gas was placed. Several evaluations revealed the agents did not fire a solitary shot that day. Instead, they begged over speakers for the Davidians to come out.

But except for nine people, they did not. The others either took part in mass self-destruction, were the victims of mercy killings, or were in some way caught inside the structure. Twenty of those that died in the fire were slain by various other Davidians. The majority were shot at the point-blank array, consisting of Koresh and five kids. However, post-mortem examinations showed the Davidians likewise stabbed one 3-year-old to fatality.

As the Danforth Report concluded: "Government agents did not start or spread out the awful fire of April 19, 1993, did not direct gunfire at the Branch Davidians [that day], and did not illegally employ the militaries of the United States. What is impressive is the overwhelming proof vindicating the federal government from the costs made versus it."

It's not much of a surprise that the miniseries get so incorrect, considering that it is mainly based upon A Location Called Waco, a book by Davidian survivor David Thibodeau. Thibodeau, who recommends that the Davidians did not set the fire, is either a liar or a fool, and also his publication is egoistic tripe.

Sometimes, "Waco" declines right into absurdity. It is cartoonish in its depictions of wicked ATF and FBI officials and the seriously seeking, goodhearted Davidians. At one factor, Koresh, who in reality was a monster eventually more responsible for the bloodshed than any individual, is revealed with what is a halo of beautiful light around his head as he allegedly communes straight with God.

"Waco" is just the current movie of its ilk.

It started in the 1990s with "Waco: The Big Lie," a film by militia lover Linda Thompson that asserted storage tanks with weapons began the April 19 fire. Others include "Waco: The Regulations of Engagement" (which, amazingly, won an Emmy for outstanding investigative journalism) as well as "Waco: A New Revelation." Both were primarily based on the claims of the late Michael McNulty, a weapon rights protestor and single scientist for McVeigh's defense group, who asserted that the federal government rejected Davidians getting away from the fire.

Dan Gifford, executive producer of "Waco: The Regulations of Interaction," said as his movie reveals that "mass murder by one's very own federal government in this country is extremely possible." Such fake cases, like those of the people who created the recent "Waco" miniseries, have consequences.

There's no question that authorities made blunders in Waco, a few of them terrible. The ATF was cautioned that the Davidians knew they were coming, but went ahead with their raid no matter. There were possibilities to apprehend Koresh away from the compound that were not taken. Raid leaders tried to cover their failures, as well as FBI authorities failed to report that they had actually discharged pyrotechnic rounds of gas on April 19 that could have (but didn't, as was shown later on) started a fire.

However, the federal government did not set out to perform a mass murder. A massive team of FBI negotiators burnt the midnight oil to persuade the Davidians to leave their substance peacefully. At the end of the day, the Davidian standoff is not so much a horrifying instance of a heedless government gone mad as it is a timeless situation of a complex scenario used to wicked effect by opportunistic fabulists-- people that turn the facts to offer a right-wing, antigovernment story regarding freedom in America.

Child Sex Trafficking and the Khazarians.

The Khazarians – over the years, have secretly built tunnels all over the English-speaking countries, including the USA. They transport children and drugs from one end of a country to the other. The Khazarians have always been criminals and dealt with pedophilia, child sex, and drugs.

Sex traffickers target children in foster care and team houses. These kids are much more susceptible to exploitation because of the injury they have experienced and the lack of an irreversible, secure home.

- It is estimated that approximately 40.3 million individuals worldwide are being trafficked. Over One million in the USA alone are kidnapped and disappear.
- Sex trafficking is one of the globe's fastest expanding criminal industries. Trafficking generates an estimated $150 billion a year.
- Kids are prone to exploitation, particularly kids linked to the foster well-being system. For example, 60 percent of residential child trafficking sufferers have a history in the youngster welfare system in the united state.
- Traffickers target youth in foster treatment due to their raised susceptibility due to an absence of family and emotional relationships and support.
- 74% of kid trafficking situations involved sex trafficking, and most of those included pimp-controlled prostitution.
- The ordinary age of kid sex trafficking sufferers is 15, according to the numbers of kids reported missing to the National Facility for Missing and Exploited Youngsters.

Many sex trafficking targets are runaway ladies who were sexually abused as youngsters. For example, 1 in 7 runaways reported missing out on were likely sex trafficking targets, and of those, 88% were in the care of social services or foster care when they ran.

LIE AFTER LIE: WHAT COLIN POWELL KNEW

COLIN POWELL supplied his discussion, making a case for war with Iraq at the United Nations 15 years ago, on February 5, 2003. HE LIED!

As many objections as Powell received for this-- he's called it "painful" and something that will certainly "always be a part of my document"-- it hasn't been close to what's justified. Moreover, Powell, secretary of state under Head of state George W. Shrub, was much more than just severely mistaken: He produced "proof" and disregarded duplicated warnings that what he was saying was incorrect.

Sadly, Congress never investigated Powell's use of his knowledge, so we do not know much of the specifics. Powell's testimony was all LIES. The Khazarian mafia paid Powell to lie to Congress.

The US went to war and murdered thousands of Iraqi citizens. King Husein was an innocent man when it came to the twin towers. What a shame

Powell's commitment to agreeing to trick the world: the United Nations, Americans, and the coalition soldiers about to be sent out to eliminate the dead in Iraq. He's never been held accountable for his activities, and also, it's not likely he ever will be.

The 911 SCAM. Who really blew up the twin towers?

Thousands of people died in the 911 event. Shards of glass and dust from the World Trade Centre towers sit on Professor Steven Jones's desk at Brigham Young University in Utah. Evidence, he says, of the biggest cover-up in history - one too evil for most to believe, but one he has staked his academic career on exposing. The Khazarians blew up the Twin Towers – no doubt! They blamed it on Islam. They hate Muslims and Islam – they wanted to create a war between the USA and Mideastern countries. The Bush family are Nazis, so they were happy with that.

The attacks of September 11, Jones asserts, were an "inside job" puppeteered by the neoconservatives in the White House to justify the occupation of oil-rich Arab countries, inflate military spending, and expand Israel.

"We don't believe that 19 hijackers and a few others in a cave in Afghanistan pulled this off acting alone," says Jones. "We challenge this official conspiracy theory and, by God, we're going to get to the bottom of this."

While this sinister spin strikes most American academics as absurd, Jones, a physics professor, is not alone. He is a member of 9/11 Scholars for Truth, a recently formed group of around 75 US professors determined to prove 9/11 was a hoax. In essays and journals, they are using their association with prominent universities to give a scholarly stamp to conspiracy theories long believed in parts of Europe and the Arab world and gaining ground among Americans due to frustration with the Iraq war and opposition to President Bush's heavily hyped "war on terror."

Their iconoclastic positions have drawn wrath from rightwing radio shows and caused upheaval on campuses, triggering letters to newspapers, phone calls from parents, and TV cameras in lecture halls.

In the Midwest, 61 legislators signed a petition calling for the dismissal of a University of Wisconsin assistant professor, Kevin Barrett, after joining the 9/11 Scholars for Truth. But, citing academic freedom, the university provost defended Barrett, albeit reluctantly.

A Scripps Howard/Ohio University poll taken during the summer indicates that Americans are increasingly suspicious of the government's explanation of the events of 9/11: 36% said it was "very likely" or "somewhat likely" that federal officials either participated in the attacks on the World Trade Centre and the Pentagon or took no action to stop them, "because they wanted the United States to go to war in the Middle East."

For most of the world, the story of 9/11 begins at 8.45 am on September 11, 2001, when American Airlines flight 11 smashed into the North Tower of the World Trade Centre. But, tumble down the rabbit hole with Jones, and the plotline begins a year earlier, in September 2000.

A neoconservative group called Project for a New American Century, which included the defense secretary, Donald Rumsfeld, and the vice-president, Dick Cheney brought out a report arguing for a global expansion of American military and economic supremacy and for the US to transform itself into a "one-world superpower." The report warned that "the transformation process, even if it brings revolutionary change, is likely to be a long one, absent some catastrophic and catalyzing event - like a new Pearl Harbor."

Excuse for aggression

In concert with about 20 others, the group orchestrated the attacks of 9/11 as an excuse for pre-emptive global aggression against Afghanistan, then Iraq, and soon Iran, the academics say. And they insist that they have amassed a wealth of scientific data to prove it.

According to Jones, the towers can't have collapsed from the collision of two airplanes, as jet fuel doesn't burn at temperatures hot enough to melt steel beams. Instead, the horizontal puffs of smoke - squibs - emitted during the towers' collapse are indicative of controlled implosions on lower floors. In addition, the scholars have collected eyewitness accounts of flashes and loud explosions immediately before the fall.

The twin towers must, they say, have been brought down by explosives - hence the container of dust on Jones's desk, sent to him unsolicited by a woman living in lower Manhattan. He is using X-ray fluorescents to test it for explosive materials.

What's more, the nearby World Trade Centre 7 also collapsed later that afternoon. The building had not been hit by a plane, only damaged by fire. WTC 7 housed a clandestine CIA station, which the scholars believe was the command center for the planning of 9/11.

"The planes were just a distraction," says Professor James Fetzer, 65, a recently retired philosopher of science at the University of Minnesota. "The evidence is so overwhelming, but most Americans don't have time to look at this."

But Jonathan Barnett, professor of fire protection engineering at the Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Massachusetts, calls such claims "bad science". Barnett was a member of the World Trade Centre Building Performance Study, one of the government groups that investigated the towers' collapse.

Reluctantly, he has familiarized himself with the scholars' claims - many of them have emailed him. Yes, Barnett agrees it is unusual for a steel structure to collapse from fire. However, his group and others argue that the planes' impact weakened the systems and stripped off the fireproofing materials. That caused the top floors of both towers to collapse onto the beds below. "A big chunk of building falling down made the next floor fall down, and then they all came down like a deck of cards," Barnett says.

The collapse of WTC 7 was also unusual, he admits. However, firefighters do not usually let a fire rage unabated for seven hours as they did on the morning of September 11 because they had prioritized the rescue of victims. "The fact that you don't have evidence to support your theory doesn't mean that the other theory is true," Barnett says. "They just made it up out of the blue."

Since the attacks, the US government has issued three reports on the day's events, involving hundreds of professors, scientists, and government officials.

The 9/11 Commission, a bipartisan group, issued a 500-page, moment-by-moment investigation into the hijackers' movements, concluding that they were connected to Osama bin Laden. The National Institute of Standards and Technology, a government agency, filed 10,000 pages of reports examining the towers' collapse. And the Federal Emergency Management Agency weighed in, examining the response to the attacks.

"To plant bombs in three buildings with enough bomb materials and wiring? It's too huge a project and would require far too many people to keep it a secret afterwards," says Christopher Pyle, professor of constitutional law at Mt Holyoke College. "After every major crisis, like the assassinations of JFK or Martin Luther King, we've had conspiracy theorists who come up with plausible scenarios for gullible people. It's a waste of time."

But Barrett says the experts have been fooled by an "act of psychological conversion" not unlike the tactics CIA interrogators use on their victims. "People will disregard evidence if it causes their faith to be shattered," he says. "I think we were all shocked. And then, when the voice of authority told us what happened, we just believed it."

Misleading the public

History has revealed that governments have a tradition of misleading the public into going to war, says Barrett, and the next generation of Americans will realize the truth. "Europe and Canada are way ahead of us on this."

The 9/11 scholars go to great lengths to portray themselves as rational thinkers, who have been slowly won over by a careful, academic analysis of the facts of the day.

However, a study of the full extent of their claims is a journey into the increasingly absurd: Flight 93 did not crash in Pennsylvania but landed safely in Cleveland; desperate phone calls received by relatives on the ground from passengers were actually computer-generated voices from a laboratory in California. The Pentagon was not hit by American Airlines Flight 77, but by a smaller, remote-controlled A-3 Sky Warrior, which shot a missile into the building before crashing into it.

Many of the 9/11 scholars have a history of defending conspiracy theories. For example, the CIA plotted both the Lockerbie bombing and the plane crash of John F Kennedy Jr and his wife, and that "global secret societies" control the world.

Professor Robert Goldberg, of the University of Utah, wrote a book on conspiracy theories, Enemies Within: the Culture of Conspiracy in Modern America. He recounts a history of religious and political leaders using conspiracy theories for personal and political gain. The common enemy is usually Jews, big government or corporations. The public laps it up, either because these theories are more exciting than the truth, or out of emotional need.

"The conspiracy theorists present their case with facts and figures: they have dates, meeting places, and always name names," he says. "The case is always presented in a prosecutorial way or how an adventure writer presents a novel. It's a breathless account. They are willing to say hearsay is a fact, and rumor is true, and accidents are never what they seem.

"One of the stories is that a missile hit the Pentagon, and all the data is there. But what is missing is what happened to the plane and the people on it? Conspiracy theorists avoid discussion of those facts that don't fit."

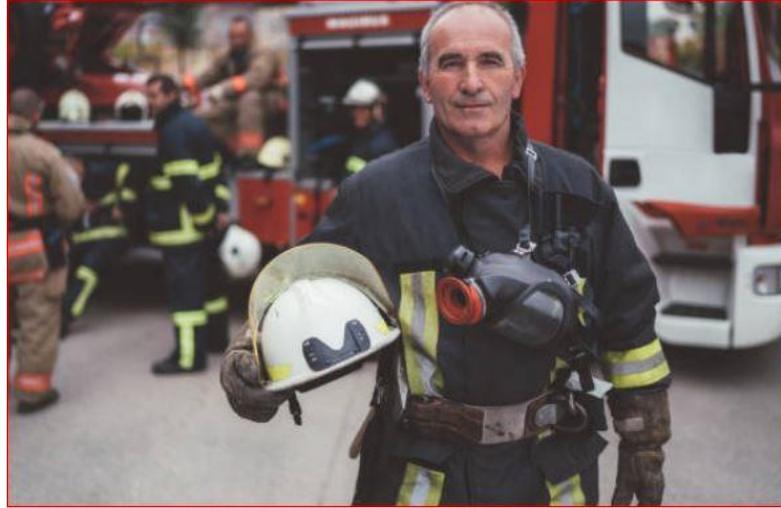

Perhaps it is no coincidence that the public's willingness to believe conspiracy theories parallels their dissatisfaction with the Bush administration. In recent years, the American public has felt misled over false claims that there were weapons of mass destruction in Iraq, and that Saddam Hussein was connected to 9/11.

Many fear infringements on their civil liberties now. For example, the National Security Agency has gained access to phone billing records from telecommunications companies. The Bush administration has engaged in wiretapping without court warrants. There are thousands of cases of indefinite detentions of American and foreign citizens without trial. In addition, those who criticize the Bush administration's "war on terror" are accused of being unpatriotic.

However, the scholars risk caricaturing the opposition by taking their criticisms to such extremes. Nonetheless, they are pushing on and imploring Congress to reopen the investigation.

"We're academics and rational, and we believe Congress or someone should investigate this," says David Gabbard, an East Carolina education professor and 9/11 scholar. "But there are a lot of crazies out there who purport that UFOs were involved. We don't want to be lumped in with those folks." Source

What happened to building 7 (911)?

On that day, the BBC reported the building's fall almost half an hour before it happened. Journalist Jane Standley was broadcast at 4.54 pm eastern time, reporting that the tower had collapsed, but it was still standing in the background.

It fell 26 minutes later, seven hours after the Twin Towers came down. When the Standley clip hit YouTube, truthers bombarded the BBC's website with questions and accusations. Finally, Richard Porter, head of BBC world news, was forced to deny that the broadcaster was reading from the Bush conspirators' script.

He said the BBC had misreported warnings from fire crews of the building's imminent collapse and stated that it had already happened. He blamed the confusion of the day for the mix-up. CNN had earlier reported rumors that a third building had collapsed or was about to.

But in the minds of the truthers, this explanation was undermined by Porter's admission that the BBC no longer had the original tapes of its coverage. Building 7 is the truthers' smoking gun for other reasons, too.

How, they ask, could this modern, steel-framed skyscraper collapse merely because of fire, without even being hit by an airliner? Instead, the 47-story WTC7 fell straight down, at almost free-fall speed, primarily into its footprint: all the hallmarks, the skeptics say, of controlled demolition. Moreover, building 7 had some fascinating tenants.

The primary occupant was Salomon Brothers, the bank, but the secret service was on floors nine and 10. On the three floors above that was the Securities and Exchange Commission. The New York Times reported that the building also housed a secret office operated by the CIA dedicated to spying on and recruiting foreign diplomats based at the United Nations.

The station's loss had "seriously disrupted" intelligence operations. The CIA shared a floor with an office of the Defense Department and the Internal Revenue Service. The collapse of the building also wiped out the operations center of New York City's Office of Emergency Management on floor 23, throwing the response that day into further mayhem.

Truthers have focused on a comment on the afternoon of September 11 by Larry Silverstein, the building's owner, to a fire department commander: he said they should "pull" the building after a faulty sprinkler system left fires to rage all day. "Pull," the skeptics claim, is industry jargon for demolishing.

Debunking911.com points out that the term refers to pulling one building away from another with cables. Silverstein's spokesman later said that Silverstein told the fire chief that the most important thing was to protect the lives of the firefighters, including pulling them out of the building if necessary.

The US National Institute of Standards and Technology began investigating the collapse of building seven along with the Twin Towers in 2002 but hived the inquiry off into a separate probe, which will not report until August. This fueled suspicion that officials were struggling to develop a plausible line of obfuscation. Instead, NIST says progress has been slowed by the complexity of the computer model, which simulates the collapse from the moment it begins to the ground.

Another 80 boxes of documents related to WTC7 have also been found and need to be analyzed, it says. NIST's working hypothesis is that fire and/or flaming debris from the collapsing north tower (which left a long gash in building 7's south face) damaged a critical column that supported a 2,000 sq. ft floor bay.

The remaining floor bays could not redistribute the loads, and the whole structure came down on itself. The collapse was triggered by an internal failure that would explain the appearance of controlled demolition with a small field of debris left behind.

The influence of the truthers can be found in this line from a 2004 progress report: "While NIST has found no evidence of a blast or controlled demolition event, NIST would like to determine the magnitude of hypothetical blast scenarios that could have led to the structural failure of one or more elements.”

The BBC, meanwhile, has yet to persuade some of its critics. It had wanted to film the 9/11 Truth seminar at the Immanuel Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles but was barred by the organizers, who cited building 7.

THE OSAMA RAID SCAM – BIG LIE

We see that again and again, with Vietnam, with Watergate, with Iraq, with the claimed reasons for invading Afghanistan, Libya, and, through surrogates, Syria.

The examples are legion. Each time the propaganda machine comes up with a new story, our society's default response is to accept it. And the bigger the story, the harder it is for people to imagine they are being lied to. And the more discomfort it causes, the more cognitive dissonance kicks in. So then we rally around the flag — and lash out at the skeptics.

We recently encountered this with the Boston Marathon Bombing case, where so much doesn't add up, but few seem to care.

An earlier case, which comes to mind now because this is its fifth anniversary, was the May 2, 2011, raid on a compound in Abbottabad, Pakistan. On that occasion, we were told, the United States avenged the greatest terrorist attack ever on its soil when U.S. special forces swooped into an allied foreign country and successfully killed the No. 1 archvillain of our time — Osama bin Laden.

While the full range of media organizations, mainstream and “alternative,” accepted the government's account, within hours of the raid, we began raising questions — and we have kept on doing so. You can read those early articles here:

- 12 Questions About bin Laden
- More Questions About bin Laden
- Demanding the Evidence on Abbottabad: Even the Media Establishment is Wary
- Doubts on “Official Story” of bin Laden Killing

The basic story, which repeatedly changed in the early hours and days following the raid, finally settled into a few bare-bones. And that is all the public remembers:

Relying on uncertain intelligence, President Obama made the risky decision to mount a raid on Pakistan without the consent or knowledge of the authorities there. Navy SEALs swooped in, killed bin Laden, and got out safely, after which bin Laden’s body was cleaned by Islamic law before being dumped in the Arabian Sea.

Yet, if you look at what we’ve been told, you will find that it doesn’t make a lot of sense. And if it doesn’t make a lot of sense, we have two choices: 1) Contort the particulars until it kind of, sort of, seems to make sense; or 2) say that there may be something entirely different going on.

First, let us recall that Osama bin Laden was not only a Saudi but from one of the kingdom’s most powerful, connected, protected families.

Since that raid, new information has emerged about the U.S. protecting Saudi elites, even to cover up evidence of Saudi complicity with the 9/11 attacks. But the growing body of evidence that the Saudis have not been America’s friends and that they worked closely with Al-Qaeda, has never been squared with the story of the Abbottabad raid.

In that raid, we are told, the U.S. government relied on guidance from the Saudis as to what to do with Bin Laden and his body. This, we were told, was to avoid creating a shrine to Osama while also respecting Muslim customs — an odd claim and it is believed to be a LIE. The true reason was to hide the corpse ASAP.

All six Navy Seals were murdered a short time later in a helicopter crash. All six navy Seals were on board a 20 yr old helicopter with mechanical issues. It appears that the event was covered up, or the American people simply forgot about the lives of these brave Navy Seals. They didn't need to die.

Osama bin Laden, President George W. Bush and Crown Prince Abdullah, NYC 9/11

As we seek to connect the dots between these related parties and events, we cannot help but tote up some of the key factors in the Abbottabad story. Therefore, we ask that you consider certain elements:

- (1) The story of the raid changed over the course of several days, even though the commanders and those officials providing the narrative here at home had been in steady contact.
- (2) Instead of presenting pictures of the corpse, as was done with Saddam, Qaddafi, and most other “villains,” the U.S. government opted not to show it.
- (3) Instead of keeping the body at an undisclosed location for comprehensive DNA and other identification measures, the U.S. government claims they hastily tossed his body into the ocean. After we were told, advice to do so came from....the Saudi government.
- (4) The photos we saw of the man purported to live in that Abbottabad villa look strikingly different from prior photos.

Osama bin Laden, Abbottabad Compound, and MH-60 Black Hawk helicopter

(5) Just before the SEALs charged up the stairs toward the man who would be killed, they experienced a wardrobe malfunction — the transmission from their helmet cams suddenly stopped feeding into the White House Situation Room. So the president and his team saw nothing.

(6) When bin Laden purportedly died at 1 a.m. Pakistan local time on May 2, 2011, almost none of the Navy SEALs conducting the operation saw him.

(7) Former SEAL Mark Owen’s book “No Easy Day,” which received a lot of attention and became the definitive inside account of what took place, was reportedly frowned upon by the military — yet the military, which could have quickly halted the publication if it wished to do so, did not.

(8) We have been told that the SEALs themselves had been given whether to capture bin Laden or kill him.

(9) Consider the incalculable intelligence value of an Osama captured alive.

(10) During the operation, one of two helicopters crashed into a wall in Osama’s compound and was essentially destroyed — yet we are told that every one of the inhabitants walked away without serious injury.

(12) Shortly after this debacle, another contingent of Navy SEALs perished in what we were told was an unrelated crash across the border in Afghanistan.

(13) We have heard no more of bin Laden's wives and others who purportedly survived the raid. What happened to them? Were they punished? Were they interrogated? Were they remanded to Saudi custody?

(14) Consider what a tremendous publicity coup this was — for President Obama, preparing for his re-election bid, for the military and the CIA. Yet, from the simple vantage point of wishful thinking, there was no reason for Obama or his ambitious Secretary of State Hillary Clinton to doubt or express doubts about this heroic achievement they were told had come on their watch.

Is it madness to exhibit skepticism, to ask that we be shown some proof by a government that clearly cannot be trusted to level with us on “national security?”

On this fifth anniversary of this extraordinary event, we pause to note how, as in so many situations, the great majority of the media — from the corporate, mainstream entities to the ideologically-driven organs of Left and Right — accept at face value the official story.

In the years since the only significant voice to question the official story is Pulitzer Prize-winning investigative journalist Seymour Hersh.

Hersh maintains another version, as told to him by a retired senior U.S. intelligence official who goes unnamed. As Hersh heard it, the Saudis were working with the Pakistanis to hide bin Laden and were “financing (his) upkeep since his seizure by the Pakistanis.” Further, according to another anonymous Hersh source, the U.S. chose to execute bin Laden rather than capture him as a war criminal.

Hersh's interpretation, for which he has faced harsh criticism, is fascinating. Nonetheless, it does not adequately address the questions we have posed. It accepts that the person in the compound was indeed bin Laden and that this person was certainly killed. We'll withhold judgment on that until we see objective evidence.

Why? Because there are two scenarios.

In one, Osama was the wayward child, a rebel against his parent country, a man whom the U.S. and Saudis wanted to be obliterated. In 1994, he was expelled from Saudi Arabia.

But in the other, Osama bin Laden played a valuable role for the Saudi royal family, keeping the war away from its borders and focusing fundamentalist anger on the West. And because Osama bin Laden gave the always-hungry Western war machine the replacement villain for the Soviet “evil empire” — a casus belli that necessitates never-ending combat and never-ending and incalculable spending and riches for the military-industrial complex.

At the time of the raid, Obama's counterterrorism advisor, John Brennan, had been CIA station chief in Saudi Arabia just before 9/11 — and after the raid, was made CIA director.

Osama seemed to be the gift that kept on giving for so many.

Is it possible that he would not, in the end, be punished? That he would instead be protected, perhaps given a new identity like much lesser pawns in the games of power that nations and other entities play?

It may sound far-fetched. But in light of the unanswered questions about May 2, 2011, good journalism — indeed sound mental health — dictates that we not dismiss logical scenarios in favor of fundamentally illogical ones simply because we are told to do so.

CPS SCAM and Child Trafficking

Even in today's world, child trafficking is still a huge problem. Incidents of human trafficking are continually being reported across the globe — with the transportation process usually ending in tragedy.

The idea of trafficking — on any level — is horrific. But, it's even worse when you hear about innocent children being trafficked by gangs looking to exploit children for their gain.

This article will uncover the actual state of child trafficking by looking directly at what the statistics show. We'll also be offering suggestions on ensuring your child doesn't fall victim to trafficking, including how to educate your child and apps to track kids.

What Is Child Trafficking?

Child trafficking shares a similar definition to human trafficking. It is transporting and exploiting children for various — often malicious — purposes.

Some of the ways children get exploited through human trafficking include slave labor and sexual exploitation.

In 2012 the number of trafficking victims was around 20.9 million. Since then, the number has almost doubled, with a global count of human trafficking victims now reaching 40.3 million.

Image source: stopthetraffik.org/about-human-trafficking/the-scale-of-human-trafficking/

In 2017, The Children's Society reported that over 560 children were trafficked and sexually exploited in the UK alone.

The figures are horrific. It's almost hard to believe that human trafficking is such a big problem in this day and age. However, trafficking gangs can still take advantage of vulnerable people — especially kids — transporting them worldwide through an underground criminal network for exploitation.

Although trafficking gangs can initiate children into a world of exploitation in many different circumstances, some people are now speculating if welfare services are corrupt or failing to protect vulnerable children from becoming victims of trafficking.

Child Protective Services: Failing To Stop Trafficking?

This is a worrying prospect — the thought of Child Protective Services (CPS) failing to protect children from the dangers of trafficking is sickening. In addition, many investigators believe CPS may have its child sex trafficking ring within their organization.

Many statistics show that CPS are falling short of its duty to protect children — who have often been neglected previously.

The system seems to carry many flaws. In 2018, the NCMEC (National Center for Missing and Exploited Children) found that out of over 23,500 reported runaway children — usually running from care homes — nearly 15% were likely victims of sex trafficking.

A report looking into child sex trafficking and the child welfare system, conducted by the Department of Children and Families in Connecticut, found that of 88 children rescued from child sex trafficking in the state, 86 of were involved with child protection services before being exploited.

An investigation led by the state of New York also discovered that nearly 85% of child trafficking victims had previously been involved with child welfare services.

These figures clearly show the dire state of the child welfare system — it's failing children at almost every angle.

As humans, we naturally want to do whatever we can to stop child trafficking — and trafficking at every level. So as well as supporting specific institutions, like NCMEC, that fight daily to rescue victims of trafficking, there's a variety of things you can do to ensure your kids don't fall victim to trafficking.

What Are Kids Most At Risk?

As the statistics above suggest, many kids who are supposed to be protected by the child welfare system are at high risk of becoming victims of child exploitation.

These kids are the most vulnerable in society — often running away from care homes due to feeling like they don't belong. In addition, due to their usually unstable childhood, these children can face a range of psychological challenges from an early age.

This makes it easy for traffickers to target unstable children — offering them a false sense of stability.

However, children from many different areas of society can be at the same level of risk — primarily if they're not taught the correct techniques to safeguard themselves from danger.

Criminals usually target younger kids, as they're notably more vulnerable when compared with older children and kids in their late teens — who likely know how to defend themselves against rogue criminals.

How To Protect Your Kids From Child Trafficking

Although trafficking affects many kids who are part of the child welfare system, children from all areas of society can be groomed, kidnapped, and forced into the horrific world of child trafficking.

There are many ways to prevent your child from becoming a victim of child trafficking. Here are a few different things you can do.

What Parents Can Do:

GPS Tracking Devices

One of the best measures you can put in place to ensure the safety of your children is to use some form of tracking device.

Tracking devices come in many different forms. All have slightly different functions. But the idea is the same — to help you locate your kids from any location.

The location tracking device is usually attached directly to your child's clothing — such as their trouser pocket. You can also buy GPS tracking smartwatches securely attached to your child's wrist.

Kid Tracker Apps

Another great way to ensure your child's safety — especially if they have a smartphone — is to use a tracker app. Many tracker apps are available to download for both Android and iOS devices.

Tracker apps use the same technology as tracking devices — GPS satellites, cell tower signals, and Wi-Fi connections.

You can easily install a tracker app on your child's mobile device, not just to help you track their real-time location but also the activity on their smartphone. Many apps, including the Find My Kids app, Bark, and FamiSafe, will let you track your child's suspicious messages and emails, enabling you to see if they're being preyed upon by bad actors.

Educate Your Kids

Educating your kids on the risks posed by strangers is crucial. There are various tactics that bad actors use to groom, abduct, and initiate children into the trafficking system.

Educating your kids on how to spot the signs of danger is essential. If they know how to respond accordingly, they will be able to get themselves out of trouble as soon as possible.

What Kids Can Do:

Learn The Signs Of Danger

There are many different techniques that bad actors use to initiate children into exploitative activities.

Some of these techniques include:

1. Faking an emergency: This is a common technique criminals use to lure children — pretending that there's an emergency involving the child's parents. Then, the criminal will encourage the child to get into their vehicle to get to the emergency scene quickly.
2. Posing as a friend: Criminals will pretend to be friends of a child's parents. They will state that they've come to collect the child to take them home to their parents.
3. Asking for help: For example, asking for directions or asking a child to help find somebody is another common technique used by criminals to abduct children.

There are many other tricks that criminals use to groom and abduct children. By teaching your kids these tricks, you'll be able to keep them one step ahead of bad actors.

Once your kids know each of these techniques, you must show them how to respond appropriately. For example, show them that they should always say “No” or state, “I can’t help you unless I’m with an adult.” The tone of voice your child uses should always be firm.

It would help if you also taught your child to keep their distance when they are approached by strangers — at least five strides away. Your kids should also be trained to seek a responsible adult instantly, such as a parent, guardian, or teacher.

Learning The Dangers Of Online Grooming

Online grooming is still a very prevalent threat. Criminals — primarily criminals who are part of a child trafficking network — will often resort to social media platforms to groom vulnerable children.

You must teach your kids how to stay safe online — knowing how to spot the signs of danger and respond. If your child has any concerns about their online safety, you should encourage them to tell you immediately.

Using an internet or smartphone tracker app, you’ll be able to monitor any suspicious activity on your child’s social media platforms — including Facebook, Instagram, and WhatsApp. Once you spot any signs of danger, you’ll be able to alert your child and show them how to respond.

Often, the best way for you to respond to any suspicious potential threats is to block the respective social media account, email address, or phone number used to correspond with your child.

To learn more about teaching your kids online safety, click here.

A growing problem

Child trafficking is a growing problem. We must do everything to abolish criminal gangs looking to exploit children.

Although children raised in the child welfare system are most vulnerable, criminals will still target children from all areas of society — using malicious tactics to lure them away from safety and into the child trafficking system.

You must take all the necessary steps to prevent your child from falling victim to child trafficking. Using a combination of GPS tracking devices, social media monitoring apps, and educating your kids to respond to threats correctly will help safeguard your children from the dangers posed by child trafficking gangs.

If you know someone who would benefit from reading this article, please share it with them, and help us raise awareness to eliminate child trafficking.

THE FLUORIDE SCAM

In Europe, only Ireland (73%), Poland (1%), Serbia (3%), Spain (11%), and the U.K. (11%) fluoridate any of their water. Moreover, most developed countries, including Japan and 97% of the western European population, do not consume fluoridated water.

In the U.S., about 70% of public water supplies are fluoridated. This equates to approximately 185 million people, over half the number of people drinking artificially fluoridated water worldwide. Some countries have areas with high natural fluoride levels in the water. These include India, China, and parts of Africa. In these countries, measures are being taken to remove fluoride because of the health problems that fluoride can cause.

Fluoridation is a bad medical practice

- 1) Fluoride is the only chemical added to water for medical treatment. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) classifies fluoride as a drug when used to prevent or mitigate disease (FDA 2000). As a matter of basic logic, adding fluoride to water to prevent tooth decay (a non-water borne illness) is a form of medical treatment. All other water treatment chemicals are added to improve water quality or safety, which fluoride does not.

2) Fluoridation is unethical. Informed consent is standard practice for all medication and is one of the key reasons most of Western Europe has ruled against fluoridation. However, with water fluoridation, we are allowing governments to do to whole communities (forcing people to take a medicine irrespective of their consent) what individual doctors cannot do to individual patients.

Put another way: Does a voter have the right to require that their neighbor ingest a certain medication (even if it is against that neighbor's will)?

3) The dose cannot be controlled. Once fluoride is put in the water, it is impossible to control each individual's dose because people drink different amounts of water. Being able to control the dose a patient receives is critical. Some people (e.g., manual laborers, athletes, diabetics, and people with kidney disease) drink substantially more water than others.

4) The fluoride goes to everyone regardless of age, health or vulnerability. According to Dr. Arvid Carlsson, the 2000 Nobel Laureate in Medicine and Physiology and one of the scientists who helped keep fluoridation out of Sweden:

“Water fluoridation goes against leading principles of pharmacotherapy, which is progressing from a stereotyped medication — of the type 1 tablet 3 times a day — to a much more individualized therapy as regards both dosage and selection of drugs. Adding drugs to the drinking water means exactly the opposite of an individualized therapy” (Carlsson 1978).

5) People now receive fluoride from many other sources besides water. Fluoridated water is not the only way people are exposed to fluoride. Other sources of fluoride include food and beverages processed with fluoridated water (Kiritsy 1996).

It is now widely acknowledged that exposure to non-water sources of fluoride has significantly increased since the water fluoridation program first began (NRC 2006).

6) Fluoride is not an essential nutrient. No disease, not even tooth decay, is caused by a “fluoride deficiency.”(NRC 1993; Institute of Medicine 1997, NRC 2006). Not a single biological process has been shown to require fluoride. On the contrary, there is extensive evidence that fluoride can interfere with many important biological processes.

Fluoride interferes with numerous enzymes (Waldbott 1978). In combination with aluminum, fluoride interferes with G-proteins (Bigay 1985, 1987). Such interactions give aluminum-fluoride complexes the potential to interfere with signals from growth factors, hormones and neurotransmitters (Strunecka & Patocka 1999; Li 2003). More and more studies indicate that fluoride can interfere with biochemistry in fundamental ways (Barbier 2010).

7) The level in mothers' milk is very low. Considering reason #6 it is perhaps not surprising that the level of fluoride in mother's milk is remarkably low (0.004 ppm, NRC, 2006). This means that a bottle-fed baby consuming fluoridated water (0.6 – 1.2 ppm) can get up to 300 times more fluoride than a breast-fed baby.

There are no benefits (see reasons #11-19), only risks (see reasons #21-36), for infants ingesting this heightened level of fluoride at such an early age (an age where susceptibility to environmental toxins is particularly high).

8) Fluoride accumulates in the body. Healthy adult kidneys excrete 50 to 60% of the fluoride ingested each day (Marier & Rose 1971). The remainder accumulates in the body, largely in calcifying tissues such as the bones and pineal gland (Luke 1997, 2001). Infants and children excrete less fluoride from their kidneys and take up to 80% of ingested fluoride into their bones (Ekstrand 1994). The fluoride concentration in bone steadily increases over a lifetime (NRC 2006).

9) No health agency in fluoridated countries is monitoring fluoride exposure or side effects. No regular measurements are being made of the levels of fluoride in urine, blood, bones, hair, or nails of either the general population or sensitive subparts of the population (e.g., individuals with kidney disease).

10) There has never been a single randomized controlled trial to demonstrate fluoridation's effectiveness or safety. Despite the fact that fluoride has been added to community water supplies for over 60 years, "there have been no randomized trials of water fluoridation" (Cheng 2007). Randomized trials are the standard method for determining the safety and effectiveness of any purportedly beneficial medical treatment.

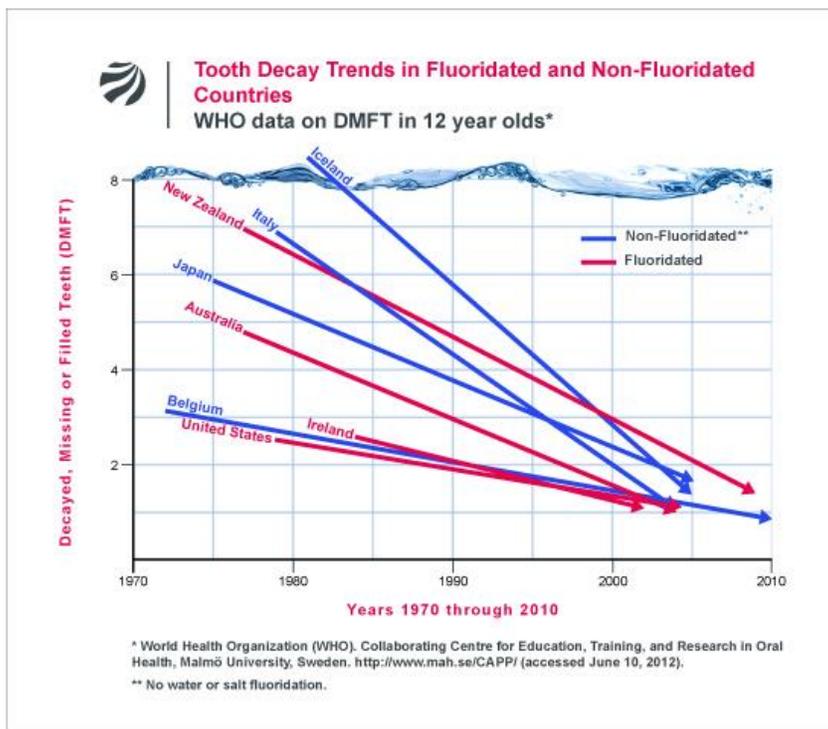

In 2000, the British Government's "York Review" could not give a single fluoridation trial a Grade A classification – despite 50 years of research (McDonagh 2000). The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) continues to classify fluoride as an "unapproved new drug."

Swallowing fluoride provides no (or very little) benefit

11) Benefit is topical not systemic. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC, 1999, 2001) has now acknowledged that the mechanism of fluoride's benefits are mainly topical, not systemic. Therefore, there is no need whatsoever to swallow fluoride to protect teeth.

Since the purported benefit of fluoride is topical, and the risks are systemic, it makes more sense to deliver the fluoride directly to the tooth in the form of toothpaste. Since swallowing fluoride is unnecessary and potentially dangerous, there is no justification for forcing people (against their will) to ingest fluoride through their water supply.

12) Fluoridation is not necessary. Most western, industrialized countries have rejected water fluoridation, but have nevertheless experienced the same decline in childhood dental decay as fluoridated countries. (See data from World Health Organization presented graphically in Figure).

13) Fluoridation's role in the decline of tooth decay is in serious doubt. The largest survey ever conducted in the US (over 39,000 children from 84 communities) by the National Institute of Dental Research showed little

difference in tooth decay among children in fluoridated and non-fluoridated communities (Hileman 1989). According to NIDR researchers, the study found an average difference of only 0.6 DMFS (Decayed, Missing, and Filled Surfaces) in the permanent teeth of children aged 5-17 residing their entire lives in either fluoridated or unfluoridated areas (Brunelle & Carlos, 1990).

This difference is less than one tooth surface, and less than 1% of the 100+ tooth surfaces available in a child's mouth. Large surveys from three Australian states have found even less of a benefit, with decay reductions ranging from 0 to 0.3 of one permanent tooth surface (Spencer 1996; Armfield & Spencer 2004). None of these studies have allowed for the possible delayed eruption of the teeth that may be caused by exposure to fluoride, for which there is some evidence (Komarek 2005). A one-year delay in eruption of the permanent teeth would eliminate the very small benefit recorded in these modern studies.

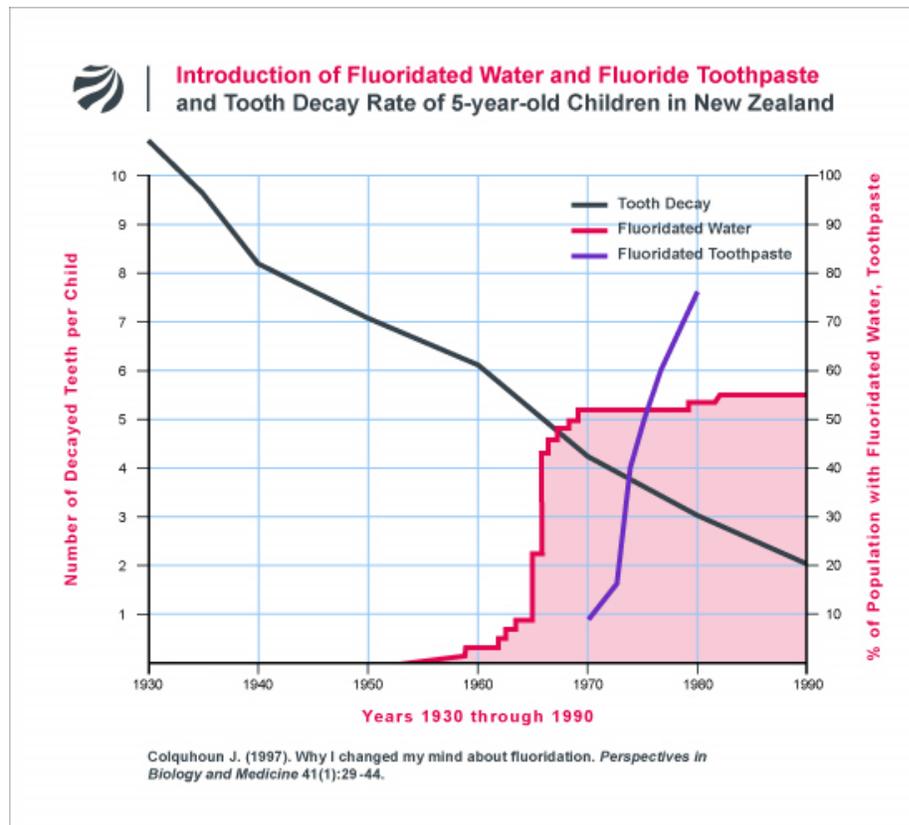

14) NIH-funded study on individual fluoride ingestion and tooth decay found no significant correlation. A multi-million dollar, U.S. National Institutes of Health (NIH)-funded study found no significant relationship between tooth decay and fluoride intake among children. (Warren 2009) This is the first time tooth decay has been investigated as a function of individual exposure (as opposed to mere residence in a fluoridated community).

15) Tooth decay is high in low-income communities that have been fluoridated for years. Despite some claims to the contrary, water fluoridation cannot prevent the oral health crises that result from rampant poverty, inadequate nutrition, and lack of access to dental care. There have been numerous reports of severe dental crises in low-income neighborhoods of US cities that have been fluoridated for over 20 years (e.g., Boston, Cincinnati, New York City, and Pittsburgh).

In addition, research has repeatedly found fluoridation to be ineffective at preventing the most serious oral health problem facing poor children, namely "baby bottle tooth decay," otherwise known as early childhood caries (Barnes 1992; Shiboski 2003).

16) Tooth decay does not go up when fluoridation is stopped. Where fluoridation has been discontinued in communities from Canada, the former East Germany, Cuba, and Finland, dental decay has not increased but has generally continued to decrease (Maupomé 2001; Kunzel & Fischer, 1997, 2000; Kunzel 2000; Seppa 2000).

17) Tooth decay was coming down before fluoridation started. Modern research shows that decay rates were coming down before fluoridation was introduced in Australia and New Zealand and have continued to decline even after its benefits would have been maximized. (Colquhoun 1997; Diesendorf 1986). As the following figure indicates, many other factors are responsible for the decline of tooth decay that has been universally reported throughout the western world.

18) The studies that launched fluoridation were methodologically flawed. The early trials conducted between 1945 and 1955 in North America that helped to launch fluoridation, have been heavily criticized for their poor methodology and poor choice of control communities (De Stefano 1954; Sutton 1959, 1960, 1996; Ziegelbecker 1970).

According to Dr. Hubert Arnold, a statistician from the University of California at Davis, the early fluoridation trials “are especially rich in fallacies, improper design, invalid use of statistical methods, omissions of contrary data, and just plain muddleheadedness and hebetude.” Serious questions have also been raised about Trendley Dean's (the father of fluoridation) famous 21-city study from 1942 (Ziegelbecker 1981).

Children are being over-exposed to fluoride

19) Children are being over-exposed to fluoride. The fluoridation program has massively failed to achieve one of its key objectives, i.e., to lower dental decay rates while limiting the occurrence of dental fluorosis (a discoloring of tooth enamel caused by too much fluoride). The goal of the early promoters of fluoridation was to limit dental fluorosis (in its very mild form) to 10% of children (NRC 1993, pp. 6-7).

In 2010, however, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reported that 41% of American adolescents had dental fluorosis, with 8.6% having mild fluorosis and 3.6% having either moderate or severe dental fluorosis (Beltran-Aguilar 2010). As the 41% prevalence figure is a national average and includes children living in fluoridated and unfluoridated areas, the fluorosis rate in fluoridated communities will obviously be higher.

The British Government's York Review estimated that up to 48% of children in fluoridated areas worldwide have dental fluorosis in all forms, with 12.5% having fluorosis of aesthetic concern (McDonagh, 2000).

20) The highest doses of fluoride are going to bottle-fed babies. Because of their sole reliance on liquids for their food intake, infants consuming formula made with fluoridated water have the highest exposure to fluoride, by bodyweight, in the population.

Because infant exposure to fluoridated water has been repeatedly found to be a major risk factor for developing dental fluorosis later in life (Marshall 2004; Hong 2006; Levy 2010), a number of dental researchers have recommended that parents of newborns not use fluoridated water when reconstituting formula (Ekstrand 1996; Pendrys 1998; Fomon 2000; Brothwell 2003; Marshall 2004).

Even the American Dental Association (ADA), the most ardent institutional proponent of fluoridation, distributed a November 6, 2006 email alert to its members recommending that parents be advised that formula should be made with “low or no-fluoride water.” Unfortunately, the ADA has done little to get this information into the hands of parents. As a result, many parents remain unaware of the fluorosis risk from infant exposure to fluoridated water.

Evidence of harm to other tissues

21) Dental fluorosis may be an indicator of broader systemic damage.

There have been many suggestions as to the possible biochemical mechanisms underlying the development of dental fluorosis (Matsuo 1998; Den Besten 1999; Sharma 2008; Duan 2011; Tye 2011), and they are complicated for a lay reader.

While promoters of fluoridation are content to dismiss dental fluorosis (in its milder forms) as merely a cosmetic effect, it is rash to assume that fluoride is not impacting other developing tissues when it is visibly damaging the teeth by some biochemical mechanism (Groth 1973; Colquhoun 1997).

Moreover, ingested fluoride can only cause dental fluorosis during the period before the permanent teeth have erupted (6-8 years). Other tissues are potentially susceptible to damage throughout life. For example, in areas of naturally high levels of fluoride, the first indicator of harm is dental fluorosis in children. In the same communities, many older people develop skeletal fluorosis.

22) Fluoride may damage the brain. According to the National Research Council (2006), “it is apparent that fluorides can interfere with the functions of the brain.” In a review of the literature commissioned by the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), fluoride has been listed among about 100 chemicals for which there is “substantial evidence of developmental neurotoxicity.”

Animal experiments show that fluoride accumulates in the brain and alters cognitive behavior consistent with a neurotoxic agent (Mullenix 1995). There have now been over 100 animal experiments showing that fluoride can damage the brain and impact learning and behavior.

According to fluoridation proponents, these animal studies can be ignored because high doses were used. However, it is essential to note that rats generally require five times more fluoride to reach the same plasma levels as humans (Sawan 2010).

Further, one animal experiment found effects at shallow doses (Varner 1998). In this study, rats fed for one year with one ppm fluoride in their water (the same level used in fluoridation programs), using either sodium fluoride or aluminum fluoride, had morphological changes to their kidneys and brains, increased uptake of aluminum in the brain, and the formation of beta-amyloid deposits which are associated with Alzheimer's disease. Other animal studies have found effects on the brain at water fluoride levels as low as five ppm (Liu 2010).

23) Fluoride may lower IQ. There have now been 33 studies from China, Iran, India, and Mexico that have reported an association between fluoride exposure and reduced IQ. One of these studies (Lin 1991) indicates that even just moderate levels of fluoride exposure (e.g., 0.9 ppm in the water) can exacerbate the neurological defects of iodine deficiency.

Other studies have found IQ reductions at 1.9 ppm (Xiang 2003a,b); 0.3-3.0 ppm (Ding 2011); 1.8-3.9 ppm (Xu 1994); 2.0 ppm (Yao 1996, 1997); 2.1-3.2 ppm (An 1992); 2.38 ppm (Poureslami 2011); 2.45 ppm (Eswar 2011); 2.5 ppm (Seraj 2006); 2.85 ppm (Hong 2001); 2.97 ppm (Wang 2001, Yang 1994); 3.15 ppm (Lu 2000); 4.12 ppm (Zhao 1996).

In the Ding study, each one ppm increase of fluoride in urine was associated with a loss of 0.59 IQ points. None of these studies indicate an adequate margin of safety to protect all children drinking artificially fluoridated water from this effect. According to the National Research Council (2006), “the consistency of the results [in fluoride/IQ studies] appears significant enough to warrant additional research on the effects of fluoride on intelligence.”

The NRC's conclusion has recently been amplified by a team of Harvard scientists whose fluoride/IQ meta-review concludes that fluoride's impact on the developing brain should be a “high research priority.” (Choi et al., 2012). Except for one small IQ study from New Zealand (Spittle 1998), no fluoridating country has yet investigated the matter.

24) Fluoride may cause non-IQ neurotoxic effects. However, reduced IQ is not the only neurotoxic effect that may result from fluoride exposure. At least three human studies have reported an association between fluoride exposure and impaired visual-spatial organization (Calderon 2000; Li 2004; Rocha-Amador 2009); while four other studies have found an association between prenatal fluoride exposure and fetal brain damage (Han 1989; Du 1992; Dong 1993; Yu 1996).

25) Fluoride affects the pineal gland. Studies by Jennifer Luke (2001) show that fluoride accumulates in the human pineal gland to very high levels. In her Ph.D. thesis, Luke has also shown in animal studies that fluoride reduces melatonin production and leads to an earlier onset of puberty (Luke 1997). Consistent with Luke's findings, one of the earliest fluoridation trials in the U.S. (Schlesinger 1956) reported that young girls in the fluoridated community reached menstruation five months earlier than girls in the non-fluoridated community. Yet, inexplicably, no fluoridating country has attempted to reproduce Luke's or Schlesinger's findings or further examine the issue.

26) Fluoride affects thyroid function. According to the U.S. National Research Council (2006), "several lines of information indicate an effect of fluoride exposure on thyroid function." In Ukraine, Bachinskii (1985) found a lowering of thyroid function, among otherwise healthy people, at 2.3 ppm fluoride in water. In the middle of the 20th century, fluoride was prescribed by several European doctors to reduce the activity of the thyroid gland for those suffering from hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid) (Stecher 1960; Waldbott 1978).

According to a clinical study by Galletti and Joyet (1958), the thyroid function of hyperthyroid patients was effectively reduced at just 2.3 to 4.5 mg/day of fluoride ion. To put this finding in perspective, the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS, 1991) has estimated that total fluoride exposure in fluoridated communities ranges from 1.6 to 6.6 mg/day.

This is a remarkable fact, particularly considering the rampant and increasing problem of hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid) in the United States and other fluoridated countries. Symptoms of hypothyroidism include depression, fatigue, weight gain, muscle and joint pains, increased cholesterol levels, and heart disease. In 2010, the second most prescribed drug of the year was Synthroid (sodium levothyroxine), a hormone replacement drug used to treat an underactive thyroid.

27) Fluoride causes arthritic symptoms. Some of the early signs of skeletal fluorosis (a fluoride-induced bone and joint disease that impacts millions of people in India, China, and Africa) mimic the symptoms of arthritis (Singh 1963; Franke 1975; Teotia 1976; Carnow 1981; Czerwinski 1988; DHHS 1991). According to a review on fluoridation published in Chemical & Engineering News, “Because some of the clinical symptoms mimic arthritis, the first two clinical phases of skeletal fluorosis could be easily misdiagnosed” (Hileman 1988).

Few, if any, studies have been done to determine the extent of this misdiagnosis and whether the high prevalence of arthritis in America (1 in 3 Americans have some form of arthritis – CDC, 2002) and other fluoridated countries is related to growing fluoride exposure, which is highly plausible. Even when individuals in the U.S. suffer advanced forms of skeletal fluorosis (from drinking large amounts of tea), it has taken years of misdiagnoses before doctors finally correctly diagnosed the condition as fluorosis.

28) Fluoride damages bone. An early fluoridation trial (Newburgh-Kingston 1945-55) found a significant two-fold increase in cortical bone defects among children in the fluoridated community (Schlesinger 1956). The cortical bone is the outside layer of the bone and is vital to protect against fracture. While this result was not considered necessary for bone fractures, it prompted questions about a possible link to osteosarcoma (Caffey, 1955; NAS, 1977). In 2001, Alarcon-Herrera and co-workers reported a linear correlation between the severity of dental fluorosis and the frequency of bone fractures in both children and adults in a high fluoride area in Mexico.

29) Fluoride may increase hip fractures in the elderly. When high doses of fluoride (average 26 mg per day) were used in trials to treat patients with osteoporosis to harden their bones and reduce fracture rates, it led to a higher number of fractures, particularly hip fractures (Inkovaara 1975; Gerster 1983; Dambacher 1986; O’Duffy 1986; Hedlund 1989; Bayley 1990; Gutteridge 1990. 2002; Orcel 1990; Riggs 1990 and Schnitzler 1990). Hip fracture is a severe issue for the elderly, often leading to a loss of independence or a shortened life.

There have been over a dozen studies published since 1990 that have investigated a possible relationship between hip fractures and long-term consumption of artificially fluoridated water or water with high natural levels. The results have been mixed – some have found an association, and others have not. Some have even claimed a protective effect.

One critical study in China, which examined hip fractures in six Chinese villages, found what appears to be a dose-related increase in hip fractures as the concentration of fluoride rose from 1 ppm to 8 ppm (Li 2001), offering little comfort to those who drink a lot of fluoridated water. Moreover, in the only human epidemiological study to assess bone strength as a function of bone fluoride concentration, researchers from the University of Toronto found that (as with animal studies) the power of bone declined with increasing fluoride content (Chachra 2010).

Finally, a recent study from Iowa (Levy 2009) published data suggesting that low-level fluoride exposure may have a detrimental effect on cortical bone density in girls (a product that has been repeatedly documented in clinical trials and which has been posited as an essential mechanism by which fluoride may increase bone fracture rates).

30) People with impaired kidney function are particularly vulnerable to bone damage. Because of their inability to effectively excrete fluoride, people with kidney disease are prone to accumulating high fluoride levels in their bones and blood. As a result of this high fluoride body burden, kidney patients have an elevated risk of developing skeletal fluorosis. In one of the few U.S. studies investigating the matter, crippling skeletal fluorosis was documented among patients with severe kidney disease drinking water with just 1.7 ppm fluoride (Johnson 1979). Since severe skeletal fluorosis in kidney patients has been detected in small case studies, larger, systematic studies would likely detect skeletal fluorosis at even lower fluoride levels.

31) Fluoride may cause bone cancer (osteosarcoma). A U.S. government-funded animal study found a dose-dependent increase in bone cancer (osteosarcoma) in fluoride-treated male rats (NTP 1990). Following the results of this study, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) reviewed national cancer data in the U.S. and found a significantly higher rate of osteosarcoma (a bone cancer) in young men in fluoridated versus unfluoridated areas (Hoover et al 1991a).

While the NCI concluded (based on an analysis lacking statistical power) that fluoridation was not the cause (Hoover et al 1991b), no explanation was provided to explain the higher rates in the fluoridated areas. A smaller study from New Jersey (Cohn 1992) found osteosarcoma rates to be up to 6 times higher in young men living in fluoridated versus unfluoridated areas. Other epidemiological studies of varying size and quality have failed to find this relationship (a summary of these can be found in Bassin, 2001 and Connett & Neurath, 2005).

There are three reasons why a fluoride-osteosarcoma connection is plausible: First, fluoride accumulates to a high level in bone. Second, fluoride stimulates bone growth. And third, fluoride can interfere with the genetic apparatus of bone cells in several ways; it is mutagenic, cause chromosome damage, and interfere with the enzymes involved with DNA repair in both cell and tissue studies (Tsutsui 1984; Caspary 1987; Kishi 1993; Mihashi 1996; Zhang 2009). In addition to cell and tissue studies, a correlation between fluoride exposure and chromosome damage in humans has also been reported (Sheth 1994; Wu 1995; Meng 1997; Joseph 2000).

32) Proponents have failed to refute the Bassin-Osteosarcoma study. In 2001, Elise Bassin, a dentist, successfully defended her doctoral thesis at Harvard. She found that young boys had a five to seven-fold increased risk of getting osteosarcoma by 20 if they drank fluoridated water during their mid-childhood growth spurt (age 6 to 8).

The study was published in 2006 (Bassin 2006) but has been largely discounted by fluoridating countries because her thesis adviser Professor Chester Douglass (a promoter of fluoridation and a consultant for Colgate), promised a more extensive study that he claimed would discount her thesis (Douglass and Joshipura, 2006).

After five years of waiting, the Douglass study has finally been published (Kim 2011), but in no way does this study discount Bassin's findings. On the contrary, the study used far fewer controls than Bassin's analysis and did not even attempt to assess the age-specific window of risk that Bassin identified. Indeed, by the authors' admission, the study could not determine osteosarcoma risk among children and adolescents (the precise population of concern). For a critique of the Douglass study, click here.

33) Fluoride may cause reproductive problems. Fluoride administered to animals at high doses wreaks havoc on the male reproductive system – it damages sperm and increases the rate of infertility in several different species

While animal studies by FDA researchers have failed to find evidence of reproductive toxicity in fluoride-exposed rats (Sprando 1996, 1997, 1998), the National Research Council (2006) has recommended that “the relationship between fluoride and fertility requires additional study.”

34) Some individuals are susceptible to low fluoride levels, as shown by case studies and double-blind studies. In one study, which lasted 13 years, Feltman and Kosel (1961) showed that about 1% of patients given 1 mg of fluoride each day developed adverse reactions. Many individuals have reported suffering from fatigue, headaches, rashes, and stomach and gastrointestinal tract problems, which disappear when they avoid fluoride in their water and diet. (Shea 1967; Waldbott 1978; Moolenburgh 1987) Frequently, the symptoms reappear when they are unwittingly exposed to fluoride again (Spittle, 2008).

No fluoridating government has conducted scientific studies to take this issue beyond these anecdotal reports. Without the willingness of governments to investigate these reports scientifically, should we as a society be forcing these people to ingest fluoride?

35) Other subsets of the population are more vulnerable to fluoride's toxicity. In addition to people suffering from impaired kidney function discussed in reason #30, other subsets of the population are more vulnerable to fluoride's toxic effects. According to the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR 1993), these include infants, the elderly, and those with diabetes mellitus. Also vulnerable are those who suffer from malnutrition (e.g., calcium, magnesium, vitamin C, vitamin D, iodine deficiencies, and protein-poor diets) and those who have diabetes insipidus. See: Greenberg 1974; Klein 1975; Massler & Schour 1952; Marier & Rose 1977; Lin 1991; Chen 1997; Seow 1994; Teotia 1998.

No Margin of Safety

36) There is no margin of safety for several health effects. No one can deny that high natural levels of fluoride damage health. Millions of people in India and China have compromised their health with fluoride. The real question is whether there is an adequate margin of safety between the doses shown to cause harm in published studies and the total dose people receive consuming uncontrolled amounts of fluoridated water and non-water sources of fluoride.

This margin of safety has to consider the wide range of individual sensitivity expected in a large population (a safety factor of 10 is usually applied to the lowest level causing harm). Another safety factor that is also needed to consider is the wide range of doses to which people are exposed.

There is no margin of safety for dental fluorosis (CDC, 2010), and based on the following studies nowhere near an adequate margin of safety for lowered IQ

(Xiang 2003a,b; Ding 2011; Choi 2012); declined thyroid function (Galletti & Joyet 1958; Bachinskii 1985; Lin 1991); bone fractures in children (Alarcon-Herrera 2001) or hip fractures in the elderly (Kurtio 1999; Li 2001). These harmful effects are discussed in the NRC (2006) review.

\Environmental Justice

37) Low-income families are penalized by fluoridation. Those most likely to suffer from poor nutrition and thus more likely to be more vulnerable to fluoride's toxic effects are the poor, who, unfortunately, are the very people being targeted by new fluoridation programs.

While at heightened risk, low-income families can least afford to avoid fluoride once it is added to the water supply. No financial support is being offered to these families to help them get alternative water supplies or to help pay the costs of treating unsightly cases of dental fluorosis.

38) Black and Hispanic children are more vulnerable to fluoride's toxicity. According to the CDC's national survey of dental fluorosis, black and Mexican-American children have significantly higher rates of dental fluorosis than white children (Beltran-Aguilar 2005, Table 23). The recognition that minority children appear to be more vulnerable to the toxic effects of fluoride, combined with the fact that low-income families are less able to avoid drinking fluoridated water, has prompted prominent leaders in the environmental-justice movement to oppose mandatory fluoridation in Georgia. For example, in a statement issued in May 2011, Andrew Young, a colleague of Martin Luther King, Jr., former Mayor of Atlanta, and former US Ambassador to the United Nations stated:

“I am most deeply concerned for low-income families who have babies: if they cannot afford unfluoridated water for their babies' milk formula, do they not count? Of course, they do. This is an issue of fairness, civil rights, and compassion. We must find better ways to prevent cavities, such as helping those most at risk for cavities obtain access to the services of a dentist...My father was a dentist. I formerly was a strong believer in the benefits of water fluoridation for preventing cavities. But many things that we began to do 50 or more years ago we now no longer do because we have learned further information that changes our practices and policies. So it is with fluoridation.”

39) Minorities are not being warned about their vulnerabilities to fluoride. For example, the CDC is not warning black and Mexican-American children that they have higher rates of dental fluorosis than Caucasian children (see #38). This extra vulnerability may extend to other toxic effects of fluoride. For example, black Americans have higher lactose intolerance, kidney problems, and diabetes, which may exacerbate fluoride's toxicity.

40) Tooth decay reflects low-income, not low fluoride intake. Since dental decay is most concentrated in poor communities, we should be spending our efforts to increase the access to dental care for low-income families. The highest rates of tooth decay today can be found in low-income areas that have been fluoridated for many years. The actual "Oral Health Crisis" that exists today in the United States is not a lack of fluoride but poverty and lack of dental insurance. The Surgeon General has estimated that 80% of dentists in the US do not treat children on Medicaid.

The largely untested chemicals used in fluoridation programs

41) The chemicals used to fluoridate water are not pharmaceutical grade. Instead, they primarily come from the wet scrubbing systems of the phosphate fertilizer industry. These chemicals (90% of which are sodium fluorosilicate and fluorosilicic acid) are classified as hazardous wastes contaminated with various impurities.

Recent testing by the National Sanitation Foundation suggests that the levels of arsenic in these silicon fluorides are relatively high (up to 1.6 ppb after dilution into public water) and of potential concern (NSF 2000 and Wang 2000). Arsenic is a known human carcinogen for which there is no safe level. This one contaminant alone could be increasing cancer rates – and unnecessarily so.

42). The silicon fluorides have not been tested comprehensively. The chemical used in animal studies is pharmaceutical grade sodium fluoride, not industrial grade fluorosilicic acid. Proponents claim that once the silicon fluorides have been diluted at the public waterworks, they are completely dissociated to free fluoride ions and hydrated silica. Thus, there is no need to examine the toxicology of these compounds.

However, while a study from the University of Michigan (Finney et al., 2006) showed complete dissociation at neutral pH, in acidic conditions (pH 3), there was a stable complex containing five fluoride ions. Thus, such a complex may be regenerated in the stomach, where the pH lies between 1 and 2.

43). The silicon fluorides may increase lead uptake into children's blood. Studies by Masters and Coplan (1999, 2000, 2007), and to a lesser extent Macek (2006), show an association between the use of fluorosilicic acid (and its sodium salt) to fluoridate water and increased uptake of lead into children's blood. Because of lead's acknowledged ability to damage the developing brain, this is a very serious finding.

Nevertheless, it is being largely ignored by fluoridating countries. This association received some strong biochemical support from an animal study by Sawan et al. (2010), who found that exposure of rats to a combination of fluorosilicic acid and lead in their drinking water increased the uptake of information into blood some threefold overexposure to lead alone.

44) Fluoride may leach lead from pipes, brass fittings, and soldered joints. In tightly controlled laboratory experiments, Maas et al. (2007) have shown that fluoridating agents in combination with chlorinating agents such as chloramine increase the leaching of lead from brass fittings used in plumbing. While proponents may argue about the neurotoxic effects of low fluoride levels, no argument leads to shallow levels lowering IQ in children.

Continued promotion of fluoridation is unscientific

45) Key health studies have not been done. For example, in the January 2008 issue of Scientific American, Professor John Doull, the chairman of the critical 2006 National Research Council review, Fluoride in Drinking Water: A Review of EPA's Standards, is quoted as saying:

What the committee found is that we've gone with the status quo regarding fluoride for many years—for too long really—and now we need to take a fresh look . . . In the scientific community, people tend to think this is settled. When the U.S. surgeon general comes out and says this is one of the top 10 greatest achievements of the 20th century, that's a challenging hurdle to get over. But when we looked at the studies that have been done, we found that many of these questions are unsettled, and we have much less information than we should, considering how long this [fluoridation] has been going on.

Promoters are using the absence of studies as meaning the lack of harm. This is an irresponsible position.

46) Endorsements do not represent scientific evidence. Unfortunately, many of those promoting fluoridation rely heavily on a list of endorsements.

However, the U.S. PHS first endorsed fluoridation in 1950, before one trial was completed and before any significant health studies were published (see chapters 9 and 10 in The Case Against Fluoride for the significance of this PHS endorsement for the future promotion of fluoridation).

Many other endorsements swiftly followed with little evidence of any scientific rationale. The continued use of these endorsements has more to do with political science than medical science.

47) Review panels hand-picked to deliver a pro-fluoridation result. Often, mainly when their fluoridation program is under threat, governments of fluoridating countries hand-pick panels to deliver reports that provide the necessary re-endorsement of the practice. In their recent book Fluoride Wars (2009), which is otherwise slanted toward fluoridation, Alan Freeze and Jay Lehr concede this point when they write:

There is one anti-fluoridationist charge that does have some truth to it. Anti-fluoride forces have always claimed that the many government-sponsored review panels set up over the years to assess the costs and benefits of fluoridation were stacked in favor of fluoridation.

A review of the membership of the various panels confirms this charge. The expert committees that put together reports by the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1941, 1944, and 1954; the National Academy of Sciences in 1951, 1971, 1977, and 1993; the World Health Organization in 1958 and 1970; and the U.S. Public Health Service in 1991 is rife with well-known medical and dental researchers who actively campaigned on behalf of fluoridation or whose research was held in high regard in the pro-fluoridation movement. Membership was interlocking and incestuous.

The most recent examples of these self-fulfilling prophecies have come from the Irish Fluoridation Forum (2002), the National Health and Medical Research Council (NHMRC, 2007), and Health Canada (2008, 2010). The latter used a panel of six experts to review the health literature.

Four of the six were pro-fluoridation dentists, and the other two had no demonstrated expertise in fluoride. A notable exception to this trend was the appointment by the U.S. National Research Council of the first balanced panel of experts ever selected to look at fluoride's toxicity in the U.S.

This panel of twelve reviewed the US EPA's safe drinking water standards for fluoride. After three and half years, the panel concluded in a 507- page report that the safe drinking water standard was not protective of health and a new maximum contaminant level goal (MCLG) should be determined (NRC, 2006).

If standard toxicological procedures and appropriate safety margins were applied to their findings, this report should end water fluoridation. Unfortunately, in January of 2011, the US EPA Office of Water made it clear that they would not determine a value for the MCLG that would jeopardize the water fluoridation program (EPA press release, Jan 7, 2011. Once again, politics was allowed to trump science.

More and more independent scientists oppose fluoridation

48) Many scientists oppose fluoridation. However, proponents of fluoridation have maintained that even though the earliest fluoridation opponents were biochemists, the only people opposed to fluoridation are not bona fide scientists.

Today, as more and more scientists, doctors, dentists, and other professionals, read the primary literature for themselves, rather than relying on self-serving statements from the ADA and the CDC, they realize that their professional bodies have not diligently informed them of the general public on this subject. As a result, as of January 2012, over 4,000 professionals have signed a statement calling for an end to water fluoridation worldwide.

This statement and a list of signatories can be found on the website of the Fluoride Action Network. In addition, a glimpse of the caliber of those opposing fluoridation can be gleaned by watching the 28-minute video "Professional Perspectives on Water fluoridation," which can be viewed online at the same FAN site.

Proponents' dubious tactics

49). Proponents usually refuse to defend fluoridation in open debate. While pro-fluoridation officials continue to promote fluoridation with undiminished fervor, they typically refuse to support the practice in open public debate – even when challenged to do so by organizations such as the Association for Science in the Public Interest, the American College of Toxicology, or the U.S. EPA (Bryson 2004). According to Dr. Michael Easley, a prominent lobbyist for fluoridation in the US, “Debates give the illusion that a scientific controversy exists when no credible people support the fluorophobics’ view” (Easley, 1999). In light of proponents’ refusal to debate this issue, Dr. Edward Groth, a Senior Scientist at Consumers Union, observed that “the political pro-fluoridation stance has evolved into a dogmatic, authoritarian, essentially antiscientific posture, one that discourages open debate of scientific issues” (Martin 1991).

50). Proponents use very dubious tactics to promote fluoridation.

Many scientists, doctors, and dentists who have spoken out publicly on this issue have been subjected to censorship and intimidation (Martin 1991). For example, Dr. Phyllis Mullenix was fired from her position as Chair of Toxicology at Forsythe Dental Center for publishing her findings on fluoride and the brain (Mullenix 1995), and Dr. William Marcus was fired from the EPA for questioning the government’s handling of the NTP’s fluoride-cancer study (Bryson 2004).

Many dentists and even doctors tell opponents in private that they oppose this practice but dare not speak out in public because of peer pressure and the fear of recriminations. Tactics like this would not be necessary if those promoting fluoridation were on secure scientific and ethical grounds.

Conclusion

Regarding controversies surrounding toxic chemicals, vested interests traditionally do their very best to discount animal studies and quibble with epidemiological findings. In the past, political pressures have led government agencies to drag their feet on regulating asbestos, benzene, DDT, PCBs, tetraethyl lead, tobacco, and dioxins.

Fluoridation, we have had a sixty-year delay. But unfortunately, because government officials and dental leaders have put so much of their credibility on the line defending fluoridation and because of the enormous liabilities waiting in the wings if they admit that fluoridation has caused an increase in hip fracture, arthritis, bone cancer, brain disorders or thyroid problems, it will be tough for them to speak honestly and openly about the issue.

But they must, not only to protect millions of people from unnecessary harm but to protect the notion that, at its core, public health policy must be based on sound science, not political expediency. They have a tool to do this: it’s called the Precautionary Principle. Simply put, this says: if in doubt, leave it out.

This is what most European countries have done, and their children's teeth have not suffered, while their public's trust has been strengthened.

Just how much doubt is needed on just one of the health concerns identified above to override a benefit, which, when quantified in the largest survey ever conducted in the US, amounts to less than one tooth surface (out of 128) in a child's mouth?

While fluoridation may not be the most significant environmental health threat, it is one of the easiest to end. It is as easy as turning off a spigot in the public waterworks, but turning off that spigot takes political will, and to get that, we need masses more people informed and organized. So please bring these 50 reasons to all your friends and encourage them to get fluoride out of their community and help ban this practice worldwide.

The Vaccine Scam – Big Lie

VACCINES: ARE THEY SAFE & EFFECTIVE?

Today, many experts say that most vaccines are intended to be profit-making products, and very few vaccines are effective. Most will cause autism and other disorders.

CDC and Dr. Fauci have LIED too many times for anyone to take either of them seriously. The NIH is also in on the dramatic hoax. The FDA is no stranger to lying either. Vaers– reports only 1% of the actual injuries and deaths from the injections. Whatever you know about Covid 19 is a LIE.

Many experts, doctors, and scientists are saying that the entire Covid 19 hoax is lies, deception, and a massive attempt to murder millions of people. Khazarians? You bet it was! Their depopulation plan is on schedule.

How can they call it a Vaccine if it does not immunize you? It doesn't make any sense at all. So instead, many experts call the INJECTIONS a Bioweapon because there are no health benefits – nothing but injuries and death.

Many people involved in the Covid19 hoax will be arrested and sent to prison. Many will be convicted of murder and executed. The Covid19 gang imitated exactly what the Germans did in WW2. Many Germans faced the Nuremberg trials and were executed.

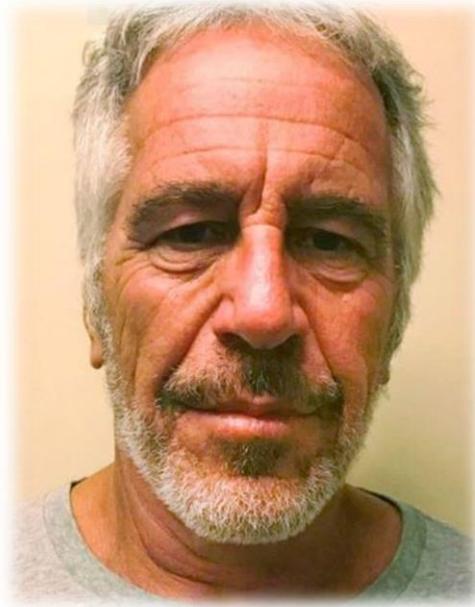

Spain was now the 19th country that took its Health Minister to court over Covid-19 and won. The Spanish High Court has determined that Covid-19 was NOT a virus but a Bio-Weapon with a patent.

12,548 children suffered severe adverse events caused by Covid-19 drug in the USA, 106 children have died. Published by US Centers for Disease Control. (CDC)

The Jeffrey Epstein – Fake Suicide Scam.

Jeffrey Epstein did not kill himself, a leading forensic pathologist employed by his brother to examine the body has claimed. Mark Epstein, the younger sibling of the financier, has always been concerned that the death behind bars of Epstein, 66, was unexplained.

Most people believe Epstein did not commit suicide; instead, he was assisted to live in secrecy. Epstein owns private videos and photos of influential and powerful people raping children. The FBI raided his Island (pedo island) and discovered thousands of pictures and videos – however, our CORRUPT FBI will never release these findings.

Epstein was a prolific pedophile. He favored young teenage girls and younger ones.

Note: Several experts say it is possible that Jeffrey Epstein was removed from the NY jail and is held captive at a secret location and is “singing like a bird” about the rich and powerful people who have been to and were involved in the pedo-orgies. Epstein was a CIA agent utilizing his pedophile reputation to lure young girls and politicians. All rooms had video cameras for blackmail purposes.

Clinton Scam

Clinton/Lewinsky Affair

In January 1998, resident journalist Matt Drudge reported a thrilling tale that – t ended up being accurate. The president of the United States, Costs Clinton, had an affair with a White House intern, Monica Lewinsky. As suspicions installed, Clinton publicly denied the claims. But, as if this lie weren't BIG enough, it turned out that Clinton had lied under oath concerning the event also-- which was perjury and premises for impeachment.

Below's just how the truth appeared. Paula Jones was an Arkansas state staff member when then-governor Clinton purportedly propositioned her. She later sued him for unwanted sexual advances. In an initiative to verify that

They found Linda Tripp, a previous White House secretary and confidant of Lewinsky. Tripp videotaped telephone conversations in which Lewinsky broached her affair with Clinton. Lawyers then probed Clinton with specific questions and cornered him to reject the event under oath.

District attorney Kenneth Starr subpoenaed Clinton during the highly advertised detraction. He finally confessed to the sexual encounter.

He was based upon Starr's record, your home of Reps elected to impeach Clinton for not only perjury yet blockage of justice. Clinton preserved reasonably high authorization scores from the American public despite the scandal, and the Us senate acquitted him of the costs. Nevertheless, in the eyes of several Americans, his heritage continued to be stained.

The Titanic – Scam!

The below may be a theory...if it is true, then history has told a big fat lie!

The American central bank, the Federal Reserve, was created on December 23, 1913, enacting the Federal Reserve Act. The fact that it was a year after the sinking of the Titanic has led to allegations of conspiracy.

John Pierpont Morgan Sr. (April 17, 1837 – March 31, 1913) was an American financier and banker.

First of all, many experts believe the Titanic had a sister cruise ship called the Olympia. They say it was the Olympia that sunk and not the Titanic. The Olympia was already damaged, and it became an insurance fraud to switch the two cruise ships. They quickly changed ships by repainting the names on the cruise ships. Nobody was the wiser. The disaster was planned way.

The Federal Reserve, thought to be one of the essential financial instincts on the planet, is attached to Titanic. The White Celebrity Line was possessed since 1902 by the International Mercantile Marine Firm, a count developed in the very early twentieth century as an attempt by J.P. Morgan to monopolize the shipping trade. So ultimately, J.P. Morgan was the owner of Titanic; by the truth, he held a considerable share of White Celebrity Line.

Additionally, J.P. Morgan required the United States federal government to act on a central financial plan during the Bank Panic of 1907, when Wall Street resorted to J.P. Morgan for help. According to Investopedia.com, "Morgan was able to convene all the primary players at his manor and command all their capital to flood the system, thus floating the financial institutions that aided to float business up until the panic passed.

The reality that the federal government owed its economic survival to a private lender required the required legislation to produce a reserve bank and the Federal Reserve." (Investopedia article).

Notably, J.P. Morgan was set to board RMS Titanic for her initial voyage but canceled his journey at the last minute. His friend Milton Hersey also terminated his trip.

The maiden trip of Titanic had three of the most affluent Americans living at the time: John Jacob Astor IV, Benjamin Guggenheim, and Isidor Straus. But, according to the conspiracy theory, as J.P. Morgan intended to form The Federal Get, he exterminated any potential dangers by making sure rival millionaires Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, and Benjamin Guggenheim, all purportedly opposed the creation of a reserve bank, perished aboard Titanic.

This theory got a surge of assistance when the pro-Trump online conspiracy-theory group QAnon stated it in Nov. 2017. However, it is not new. Did J.P. Morgan sink the Titanic?" August 4, 2018, by Erick Trickey Link to article).

This is the "meme" often used by proponents of the Federal Reserve conspiracy theory, which alleges that millionaires Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, and Benjamin Guggenheim all opposed the Federal Reserve.

There are various other versions of this concept, including a claim that the Rothschild financial household or the Catholic order of Jesuits were the ones that prepared Astor, Straus as well as Guggenheim's deaths on the Titanic.

The Washington Message notes that invoking the Rothschilds as worldwide conspirators is "a centuries-old anti-Semitic trope ... The Rothschild family members established banking houses across Europe in the early 1800s, and also they have been a favored target of conspiracy theorists since." Did J.P. Morgan sink the Titanic?" August 4, 2018, by Erick Trickey Weblink short article).

When it comes to the Jesuits, "as international loan providers, the Rothschilds would certainly have rather not had a US Federal Reserve. It would certainly support the US money and reduce their opportunities commercial from United States bargains." (Link to Skeptoid write-up).

The essential issue with this theory is that is total conjecture. Despite the significant quantity of time, cash, and individuals included, there has not been one recorded product of evidence or eyewitness testament to sustain the insurance claim.

Moreover, crucial elements of the theory are inaccurate, as the following three factors reveal:

There is very little information or evidence connecting the three men to the opposition of the Federal Book According to Becky Little in her write-up on History.com, "Astor and Guggenheim do not show up to have taken a position on it as well as Straus supported it." (Weblink to History.com write-up).

The Business Expert includes: "There's very little info online to recommend that the three guys who passed away were also challengers of the Federal Reserve. But, unfortunately, any look for "Federal Reserve" along with any of their names becomes so stalled in conspiracy theory websites that it's hard to discover any type of reputable sources of info." (Web Link to Company Insider article).

The Washington Article, in its fact-checking article, verifies this: "Astor, Guggenheim as well as Straus did not oppose the development of the Federal Book. A digital search of crucial united state newspapers of the age does not reveal Astor or Guggenheim taking a placement on the Fed. However, Straus did. He spoke openly for the proposal to create a government reserve, according to 2 October 1911 stories in the New York City Times." (" Fact-checking QAnon conspiracy concepts: Did J.P. Morgan sink the Titanic?" August 4, 2018, by Erick Trickey Link to write-up).

Perhaps their position is likewise irrelevant, according to Dailydot.com: "The three living would not have done anything to stop the financial institution from being released, as the Federal Book Act conveniently passed both houses of Congress in 1913, as well as the U.S., had already tried a primary banking system numerous times formerly.

Beyond that, sources of the time have Guggenheim reserving his place on the ship after Morgan canceled, meaning the conspiracy theory virtually wouldn't have operated in the first place." (Link to Dailydot short article).

Skeptics likewise state it would certainly have been far too late to make a difference: "Rounding up support for the Federal Book had taken years; it had first become clear that the United States needed leading financial throughout the War of Independence the 1700s.

Sinking three nabobs a simple two years before the plan was ultimately concluded would have been far too little, much, too late to make any difference." (Link to Skeptoid article).

Dailydot.com notes: " There's additionally no sign in the conspiracy concept of exactly how Morgan would certainly have made sure the ship sinks. Did he buy the staff to hit an iceberg? Knowing they weren't prepared for the catastrophe, why would they take his orders? Suppose the ship had made it through?" (Weblink to Dailydot post).

According to The Washington Blog post, "the plot included making sure the ship had the incorrect signal flares. In a sci-fi-horror spin, believers also declare the Titanic's decks could be electromagnetically sealed to catch passengers." (" Fact-checking QAnon conspiracy concepts: Did J.P. Morgan sink the Titanic?" August 4, 2018, by Erick Trickey Weblink to post).

" Some of the 'facts' offered up in the retellings of this story are definitely hysterical to check out, a minimum of to any person acquainted with the historical facts," created maritime chronicler J. Kent Layton in his 2016 publication "Conspiracy theories at Sea: Titanic and Lusitania." However, he adds that it's nearly unimaginable that Morgan can've obtained all 3 of his primary opponents to take the eventful trip. "Certainly, there needed simpler ways to perform the plan?"

More specifically, how could Morgan make sure that Astor, Guggenheim, and Straus all passed away in the disaster? As survival depended entirely on which side of Titanic you left: Second police officer Lightoller on the port side rejected any males (and also stewardesses) entry as he analyzed his order as "females and also children ONLY."

However, on the starboard side, First police officer Murdoch analyzed it as "females and also kids FIRST," so some well-off and significant males such as Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon got away in lifeboat no. 1, Karl Behr, American tennis celebrity and lender in lifeboat no. 5 as well as Bruce Ismay in collapsible C, all released from the starboard side.

Maritime chronicler J. Kent Layton in his 2016 book Conspiracy theories mixed-up: Titanic as well as Lusitania, notes: "A lot more importantly: exactly how was it that nobody came forward in the century because as well as claimed, 'Yes, I helped to set up the sinking of the Titanic to kill three males who were opposed to the formation of the United States Federal Get'?"

Interestingly, according to a concept by Dr. David Grimes, from Oxford University, an equation shares 'how long alleged conspiracies could "survive" before being revealed - intentionally or unknowingly - to the public. This equation trusts three elements: the variety of accomplices entailed, the time passed, and the intrinsic likelihood of a conspiracy stop working. Based on this equation, this Federal Reserve conspiracy theory would have been fully exposed as accurate. Check out the BBC article on this right here. The full Plos One journal can be checked out below. (Released: January 26, 2016).

According to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, "some biographers indicate that Morgan never prepared to cruise on Titanic's maiden-trip as a result of his distaste 'for digital photographers as well as reporters who would certainly swarm aboard at Southampton'" (Melanie Linn Gutowski, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, April 16, 2012 Link to article).

To J.P. Morgan canceling "at the last minute" research study by Mark Baber and uploaded on Encyclopaedia Titanica reveals it to be an urban myth.

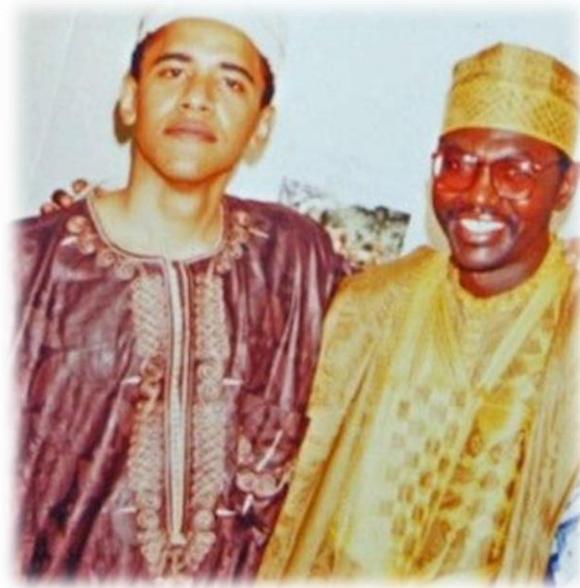

Baber compiled a listing of Morgan's returns from Europe from 1904 to 1912, and "just twice (1908 as well as 1910) in those years did he return to New York City from Europe before July, as well as in among those years (1908) he returned that early only to attend a family members wedding celebration, heading back to Europe a few days later and also staying there till late August."

And also, those celebrations he returned early was in June -never as early as April. Much more effectively, a New York City Times news article of Thursday 28th March 1912 reveals that in March, "J. Pierpont Morgan has composed a polite letter to the committee, revealing that he will be in Venice on April 23 to launch the biennial International Art Exhibition, April 25, and also devote the brand-new Campanile of St. Mark's."

This indicates Morgan would have no reason to return early on April 10, especially when he scheduled in Venice by April 23 (remembering that the transatlantic voyages are at least five days long, he would certainly be not likely to make it back in time).

Nothing more to tell – we can go on and on about Barry’s scams and lies to the American people. He sickens most fair-thinking people.

Hollywood's BIG SCAM

HOLLYWOOD'S THREE BIGGEST SCAM

The Khazarian Mafia has always controlled Hollywood, and then later, the control was handed over to the CIA. Hollywood has always been a cesspool of pedophiles, rapists, and child sex trafficking. The Khazarians are satanic pedophiles.

Hollywood doesn't want any person to understand exactly how exceptionally its distorted messages affect us. First of all, Hollywood is controlled by the CIA. Second, Hollywood is nothing but a propaganda tool. It is meant to brainwash specific segments of the population. Third, TV programs are even worse. TV was invented for only one person – to control the masses. Hence Tele-vision.

I wish to address a paradox. Why are we so frantically worried about the top quality of the air we breathe, the water we drink, and the food we take into our bodies, therefore thoughtlessly unconcerned about the pictures and the messages from the mass media that we took into our minds? Those messages did not just enter the reason; they go into the imagination and join our real spirits. What's particularly impressive is that we're so unconcerned about what children see.

I believe individuals do not consider media as carefully as they check out food because three persistent and pervasive lies have significantly influenced us that Hollywood loves to outline what it does.

The three lies Hollywood tells us are 1) motion pictures and tv are just safe diversions. They only captivate individuals; they do not influence people. 2) The media just mirror reality; they do not form fact; as well as 3) the show business just gives the public what it desires. If you do not like it, switch off the television or skip the motion picture.

Lie 1: We produce harmless diversion. We don't influence people at all. BIG LIE!

I have an obvious instance of the pretension at the heart of this claim. A couple of years ago, the chief executive officer of a significant movie studio rose at a panel discussion and claimed, "The problem with individuals like Michael Medved is that they never offer us credit history for all the fantastic points that this sector achieves.

For instance, you do not listen to Michael Medved recognizing that the film 'Lethal Tool 3' saved countless American lives." I remained on the stage feeling so obtuse. I could not think about any life-giving message in "Lethal Tool 3." I asked.

The gent stated, "Well, I assume everyone else below comprehended it, even if you didn't. Before Danny Glover and Mel Gibson go off on a highspeed chase, we had an extreme close-up that was on screen for a full three seconds showing the two individuals attaching their safety belt."

Consider the logic below.

In some way, individuals will imitate 3 secs of fastening a safety belt however they won't mimic the remainder of the movie, which is full of eviscerations, lacerations, blade injuries, gunshot wounds, surges, car crashes, and all type of various other anti-social behavior. Just how ridiculous is this? Numerous Hollywood movies and TV programs have a virtually obligatory condom scene, and they want credit for showing this little magical latex amulet that makes everything OK.

People are most likely to mimic the use of this device, yet not the rest of it-the whole configuration to get them right into the situation where they use the gadget to begin with. We sell condoms, however, not premarital or untrustworthy sexuality. Does this make sense? Of course not.

TV offers. That's the nature of it. You see 30 seconds of a commercial, and all of an unexpected you intend to acquire the product. So exactly how can one state that these 30 secs deserve hundreds of hundreds of advertiser dollars because it influences people? However, do the thirty minutes bordering the 30 secs have no impact?

Hollywood's fall-back protection of the "we don't influence" lie is that many people end up OK. We do not become violent. Our youngsters do not mature to be fierce adults, although they view great deals of terrible films and television. There may be physical violence in the media, yet the proceeding frequency of respectable individuals verifies that it doesn't have any type of negative results. This is the most, not logical, deceitful, sexy, foul line in this entire debate.

Consider. Number of Americans have ever seen an advertisement on tv for the Lexus automobile? A hundred million or more. The number is so affected by that ad that they head out and purchase a Lexus? One in a thousand? One in a hundred thousand? That's enough. Many advertisements affect one out of a thousand or a hundred thousand- and the ad matters.

Similarly, terrible photos that impact the thinking and actions of one out of a thousand or hundred thousand visitors can significantly affect society because the issue with a crime isn't that everybody does it; it's that a few people commit criminal acts repeatedly.

But there's even more. Returning to the Lexus advertisement, those who will never get the automobile have been affected. The auto was redefined as something glamorous, something preferable, something sexy. A Lexus is a very nice-looking auto, but so is a Buick. As a result of the ad, you claim, "Oh, there's a $40,000 car. That's glossy. I wonder what's driving it. That's a condition sign."

The fact is that That is their absolute power. Even when we don't copy what we see regarding sexual habits or violence, repeated exposure to these pictures redefines that kind of action as preferable, as attractive, as sexy-as typical.

And for a lot of Americans, especially kids, their main sight of the world beyond their moms and dads comes from tv. And also, the actions that you see time and again and once again end up being typical. And that's why the real power of this tool is not just to transform our idea of what is accepted in this society but to transform our concept of what is expected a lot more directly. And that brings me to the second lie.

Lie 2: We don't form reality. We reflect fact. BIG EXIST!

Lie two was revealed very well by the movie director Paul Verhoven, that has given to our people such worthy gems as "RoboCop" and "Total Recall" and the film "Basic Instinct," which I had reviewed under the heading, "Primarily It Has an odor." Mr. Verhoven informed me, "We're just musicians. We simply do what musicians do. We hold the mirror as much as nature and show nature the method it is. The issue isn't what we show; the problem is a society that is awful, fierce, and horrible. So we show things as they are." This is the regular cop-out as well as justification of every Hollywood apologist.

Daily, 350 characters show up on prime-time television on all the networks. Typically, on a provided evening of prime-time television, about 7 of them are murdered. That suggests in two months; everybody's dead! By some price quotes, prime time television has a violence and murder rate 1,000 times more than our cities and communities. This is fact?

The display stars Guild of America studied the equilibrium of flick duties that go to males and females. Some 72 percent of talking parts in the last five years were most likely to guys. However, 64 percent of all talking components are most likely to males on prime-time TV. Truth?

When it pertains to sexuality, the distortions of fact are a lot more grotesque. One study located that in a typical year on prime-time television, there are 30,000 references to intercourse. Recommendations for sex outside marital relationships are 13 times more common than sex inside marital relationships. I have virtually pertained to the verdict that sex between husband and wife is the only type of sex you're not allowed to reveal on tv. This is Hollywood's mirror showing ourselves?

Each week, 140 million Americans are most likely to go to church or synagogue. Do you see this on TV? Instead, we view Bart Simpson claiming poise: "Beloved God, we spent for all these things ourselves. Many thanks for nothing." A lovely message for the youngsters of America. The only pictures of spiritual people you see are of people that are corrupt, insane, and uneven. It's an entirely impractical stereotype, as well as it does not show what the people of America believe.

This concept that "we simply show fact; we reveal the world as it is" is rubbish. Hollywood misshapes truth and misshapes truth in manner ins which I consider very devastating.

And that brings us to the last lie.

Lie 3: We're just promising entrepreneurs. We provide the general public with what it wants. BIG EXIST!

You hear this generally in the context that no person will see it unless a flick makes love, foul language, and violence in it. So it's doomed at the package office. So allow's simply check this theory.

One of the things I performed in creating my book "Hollywood vs. America" was to look at the box-office efficiency of the previous 15 years of flicks. Through that whole period, when more than 50 percent of movies were rated R. R-rated, motion pictures made the least at package office typically without a doubt.

PG-rated movies earned on average two-and-one-half times what R-rated flicks made. And also yet, during that very same amount of time, the portion of R flicks increased, and the percentage of PG movies dropped.

Most movies that are ranked R get the R except for violence or sex; they're rated R for language. Where is the constituency available requiring foul language in movies? Have you ever become aware of someone leaving a motion-picture theater claiming, "I truly feel duped reason I did not reach listen to the 'F' word enough." Have you ever heard of any person who complained concerning a movie that its language was simply as well clean? Does that assume like that? No person!

Why do they feel the need to toss sex-related content into the flicks where it does not belong?

Why do they feel the requirement to go so considerably into violence on TV? Of the top 25 ranked TV collections, the only one with intense violence is "NYPD Blue." The American individuals aren't demanding this thing. So currently, you have an evident concern: Why do they do it?

I'll provide you with a bit of a story. At an affair a couple of years back, I talked to a supervisor whose job I admire. He had done a movie simply a year prior to- an R-rated movie-that I had liked very much. Yet it flopped at the package workplace. I informed him of my final thought that R-rated films generally do much less well than PG or PG-13 scores. He agreed with me that the R ranking was a handicap. "After that, why did you not get it altered?" I asked.

" We attempted to obtain the score transformed, but they would not flex," he claimed. "I thought it was unfair-we really did not have violence, we did not have sex, we simply had some language. We had 14 'F' words as well as they gave us the R."

" But once they offered you the R. and you recognized it was due to the 14 'F' words, did it ever before strike you just to go back and get the 'F' words?"

The individual stopped for a moment, and he turned white. Then, he stated, "That would have been to compromise my artistic honesty."

A market that perplexes artistic honesty with "F" words is a market that is teens. Many of us grow out of the need to use foul language to confirm our masculinity and shock the world. Not the overgrown teens that make feature films or do television. Their fascination with this product isn't based on money. It's based upon the regard of their peers. Individuals who make this product are awfully unconfident, like all musicians are, and they desperately wish to be taken seriously by their coworkers.

Stature is distributed in Hollywood based upon the idiotic assumption that art's purpose is to shock individuals, alarm people, and make individuals unpleasant.

Traditionally, we have constantly had the notion that it's the objective of art to uplift and inspire. Among the most significant artists that ever lived, Bach created at the beginning of each of his greater than 1,000 functions the adage, "With the help of the Almighty God." There was a sense that it was the artist's objective to proclaim God in some form.

Dickens thought that Shakespeare believed that, Cervantes thought that, Dante thought that, and Tolstoy thought that. As well as, they did art that possibly even isn't that substandard to the art of Quentin Tarantino.

And this brings me to the last point: Can not we simply say no? Hollywood says, "No one is holding a gun to your head, requiring you to go see the movies. Nobody requires you to switch on the television; nobody is forcing you to watch it. You can constantly simply choose to turn it off. But, on the other hand, shut up and don't bother us."

The excellent theorist Joe Louis claimed: "You can run, yet you can't conceal."

That's the means it is with popular culture. You can not prevent it. I have never purchased a Madonna tape or tickets to a Madonna show. However, I know who Madonna is. I know what she resembles. I understand her fascination. I recognize her views. I have never picked to be familiar with Madonna. Motion pictures and TV were selected for me.

Many Americans did not see the flick with Demi Moore, Robert Redford, and Wo. Still, practically everyone recognizes the plot-Robert Redford uses Demi Moore and her spouse a million dollars if she would spend the night with him. Simply reflecting on reality, keep in mind? But I went to a college where I listened to 9-year-olds talking about it. They hadn't seen the motion picture, but they stated, "Do you assume your mommy would do it if they gave her a million bucks? ...".

The point is this: Claiming to people that if they don't like the popular culture, they can simply transform it off resembles saying that if they do not, such as the smoke, they can merely quit breathing.

That's why this is an ecological issue. We are demanding responsibility of significant firms for their air pollution of our air and our water, it's likewise appropriate to need these giant social conglomerates who show much more responsibility for their contamination of the cultural environment; all of us take a breath.

What can we do about the ethical and also social contamination? Below are a couple of ideas.

To solve Hollywood's first lie, that the media is just home entertainment, we have to say "Messages issue." We must show greater discernment regarding the photos and the values we place into our creative imaginations and right into our very spirits.

2nd to the lie that Hollywood just mirrors reality, we have to understand, teach and live the truth that what we see on screen isn't genuine. My impression is that the more television one enjoys, the more clinically depressed, the extra self-pitying, and the even more defenseless one will feel. We are in the grasp of a cry-baby culture. So many people see the globe as even worse than it is, hopeless. That's an item of accepting media reality.

Last, to the lie that Hollywood simply gives the public what it wants, we know it does not. However, this recommends that boycotts and economic pressure will not transform the scenario since Hollywood isn't responding to the public target market.

Economic pressure alone isn't going to alter things in Hollywood. More individuals with conscience and worth coming out and getting associated with pop culture are most likely to change. Unfortunately, we have left this business to the Oliver Stones and Quentin Tarantinos of the world for many years.

The fact is that when individuals of belief clean their hands as well as say they're not going to get included with the motion picture service, that it's unclear, then you wind up getting the kind of popular culture you could anticipate.

Give support, motivation, and dedication to the root cause of not only whining, yet creating, not just darning the negative, but applauding the great, as well as we can make a difference; we can alter points. Pop culture will never be entirely fabulous, it will never be all ideal, but it can be much better .

The Lies of Area 51

What lies behind United States' most secretive military base, Area 51, is a question most Americans have been asking themselves for years. However, the peculiarity of its remote location and tight restriction to the public has increased curiosity over the decades.

The absence of tangible evidence that would prove Area 51's existence has made it easy for the U.S. government to deny any activity that ever took place there and that it's real. Out of various conspiracies that have surfaced with time, the most popular is that the U.S. government has and still uses Area 51 to experiment with extraterrestrial life and their spaceships.

One might see the complex's buildings through satellite images, particularly on Google, yet they do not appear on government maps. The base is located in southern Nevada's middle of the desert, approximately 83 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Initially, the name "Area 51" did not surface until 1951, when the black operations, covert missions carried out by government agencies, military units, or paramilitary organizations, are believed to have begun.

According to the New York Post, Area 51 was renamed in 2008. It was revealed to the public via navigation software such as Homey Airport to avoid collisions from private airstrips. More information about Area 51 has surfaced in recent times, but that still does not take away from its mysteriousness.

In past years, the CIA, U.S. Air Force, and aerospace company Lockheed Martin have used Area 51 to conduct test flights of experimental airships.

The shape of Oxcart's plane was disk-like and resembled what is known as a flying saucer when flying in the air. Due to its high velocity, the aircraft would reflect the sun's light causing anyone looking up into the sky to think it was a UFO.

Tests were run frequently until the program was retired in 1968. Regardless, there is also substantial evidence to prove the area is still suspicious and that the U.S. government is hiding information that can be scandalous to the public.

Walter S. Kasza was survived by his wife, Stella Kasza, who now lives on to speak about her husband's death in Area 51. Mr. Kasza was a sheet metal worker who happened to work for a defense contractor for an Air Force base in Nevada. For years, Kasza dealt with health complications that doctors could not determine the cause for.

Kasza's guts ached, skin cracked, and bled for years until he was diagnosed with kidney cancer and died in 1995. Like Kasza, 51 other men who worked at the base experienced the same symptoms. The Washington Post stated that "men who worked there from the late 1970s into the early 1990s say that inhaling the smoke resulted in persistent respiratory distress, cancers, and strange rashes." The fumes that affected the men were toxins rarely seen in humans through biopsies.

After filing a lawsuit against the U.S. government when Bill Clinton was president, Clinton did not assume responsibility for Kasza's case. Instead, he said that the possible evidence related to his case was top-secret and unable to be disclosed.

Stories similar to Mr. Kasza's further support the conspiracies that the U.S. government uses this site to experiment with extraterrestrials. If Area 51, as the world knows it was simply an Air Force Base, why does its functionality have to remain classified?

The United States has some skeletons in the closet, and as much as individuals might try to turn these conspiracies into facts, it would be almost impossible. Therefore, the location is permanently closed when inserting Area 51 into a web search.

Nevertheless, it is strange that a permanently secure location would need guards to ensure people stay away and underground motion sensors to detect nearby intruders. Moreover, for all we know, what remains behind the gates of Area 51 may or may not be what most individuals have conspired for.

The secret background of Location 51, explained by an expert Annie Jacobsen spent years learning the secrets of Location 51. You may have heard about the viral meme that can result in people storming Nevada's renowned Area 51 later today to uncover the tricks of the mysterious United States Flying force base.

It's an absurd (and unbelievably hazardous) concept-- the Flying force has advised that it will protect the facility vigorously, yet the impulse behind it may be easy to understand. For years, the American creative imagination has cut loose, creating conspiracy concepts concerning what is genuinely taking place at the website.

Is it an area where the United States federal government conceals UFOs and aliens? Or is it just an uninteresting military base? As if it's simply a dull military base, why is the United States government so consumed with keeping whatever concerning it a key?

To get some responses without risking obtaining a chance in the US armed forces, I called up Annie Jacobsen, author of the guide Location 51: An Uncensored History of America's Supersecret Army Base.

To create the guide, Jacobsen spoke with over 70 individuals who had first-hand expertise in the secret center, consisting of 32 who lived and operated at Area 51. The result is one of the most detailed accounts of the background of Location 51 without a super-high-level safety and security clearance.

What is Area 51?

Area 51 was the native home of the above espionage for the CIA. It's where the U-2 spy plane was first developed back in the 1950s, as well as it's where the intelligence community has worked with its military companions and others to service espionage systems.

It's likewise a place where all aspects of the Defense Division service some of their most classified programs along with members of the knowledge area, of which there are several.

There's also a component of Location 51 where the CIA educates its foreign paramilitary partners in counterterrorism methods. They do this out on the bushes of Area 51 because they can bring some international competitors there that would otherwise not be welcomed into the nation.

So the United States could fly them in a plane with the home windows drawn, drop them off, educate them, and neither the boxers nor the American public had any idea where they were or what was going on.

Just how important has Area 51 been to establishing America's spying abilities?

We would not have the sort of unbelievable above espionage innovation that we have today without the presence of Location 51. It allowed the various wings of the federal government to go after innovations in a huge open area that they could or else not pursue.

The U-2 spy plane flew at 70,000 feet and 500 miles an hour. Think of just how much work you would have to do to make something like that-- it was this unbelievably delicate plane. Pilots died evaluating it.

However, it taught the powers that be that with this unbelievable initiative of testing, you might accomplish modern revolutionary technologies.

Why did this location become such a hotbed for spying on modern technology and training? Is it just because it's so remote and so huge?

When the base was founded back in the very early 1950s, President Eisenhower charged a guy called Richard Bissell from the CIA to locate the most remote, the majority of the secretive area in the United States, where they could work on the U-2 spy plane far from any kind of spying eyes-- Soviet or otherwise.

So Bissell wisely flew about with one more CIA fellow and discovered the perfect fulfillment of that governmental request: a secret base centered around a completely dry lakebed in the middle of Nevada, situated inside an already classified facility where the federal government was taking off nuclear weapons.

Bissell realized that there was no other way that anybody was most likely to try to get involved in this facility. Why would they wish to? There were bombs going off!

Whatever about Area 51 screams privacy-- not simply the location, yet those who function there are brought into an extremely secretive society in which it's extremely taboo to divulge anything. So exactly how did the UFOs and aliens narrative happen?

It remained covered to the outdoors until the late 1980s when an engineer called Bob Lazar took place a local Nevada information program. Bob Lazar additionally informed the public he thought he saw an alien.

That was the minute Location 51 became a public attraction. It had been entirely cloaked in secrecy prior to that.

And in all the years considering that the rate of interest in the website has acquired momentum around two suggestions: the concept that the US military has been reverse-engineering UFOs as well as modern alien technology at the site, as well as the reality about the base that several of the most incredibly advanced innovation platforms have been developed as well as evaluated available.

The best instance remained in the 1950s when the U-2 spy plane was periodically identified. It primarily resembled a flying cross, method up high in the sky. As well as individuals would certainly write to their Congressman and state, "I saw a UFO. Nothing flies this high." They were right in that respect. Absolutely nothing did fly that high regarding any personal understanding.

Therefore, as we know from declassified papers currently, the CIA used that misidentification to their benefit. It let the UFO folklore evolve since it served as a beneficial cover for the secret base.

Did the CIA propagate the alien's story, also?

Okay, so we have this secretive screening site for overhanging spy airplanes. So what does this mystical area look like?

Location 51 belongs to the Nevada Test and Training Range, which is a significant federal piece of property; it's approximately the dimension of Connecticut. So location 51 is a small tract in that area that borders this completely dry lakebed. The exact dimensions have never been reported, yet you can predict based on taking a look at the map.

We understand what occurred from the 1950s to the 1970s, which primarily serviced advanced airplanes for snooping. However, what gets extreme is what was taking place in the 1990s and the 2000s and certainly since the Battle on Terror.

I have absolutely no info regarding that. It's a jealously safeguarded secret.

However, you can be sure that whatever is being built and tested has advanced from the technology systems that were worked with before. We understand the base is still growing despite individuals saying it's not.

The first head of state to mention the word or expression "Location 51" openly was President Obama during an honors ceremony at the Kennedy Center. And also, when he did that, essentially, the words "Location 51" came to be declassified.

The secrecy around Location 51 is undoubtedly making thousands state they wish to storm that region. What will they see on the really off chance they attempt and be successful?

I could not even begin to hypothesize that anyone could get into Area 51 to see what's happening. To assume that the federal government isn't uniquely knowledgeable about everybody that goes anywhere near that facility. A group of people massing anywhere near that facility is not mosting likely to occur. Local law enforcement would act preemptively far before that happened.

When individuals ask you to divulge several of the keys you learned from Location 51, what do you tell them?

Well, initially, I sent them to my book, indeed.

Separate from that, I have talked to scores of really clever, very highly placed government personnel who went to the base and think the modern technology they saw is so advanced that they examine whether it's artificial. That's interesting to me. I do not report on that particular because there are no documents to support that insurance claim, yet that is the opinion of many people I know.

To be clear, are these individuals who worked with these programs? No, these individuals have gone to the base and have been asked their professional opinion as evaluation on classified programs.

Simply based on that, if someone were to ask you-- and also I think that someone would certainly be me-- would you claim with one hundred percent self-confidence that there is no perfect innovation being worked with at Area 51?

I report my books based on what qualified, skilled, multi-sourced individuals inform me, and afterward, I strive to support information based upon declassified papers that exist on the record. So I avoid reporting points that are observed but can not be confirmed.

Fair sufficient, though that's fascinating to me.

What likewise intrigued me regarding what I gained from your publication is that Area 51 feels like the essential Cold War place. Almost movie-like. It has kept that ethos, especially the drive to have the best innovation and the guarded secrecy around such initiatives.

That's excellent monitoring on your component, and I believe in the broader secrecy campaign at the office in Location 51's support. One could argue that all this business of catching UFOs from deep space and aliens is great babble. "Look over below!" As well, as individuals reach, assume, "Oh, Area 51 is simply a Cold War relic."

However, my uncertainty is that several of one of the most sophisticated science and technology programs are being tested at Location 51 today. We won't learn about them for years. But years from now, the future innovation developed there during the War on Fear will look enchanting. Anachronistic. Outdated.

That is my genuine attraction to Area 51. Yes, there are the UFOs and alien things, but it's potentially a vital epicenter for the future of American defense and technological progression.

The life-or-death minutes in America's future are, if not being seeded at Location 51, they're in a sense being chosen there. So to me, that's a terrific tale in and of itself.

Are ETs & UFOs Real?

Are there extraterrestrial life-forms around? The concern for life in other worlds is a big topic in our society today. Science fiction movies and television shows usually portray odd creatures from far away. However, these suggestions are not restricted simply to sci-fi programs. Many secular scientists think that day; we will uncover life on various other planets.

Yes, there are ETs living on planet earth. ETs have been here for hundreds of years. They live deep underground. There are many types of aliens. Some believe certain aliens run our planet. Some people believe some aliens are responsible for human abduction around the world.

Even projects like the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Knowledge (SETI) check the heavens with practical radio telescopes listening for signals from intelligent aliens. Many Christians have bought into the idea of an extraordinary extraterrestrial life. However, is this concept genuinely biblical? The Christian ought to constantly examine concepts taking into account Scripture and take "every thought into bondage to the obedience of Christ" (2 Corinthians 10:5).

The Evolution Connection

The idea of "extraterrestrial life" stems mainly from a belief in time in evolution. Remember that in the transformative sight, the earth is "simply an additional world"-- one where the problems just happened to be ideal forever to develop and develop. If there are billions of other planets in our galaxy, at least a handful of these globes have also had the best problems. Extraterrestrial life is almost inescapable in a transformative worldview.

Nonetheless, the notion of extraordinary life does not square well with Bible. The earth is unique. God designed the planet for life (Isaiah 45:18). The various other planets have an entirely different function than the world, so they are made differently. In Genesis 1, we check out that God produced plants on the earth on Day 3, birds to fly in the atmosphere, marine life to swim in the sea on Day 5, and pets to inhabit on Day 6.

People were also made on Day 6 and were offered preeminence over the animals. Yet where does the Holy bible discuss the creation of life on the "lights in the area of the paradises"? There is no such summary since the lights in the area were not designed to accommodate life. God offered treatment of the planet to guys. However, the paradises are the Lord's (Psalm 115:16). Therefore, from a biblical point of view, extraterrestrial life does not appear reasonable.

Troubles are increased when we consider the opportunity of extraordinary intelligent life. Science fiction programming is plentiful with races of individuals that advanced on other worlds. We see instances of Vulcans and Klingons--pseudo humans similar to us in many respects, however various in others. As a plot gadget, these races enable the exploration of the human condition from an outsider's viewpoint.

Although entertaining, such alien races are theologically bothersome. Intelligent alien beings can not be redeemed. God's plan of redemption is for humans: those come down from Adam. Allow us to analyze the problem between the salvation message and the notion of an extraordinary life.

The Redemption of The human race

The Scriptures instruct that the initial man, Adam, rebelled versus God (Genesis 3). Because of this, sin and fatality entered the globe (Romans 5:12). We are all descended from Adam and Eve (Genesis 3:20) and have acquired from them a transgression nature (Romans 6:6, 20). This is a problem: transgression is a barrier that stops males from being right with God (Isaiah 59:2). Yet God likes us despite our transgression and offered a redemption strategy-- a means to be integrated with God.

After Adam and Eve sinned, God made layers of skins to cover them (Genesis 3:21). He, therefore, had to eliminate at least one animal. This literal action is symbolic of our redemption; an innocent Lamb (Christ-- the Lamb of God) would be sacrificed to offer a covering for the wrong (John 1:29). Likewise, in the Old Testament, individuals would sacrifice animals to the Lord to suggest their sin (Hebrews 10:3) and a sign of the One ahead, the Lord Jesus, that would pay the charge for transgression.

The animal sacrifices did not pay the fine for the wrong (Hebrews 10:4, 11). Animals are not associated with us; their shed blood can not count for ours. Yet the blood of Christ can. Christ is a blood relative of ours, considering that He is descended from Adam, as are we; all human beings are of "one blood" (Acts 17:26). Moreover, because Christ is additionally God, His life is of infinite worth, as well as thus, His fatality can spend for all the wrongs of all people. Only the Lord Himself could be our Rescuer (Isaiah 45:21). Therefore, Christ died once for all (Hebrews 10:10).

The Redemption of ET?

We exist with a problem when we consider exactly how the redemption plan might apply to any theoretical extraterrestrial (however otherwise human-like) beings. For example, if there were Vulcans or Klingons available, how would certainly they be conserved?

They are not blood relatives of Jesus, so Christ's shed blood can not pay for their wrong. One could at first suppose that Christ likewise saw their globe, lived there, and passed away there. However, this is antibiblical. Christ died once for all (1 Peter 3:18; Hebrews 9:27-- 28, Hebrews 10:10). Jesus is forever God and man, but He is not an alien.

One might suppose that unusual beings have never sinned, in which case they would not require to be redeemed. However, an additional problem arises: they suffer the effects of transgression, despite having never sinned. Adam's transgression has affected every one of creation-- not simply the human race. Romans 8:20-- 22 clarifies that the totality of creation experiences under the chains of corruption. These issues highlight the problem of incorporating an antibiblical notion right into the Christian worldview.

Extraterrestrial life is a transformative idea; it does not comport with the scriptural mentors of the individuality of the earth and the unique spiritual placement of human beings.

Of all the worlds in deep space, it was the planet that God Himself visited, tackling the added nature of a human, passing away on a cross, and also climbing from the dead to redeem all who would certainly count on Him. The biblical worldview dramatically contrasts with the secular worldview when it involves extraordinary life. So, which worldview does the scientific evidence support? Do modern-day observations support the secular notion that deep space includes life or the scriptural idea that earth is one-of-a-kind?

Where Is Everybody?

No person has found life on other planets or discovered any radio signal from intelligent aliens. This is certainly what a scriptural creationist would anticipate. Nonreligious astronomers continue to look for life, in other words, yet they have found only rocks and motionless issues. Their radio searches are consulted with silence. The real world is the biblical world-- a universe developed by God with the earth at the spiritual focal point, not an evolutionary cosmos including life.

When it comes to extraterrestrial life, scientific research is opposed to a transformative attitude. We currently have no evidence of alien life-forms. This issue is not lost on the nonreligious researchers. It has been stated that the atomic researcher Enrico Fermi was once going over the topic of extraterrestrial life when he asked the profound concern, "Where is everybody?"

Because there are rather possibly multiple billions of earth in our galaxy, and since, in the secular view, these are all mishaps, it is almost unavoidable that several of these had the best conditions for life to evolve. And if some of these globes are billions of years older than ours, at least several of them would certainly have advanced intelligent life eons earlier.

For that reason, deep space ought to have many numbers of technologically exceptional human beings, any type one of which could have conquered our galaxy ages ago. Yet, we locate no proof of these civilizations. Where is everyone? This issue has become called the "Fermi mystery."

This paradox for development is an attribute of creation. We have seen that the planet is developed permanently. With its seas of liquid water, a safe ambiance including bountiful cost-free oxygen, and a distance from the sun ideal for life, the earth was designed by God to live in. But the other planets of deep space were not. From the sulfuric acid clouds of Venus to the frozen marsh of Pluto, the different worlds of our solar system are beautiful and diverse, but they are not created for life.

What about UFOs?

After speaking about extraterrestrial life, a person will ask me about UFOs. A UFO (unidentified flying item) is simply that-- an unknown object was seen in the sky to the individual seeing it. Individuals typically want me to clarify a sighting of some unidentified flying object they or a good friend have claimed to see. (Occasionally, the effect is that if I can't discuss it, it somehow proves that it must be an alien spacecraft, yet such thinking is entirely shallow.¹) These types of inquiries are unreasonable.

It is something to be asked to translate proof that we have, but it is impractical to ask someone to translate undocumented 2nd- or third-hand tales without any actual evidence for inspection.

There is no question that some individuals have seen things in the sky that they do not recognize. However, this is rarely shocking, given that there are many things "up there," which can be misinterpreted by people unfamiliar with them.

These consist of Venus, satellites, the worldwide space station, the space shuttle, rockets, Iridium flares, artificial airplanes, internal representations, meteors, balloons, fireflies, aurorae, birds, round lightning, lenticular clouds, parhelia, and so on. Nevertheless, a person unfamiliar with these would see a UFO since the item is "unidentified" to them. It is exactly how individuals translate what they see that can be suspicious.

Remember that we continually interpret evidence in light of our worldview. It is, as a result, vital to have a correct, biblical worldview. The fallacious worldview of atheism/naturalism may lead somebody to attract incorrect final thoughts regarding what they see. From a scriptural worldview, we sometimes anticipate seeing points that are not quickly explained since our minds are limited. However, UFOs are not unusual spacecraft, as well as certainly; there is no substantial evidence to sustain such an idea.

Why the Hype?

In the 1990s, The X-files' television series entertained countless fans with stories of aliens, government conspiracy theories, and one dedicated FBI representative's unrelenting search for facts. The program's adage, "The reality is around," is a popular expression for sci-fi followers. Yet why is there such hype surrounding the idea of extraterrestrial life? Why is science fiction programming so prominent? Why does SETI invest numerous bucks looking for life in celestial spaces?

Exploring intelligent extraterrestrial life would be viewed as a vindication of development; it is expected from a naturalistic worldview. However, what is the real issue of the need to fulfill specifically wise, technically sophisticated aliens? I have listened to a variety of different answers from secular astronomers.

Sometimes an idea in ETs may originate from a sensation of planetary loneliness: "If there are aliens, after that, we would certainly not be alone in deep space." It stems from an academic desire to discover the secrets of deep space; a significantly developed unusual race might have the advanced expertise to hand it down to us.

Perhaps such understanding is not simply academic; the theoretical aliens may understand the solution to essential questions of presence: "Why am I right here? What is the meaning of life?" and more. Moreover, an advanced alien race might have medical understanding much exceeding our own-- expertise that could be used to cure our diseases. Their medical technology would certainly be up until now that they also hold the trick of life and death; with such excellent medical understanding, people would no longer need to die.

In such a way, the idea of extraterrestrial life has become a secular replacement for God. God is the one that can recover every illness. God is the one in whom all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are deposited (Colossians 2:3). God is the one who can address the basic inquiries of our existence.

God alone possesses the present of eternal life (John 17:3). Therefore, it is not surprising that the unbelieving scientist would feel a sense of cosmic solitude, having denied his Developer. But we are not the only ones in the universe; there is God. God produced us for fellowship with Him; hence, we have an inherent requirement for Him and objective. Although humans have declined God, in Adam, and our transgressions, our need for fellowship with Him stays.

When I consider most intelligent researchers who have actually examined God's stunning production but have denied Him and have instead selected to believe in aliens and millions of years of evolution, I am advised of Romans 1:18-- 25. God's unseen qualities-- His eternal power and magnificent nature-- are plainly exposed in the natural world to ensure there is no justification for denying God or subduing the truth regarding Him.

The thinking of males besides God is nothing more significant than useless suppositions. Trading the reality of God, such as development, for a lie, such as evolution, and also resorting to a plain animal, such as theoretical aliens, for solutions is strikingly comparable to what is tape-recorded in Romans 1:25.

Yet when we begin with the Scriptures, the evidence makes good sense. Deep space is consistent with the biblical training that the planet is a special development. The stunning charm and dimension of a cosmos, which is evidently devoid of life except for one little globe where life abounds, is precisely what we would get from a scriptural worldview. The fact is not "available;" the truth is in the Scriptures! The Lord Jesus is the fact (John 14:6). So, when we base our reasoning on what God has said in His Word, we hypothesize that the universe makes good sense.

America is NOT the Freest Nation. Scam!

New Human Freedom Index: U.S. Is 27th freest nation.

New Zealand and Switzerland are the Freest nation in the world. But, unfortunately, the US of America is NOT the freest nation.

The USA ranks 15 in the Human Flexibility Index 2019 launched today by the Cato Institute, the Fraser Institute in Canada, and the Liberales Institute at the Friedrich Naumann Structure for Flexibility in Germany. The five freest territories are New Zealand, Switzerland, Hong Kong, Canada, and Australia.

The yearly Index uses 76 indications of individual, civil, and financial flexibility in 162 countries for 2017, the most recent year for which sufficient, globally comparable information is available. The record discovers that global flexibility has decreased slightly considering 2008, with more countries (79) seeing a fall in their levels of freedom than a renovation (61).

Other picked countries rate as follow: United Kingdom (14), Taiwan (19), Chile (28), France (33), Mauritius (50), South Africa (64), India (94), Russia (114), China (126), Saudi Arabia (149) and Venezuela (161).

Discover a strong relationship between financial and individual freedom, recommending that if you wish to reside in a nation with high degrees of personal space, you should pick an area with relatively high levels of economic liberty. Overall flexibility is likewise correlated with dramatically higher revenues per capita ($40,171 for the leading quartile countries vs. $15,721 for the bottom quartile) and freedom (see chart listed below).

The index enables you to check out local and also nation trends. Compared to other cost-free nations, for example, the United States has a low rating for regulation policy, which has experienced a slight deterioration in recent times. Nevertheless, those uneasy developments offered the fundamental role of law regulation in upholding liberty.

The impacts of populism and particularly authoritarian populism on liberty around the world can be seen in the report. For instance, under Recep Tayyip Erdogan's increasingly authoritarian leadership, Turkey has seen a notable decrease in liberty this year (see graph). Amongst ten areas worldwide, the most considerable reduction in flexibility since 2008 has happened between East and North Africa, the area with the least freedom.

United States Prison Scam

There are more people in American prisons than all the prisons in the world combined!

Prisons are for-profit enterprises. They must house at least 95% to earn enough profits for shareholders. So prisons are big moneymakers.

Our judicial system knows this too well. Judges are paid bonuses to convict people and send them to prison. Big business! The American judicial system is highly corrupt.

New prison and prison population information released this week by the United States Department of Justice reveals the United States still incarcerates its people at a price 5 to 10 times more than various other industrialized countries. Some 2.27 million people were detained behind bars and jails across the nation in 2017-- a 500% boost over the last 40 years.

The Punishing Task assessed the information, which is current with the end of 2017. It reveals that the jail population nationwide decreased by 7.3 percent because its highest degree in 2009, yet the decrease is primarily attributable to reforms in six states that have reduced their jail populaces by a minimum of 30 percent in the past two decades: Alaska, Connecticut, The Golden State, New Jersey, New York City, as well as Vermont.

The Bureau of Justice Stats reports that 1,489,363 individuals were incarcerated in state or government jails in 2017. At the current price of decrease, it will take 75 years to reduce the prison populace by half, the Punishing Project records.

Area and city jails held an additional 745,200 individuals at midyear 2017, two-thirds of whom had not been found guilty. In 2017, jails reported 10.6 million admissions.

The variety of people behind bars punished to life reached a record high of 206,000 individuals by 2017. One of every seven people behind bars is offered a life sentence. The Punishing Task located that two-thirds of individuals sentenced to life in prison are individuals of color.

Information analysis exposed one more uncomfortable trend: the rate of ladies' imprisonment has actually been increasing at a rate 50 percent higher than guys' because the 1980s and decreases in the incarceration rate for ladies have been slower than for males. There are 111,000 females behind bars in the United States.

Viruses enter through eyes and ears

- The coronavirus acquires ACE-2 receptors, called the 'entrance' right into cells.
- Johns Hopkins University School of Medication located ACE-2 in the eyes
- It indicates if infected beads come down on the eye, the virus can begin penetrating
- It may additionally describe why some individuals have experienced conjunctivitis.

Researchers have declared the coronavirus can get in the body with the eyes after discovering they include a healthy protein used by the infection to bind to cells.

The coronavirus - scientifically called SARS-CoV-2 - latches onto ACE-2 receptors, known as the 'gateway' into cells inside the body.

These receptors are discovered in the breathing system and the lungs, where the virus initially infiltrates cells and other organs.

A group led by Johns Hopkins University Institution of Medicine has now discovered the eyes produce ACE-2, making them a target for the virus.

It implies that if beads from an infected person's sneeze or coughing came down on the eye's surface area, the infection could start infiltrating cells there.

It might clarify why some clients have endured conjunctivitis - an inflammation of the eye that causes it to be red and contaminated.

Not just can the virus enter the body via the eyes. However, rips may work as a spread infection, researchers claimed.

Researchers have claimed the coronavirus can go into the body via the eyes after discovering they include a healthy protein the infection uses to bind to cells. Visualized: Health care employee in Ukraine Scientists found

ACE-2 was shared in the cornea (An and also B, amplified in C) and the limbus (E, multiplied in F), which is the border in between the cornea and also the white of the eye

The team was led by Lingli Zhou of the Division of Ophthalmology, Johns Hopkins College School of Medicine, Baltimore.

They evaluated ten human post-mortem eyes from individuals who did not pass away from COVID-19 for the expression of ACE2 (angiotensin-converting enzyme 2).

ACE-2 is understood to be the access point for the infection. Its spiky surface area binds to the receptors and, from there, infects the cell and reproduces.

It's recommended that someone with even more ACE-2 receptors be more prone to a sizeable viral lot - the very first contagious dosage of a virus - entering their bloodstream.

The group likewise sought TMPRSS2, an enzyme that helps viral entry by adhering to the binding of the viral spike healthy protein to ACE2. ACE2 and TMPRSS2 need to both be present in the same cell for the infection to reproduce correctly.

ACE-2 receptors are frameworks located externally of cells in the lungs and air passages that work with an enzyme called ACE (angiotensin-converting enzyme) to regulate high blood pressure.

Its exact function in the lungs is not well recognized. Still, researchers recommend it is protective against lung damage, and also reduced levels of it can intensify the influence of viral infections.

Scientists say that the coronavirus which causes COVID-19 gets into the body via the ACE-2 receptor, which the shape of it allows it to latch on to.

This suggests that someone with more ACE-2 receptors may be more at risk of a large viral load - the first transmittable dosage of an infection - entering their bloodstream.

WHAT IS AN ACE-2 RECEPTOR, AND WHAT DOES IT CONCERN COVID-19?

ACE-2 receptors have a shape that matches beyond the coronavirus, effectively providing it with a doorway right into the researchers say.

People who have higher than typical numbers of ACE-2 receptors might consist of those with diabetes mellitus or hypertension because they have congenital diseases that make them generate extra. In addition, emerging proof shows that cigarette smokers might likewise create more.

High degrees of ACE-2 receptors may also be safe, nevertheless.

They are thought to be able to protect the lungs during infection. However, a study on mice in 2008 found that computer mice that had ACE-2 obstructed in their bodies endured a lot more damage when they were contaminated with SARS, which is virtually identical to COVID-19.

Smoking cigarettes has been repetitively linked to less than regular degrees of ACE-2 receptors, potentially raising the threat of lung damage from COVID-19.

All eye specimens shared ACE-2 in the cells that line the inside of the eyelids, called the conjunctiva, the transparent external layer of the eye, called the cornea, and the limbus, which is the border between the cornea, the white of the eye.

TMPRSS2 was also expressed, according to the pre-print paper on MedRxiv, yet to be examined by various other researchers.

Dr. Zhou and coworkers wrote: 'With each other, these outcomes suggest that eye surface cells consisting of the conjunctiva are at risk to infection by SARS-CoV-2, as well as could therefore act as a website of the entrance along with a tank for person-to-person transmission of this infection.'

The research study was activated by a 'substantial conjecture' that eye surface areas are a feasible site of infection entry.

Although the virus primarily spreads out through droplets of saliva or discharge from the nose from an infected person lands inside another individual's nose or mouth, scientists have claimed it's entirely feasible to get in with the eye.

Reports have recommended that COVID-19 may trigger conjunctivitis, which was a sign in around 30 percent of patients in one research.

The researchers clarified that this could result from the infection taking a trip from the respiratory system to the eyes - a second issue often linked with a virus.

Yet it might additionally be a straight result of the virus attacking the eye cells in the first place by binding to ACE-2 receptors.

Dr. Zhou kept in mind that viral particles can be found in rips that 'might lead to transmission to various other people.'

' Infection of eye surface area cells might lead to the eye as a crucial provider, with ocular infection dropping comprising a substantial system for infection of other individuals,' they wrote.

' This highlights the importance of safety and security methods, including face masks and eye contact with preventative measures to stop COVID-19 disease.'

It was not defined if the basic populace would certainly benefit whatsoever from eye protection or if the academics indicated health and wellness workers expressly.

Medics on the pandemic frontline are expected to wear safety glasses or face visors to secure their eyes.

Medical professionals initially alerted the awesome coronavirus could be spread with the eyes in January, when the epicenter remained in Wuhan, China, and had gotten to only a handful of various other nations.

Simply 26 individuals died in China's breakout when physician Wang Guangfa said he assumed he had contracted the SARS-like infection since he had not been wearing safety goggles.

Several days before the onset of pneumonia, Dr. Wang - a Peking College respiratory system expert - experienced soreness of the eyes.

Paul Kellam, teacher of virus genomics at Imperial University London, told MailOnline it was 'definitely possible.'

' If you have droplets sneezed at you, they will clean from your eye to your nose,' he informed MailOnline. 'Your eye attaches to your nose with the lacrimal duct.

' If you deal with allergic reactions and your eyes run, so will your nose. If you place the medication in your eyes, you'll taste at the back of your throat.

' It isn't unusual for influenza and various other viruses to be sent by doing this. You can likewise get breathing infections via the eye. '

Law Enforcement and the FBI SCAM

Police Can Legally Lie to You

(Disclaimer: This short article is planned for informative purposes just. It is not legal advice or an alternative to consulting with a lawyer worrying about the certain facts of your situation. Reviewing the contents of this post does not create an attorney-client partnership.)

Can Authorities lie to you?

Yes, they can. Below is just how you can detect authorities' deceptiveness. As a general proposition, courts allow the police to exist. The lies told by the police to a suspect under questioning do not provide the admission uncontrolled in itself. A mere hoax alone does not revoke a confession. The court needs to see whether the deceptiveness is likely to generate incorrect access. People v. Farnam (2002) 28 Cal.4 th 107; Hawkins v. Lynaugh (5th Cir. 1988) 844 F. 2d 1132

(1) Cops Can Lie Concerning Having Physical Proof

" We have your fingerprints."

" We have your DNA."

Fingerprint, as well as DNA evaluation, needs time, and also regional crime laboratories are infamously backlogged. For example, suppose you have been jailed as a suspect for a criminal activity that was just recently dedicated. In that case, it is implausible that authorities have fingerprints from the criminal offense scene at the time of interrogation.

Take into consideration the complying with an accurate tale:
The offender voluntarily came to the police station and was told he was not under arrest. The policeman informed the defendant that his fingerprints were found at the scene, a lie. The defendant then confessed to taking the residential or commercial property. Oregon v. Mathiason (1977) 429 U.S. 492

The 6th Federal Area Court explained the technique of cops existing regarding having DNA, "a regrettable however regular method of police was not unconstitutional," mentioning Individuals v. Jones (1998) 17 Cal.4 th 279, 299 - which allows police deceptiveness as long as it is possible to produce an untruthful confession.

(2) Cops can deceive you right into surrendering your DNA

" Would you like something to consume alcohol?"

A DNA swab is now part of the typical reservation regimen if you are jailed for a serious felony (read: violent criminal activity). However, the police might also attempt to trick you into surrendering your DNA by using a soda, cup of water, or coffee. A positive DNA suit to an energetic criminal offense scene is typically adequate for apprehension and cost. Cops can even go via your garbage to get your DNA and various other proof. Nevertheless, it should be noted that these DNA evaluations still take some time and are typically carried out off-site. Maryland v. King (2013) 133 S.Ct. 1958; California v. Greenwood (1988) 486 UNITED STATE 35

(3) Police can offer phony tests to "show you're guilty."

" You failed the lie detector."

" You fell short a chemical examination."

Take into consideration the adhering to the real story:

A suspicious asked for a polygraph test, as well as the authorities hooked the suspect as much as a phony maker. Throughout the wondering, the suspect denied any involvement in the criminal activity. After that, the authorities reveal to the offender a fake graph from the phony maker and inform the suspect that they understood he was lying. The suspect after that admits being present at the scene of the criminal activity - The court ruled the defendant's admission is a volunteer and admissible confession. Individuals v. Mays (2009) 173 Cal Application. 4th 1145.

" In the initial step of the "examination," the detectives sprayed the offender's hands with soap and patted them with a paper towel. In the 2nd step, they used a field test kit to test compounds believed to be cocaine, which the investigations knew would turn colorably. The detective informed the accused that the test had given evidence that the defendant had recently fired a weapon." Individuals v. Smith (2007) 40 Cal.4 th 483; Individuals v. Parrison (1992) 137 Cal.App.3 d 529, 537

(4) Authorities might lie regarding having eyewitnesses

" An eyewitness recognized you leaving the scene."

True Tale:

An accused was brought to a police headquarters and suggested his Miranda rights. Defendant waived his legal rights, offered a statement, and after that, requested an attorney. As the investigators got their publications to leave the space, a detective told the defendant that the sufferer determined a picture of the Defendant as the one who stabbed and raped her. At the time, the target had not seen any photos. The accused consequently confessed. Individuals v. Dominick (1986) 182 Cal. Ap. 3d 1174.

(5) Cops can exist concerning videotaping your discussion

" I'm transforming the recorder off. Again, this is simply between you and me."
" This is off the record."

There is absolutely nothing requiring a police officer to divulge the existence of an already-activated tape recorder. There might be more than one recording gadget in the room, as well as the authorities might turn one of those tools off and also state, "this is just between us," or "this is off the document." Bear in mind that when consulting with the police, there is no "off the record." Individuals v. Sims (1993) 5 Cal. Fourth 405.

(6) Cops can lie about having an associate's confession

" Your friend marketed you out and also informed us whatever."

The police are permitted to exist and tell you that your accomplice was admitted. Usually, this is utilized to draw out minor details, such as your location at certain times - minor points used to construct an instance. Police will claim, "just inform us where you satisfied your pal," or "how long were you hanging out?" - While these concerns appear innocent, your responses are confessions to those truths.

True Tale:

Detectives might position both Frazier and his relative at a bar where a target was last seen alive. Both Frazier as well as the cousin, was apprehended. Police existed to Frazier throughout the interview that his cousin admitted and told them everything. Frazier just made statements that he and his cousin went to the bench. Those statements were used to convict him. Frazier v. Cupp (1969) 394 U.S. 731.

(7) The authorities will attempt to suggest that your rejection to comply will damage your situation.

" We know what occurred; however, if you obstruct our investigation, the DA will be a whole lot tougher on you."

The above statement is not a lie- you can be criminally billed for blocking an examination (i.e., lying to the police). But the means it is phrased is often taken as "you have to speak with us." Refusing to respond to concerns is not obstruction of justice. Your best defense is always to stay quiet and wait for an attorney. You will not talk yourself out of a jail cell.

Most individuals don't realize that the police do not bill you with criminal activity - only the district attorney can decide. The cops are simply intended to hold you and get as many details as possible to convict you. That's it ... That's their task. The DA's task is to assess the proof and determine whether to release a situation.

A DA often does not know anything about the case until the day of arraignment, where they first pick up the documents and review an authorities report. Unfortunately, many DA's do not even obtain that far and review an intern's notes on the documents.

When a DA reviews the declaration the first time, one of the essential items of evidence they are seeking is if you made any statements (that is the something that makes their work the easiest). USA v. Santos-Garcia (8th Cir.2002) 313 F. 3d 1073, 1079 (keeping in mind that raised voices and recommendations on how to acquire compassion do not render an admission uncontrolled).

(8) Cops can exist about what will happen to other individuals.

" Your pal will certainly spend their life in jail if you don't tell us what occurred."

The authorities can exist to you and state that your close friend will most likely go to jail for the remainder of their life. HOWEVER, they can not threaten a relative with harm or elimination from the residence. While the court permits a variety of forceful techniques, intimidating your family members is thought about as the kind of danger that is most likely to create a false confession.

"A hazard by cops to jail or punish a close relative, or a promise to free the family member in exchange for an admission, may render an admission invalid."
Individuals v. Steger (1976) 16 Cal.3 d 539, 550.

(9) They will lie about wanting to help you out.

"We understand what took place, finest thing for you is to inform us just how to create it up in your favor, and we will help you out."

" We have enough evidence to bill you - this is your only opportunity to inform your tale."

Cops do not "charge" you with a criminal offense. The most challenging situations to prosecute are where the Accused who has said NOTHING. The less you claim to the Cops, the better off you go to avoiding a charge. Speaking with the police makes it more probable that fees will certainly be submitted.

True Story:

The accused and his accomplice was wanted for murder. The policeman already had a full confession from the offender's associate, who specified the offender was the killer. Police existed and told the Defendant they had sufficient evidence to bill him with murder.

The offender informed the cops his buddy did the murder. His declarations were utilized versus him to position him at the crime scene and as a partner. The defendant was inevitably convicted of murder. When the cops inform you, they will assist you out, and they are existing. Their only task is to explore a case. The cops will certainly never aid a suspect/person do anything but incriminating themselves. Individuals v. Gurule (2002) 28 Cal.4 th 557

(10) Cops may ignore your ask for a lawyer

An evidentiary technicality permits volunteer statements, given up infraction of Miranda, to be useable in court for impeachment objectives (testing the defendant's credibility).

True story:

Purposefully, the law enforcement officer made a contract before talking to the defendant that they would proceed with examining Defendant if he invoked his right to an attorney. They understood that anything the Accused said might not be made use of to confirm his regret; nonetheless, anything the accused stated is permissible as "impeachment evidence," - which is evidence that tends to show that the Accused is incorrectly affirming.

Defendant asked for an attorney 11 times throughout a 4 hr interrogation. Yet, each time after asking for a lawyer, the police overlooked the demand and asked another inquiry, to which the Accused responded - and then resumed questioning.

He then later confessed a rape and double murder to authorities. He never saw an attorney. The court located that the defendant was not subjected to physical or psychological persecutions, is fully grown, and has had previous criminal experience. His declarations were consequently voluntary and acceptable as impeachment proof. Individuals v. Jablonski (2006) 37 Cal.4 th 774

False confessions happen with a remarkably high level of regularity.

The Media Scam

Their lies are obvious

Remember, most of the Media, offline and online, are owned by six companies. All of them are "lefties"-- of course, communists (democrats). You can record or listen to all the information "speaking heads." They duplicate the same words. Hitler is noted as saying, "If you tell a lie big enough and repeat it often enough, the public will believe it."

It feels like you have an endless variety of entertainment and media alternatives right at your fingertips in modern America.

In today's startup-centric economy, television, film, and computer game firms appear ahead of the woodwork. Who knows what they'll do next? However, while it may look like you have infinite alternatives, most of the media you consume is had by one of six companies. These six media firms are called The Big 6.

While independent media electrical outlets still exist (and there is a great deal of them), the major outlets are almost all owned by these six conglomerates. To be transparent, "media" in this context does not refer just to information outlets-- it describes any tool that manages the circulation of details. So below, "media" consists of 24-hour information stations, newspapers, publishing houses, Net energies, and video game programmers.

With that said in mind, let's look at each of The Large six that regulate them and what they own.

Media Empire # 1: National Amusements

Unless you're directly involved in service and/or home entertainment, you've probably never heard of National Amusements before. The company has cinemas worldwide-- about 950 total--, yet it owns far more than just theaters.

NA's extensive collection of properties is startling. Whether they own a business entirely, have majority shares, or even own minority voting shares, the scope of NA's reach is massive for a company recognized less than its subsidiaries.

TV and Film Assets

TimeWarner owns a massive amount of television and film assets. The most well-known is probably Warner Brothers Animation Studios, which possesses residential properties like Looney Tunes. In addition to that, Time Warner has joint endeavors in The CW and Hulu and ultra-niche TV programming for clinical waiting spaces.

TimeWarner has additionally played a huge duty in comics adaptations right into motion pictures, most notably with Batman. Last, Time Warner's HBO branch achieved worldwide renown with its runaway dream drama Video game of Thrones, an adaptation of George R. R. Martin's A Track of Ice and Fire. TimeWarner's television, as well as film branches-- consisting of joint endeavors like Hulu and CW--, are doing quite well these days

.Print Assets

On top of its great TV and movies, TimeWarner also controls several big-name print assets, including TIME (obviously).

Head: Rupert Murdoch.

While News Corp undertook a split in 2013, Rupert Murdoch stayed the head of most of News Corp's existing possessions. With a hand in tv, film, songs, and print, Murdoch is maybe one of the most successful Australian business owners to build a global realm. As a result, Murdoch makes something to the tune of $22.3 million annually, which is approximate:

-$ 857,692 per paycheck.

-$ 10,721.15 per hour.

So what do Murdoch and his world-famous News Corp control?

TV and Movie Possessions.

News Corp has the Fox brand, which implies they manage a borderline-unreasonable amount of electrical media outlets utilizing tv and film. There's very little even more to claim concerning it-- News Corp possesses many outlets.

Songs Possessions.

On top of the TV and movie. It's not News Corps's biggest branch, but it works for their requirements, commonly sustaining the television and film departments with music (Fox Songs). On the other hand, Wireless Group PLC is an Irish radio broadcast company-- one of the most significant in the country.

Publish Properties.

News Corps's fundamental asset is print. The business possesses hundreds of national, local, and neighborhood papers worldwide. One of the most well-known is most likely the Wall Street Journal, which fits the mold and mildew of News Corps's focus on financial information.

Information Corp also possesses HarperCollins, which includes the Christian-niche Zondervan, making Information Corp a significant player in retail books.
Media Conglomerate # 6: Sony.

Sony is one of the earliest businesses on this listing, given that it was founded in 1946. It likewise has one of the most current CEO modifications. In 2012, Kazuo Hirai became chief executive officer of the entire corporation, which might be the most well-known electronic devices brand on the planet. However, Sony is a lot greater than an electronics firm. They have interests across mainly all media sectors, and Hirai has assisted in maintaining the strong current and affordable.

Head: Kazuo Hirai.

" Kaz" Hirai started to operate at Sony Songs Home Entertainment Japan in 1984, as well as he's been with the company since. He promptly climbed up Sony's corporate ladder, ultimately finishing with his chief executive officer appointment on April 1, 2012. Sony has had some problems; however, it's likewise had some successes. Most significantly.

Sony recently uploaded a 666% boost in earnings as it released a turn-around strategy. The statement came practically exactly four years after Hirai came to be CEO. At 55, Hirai is among the youngest leaders of an international corporation. Yet still, he recognizes what he's doing.

For his vision, Hirai gains concerning $4.9 million each year. That's relatively small compared to the various other CEOs and heads of state on this list. But it's still life-changing cash for 99% of the world. Hirai's income breaks down to $161,540.80 per paycheck

-$ 2019.23 per hour

Allow's check out the extent of Hirai's responsibilities.

TV as well as Film Properties

Sony has a hand in dozens of television and movie theater firms. Sony works in production, distribution, and nearly every other stage of the tv and film processes. So, it makes good sense that Sony owns media outlets in great deals in different nations, most significantly Japan and the USA.

Songs Assets

Sony's songs arm is popular throughout the world. Their song's arms work in support for their tv and movie production branches. However, they additionally publish pieces from artists.

Web Properties

So-net is Sony's Internet solution branch. It's just readily available in Japan and offers dual speeds of Google Fiber for much less money. That makes So-net one of the most charitable ISPs globally in terms of rate.

Non-Media Assets

Sony additionally possesses non-media assets, including a bank, monetary holdings, and an innovative collection. These non-media possessions don't publish information, yet they play a significant role in Sony's financial success.

The only methods they'll disappear are if they're bought by an added megalithic business or run out of solutions by a considerable market overhaul that leaves them no time at all whatsoever to adapt.

This sensation is called "as well huge to fall short," and it's usually connected to international banks like Citi or Banks of America. Nevertheless, it, in addition, applies right here. This company is an earnings engine that maintains increases. And when they can't expand, they acquire the smaller-sized business that does.

Update: At the time of the magazine, AT&T is trying to acquire Time Warner for about $80 billion. The bargain is still in settlements, as well as the FCC may block it to stop monopolization .

“invisible enemy” of humanity.

Margaret Sanger SCAM – she was a eugenicist. Her mission was to eradicate Negros. Planned Parenthood!

Sanger argued for compulsory sterilization and segregation for people with disabilities.

Eugenics based on race is inexorably linked to the founding of Planned Parenthood. Sanger did not want the black race to exist. Instead, she wished to exterminate them. Planned Parenthood was her scheme to murder black children before they were born.

In 1921, Margaret Sanger founded the American Birth Control League (ABCL), and founding directors Clarence Cook "C.C.

The ABCL would eventually become the Birth Control Federation of America, which was renamed Planned Parenthood Federation of America in 1942. Sanger believed she had found the solution to Stoddard's "Crisis of the Ages" in birth control.

In a 1919 article, she appealed to eugenicists to lend their support to birth control as the vehicle for "racial betterment." Sanger's objective was to eliminate the "unfit" while striving to "Create a Race of Thoroughbreds," which was the tagline for her magazine The Birth Control Review. Sanger published countless articles on eugenics and racial cleansing in The Birth Control Review, including "Eugenic Sterilization:

An Urgent Need" by Dr. Ernst Rudin in 1933. Ernst Rudin, Eugenic Sterilization: An Urgent Need, Birth Control Review (1933), available at <https://lifedynamics.com/app/uploads/2015/09/1933-04-April.pdf>.

Rudin was the architect of the racial policy in Nazi Germany known as Rassenhygiene or racial hygiene and praised Adolf Hitler as the one who through whom “our 30-year long dream of 6 translating Rassenhygiene into action finally become a reality.” William H. Tucker, The Science and Politics of Racial Research 121 (1996). In 1939, Margaret Sanger initiated the “Negro Project” to educate Blacks about birth control and reduce the birth rate among Black Americans.

9 Things You Need To Understand About Planned Parenthood Founder Margaret Sanger

This weekend break Planned Parenthood celebrated its 100th wedding anniversary, celebrating the day that Margaret Sanger, the company's owner, opened the first contraception clinic in America.

Although Planned Parenthood has tried to distance itself from Sanger's more illiberal views, they still applaud her duty, as well as yearly give the Margaret Sanger Award-- the company's most incredible honor-- to "recognize management, quality, and also outstanding contributions to the reproductive wellness and rights activity." (When Hillary Clinton won the honor in 2009 she said, "I appreciate Margaret Sanger significantly. Her courage, her perseverance, her vision ... I am truly amazed of her.").

That was Sanger? Below are 9 points you should know about one of the 20th century's most questionable:

1. In 1916, Sanger opened up the world's first birth control clinic in New York City. However, nine days later, Sanger was thrown in jail. The clinic was also shut down for violating the Comstock obscenity regulations, which included a prohibition against literature defining contraceptive methods.

2. At the initial American Contraception Seminar in 1921, Sanger established the American Birth Control League (ABCL). In 1942 the ABCL transformed its name to the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. In 1952 in Bombay, India, the International Planned Parenthood Federation (IPPF) was founded at the Third International Conference on Planned Parenthood. Sanger worked as president of the IPPF from 1952 to 1959. (She died in 1966.).

3. Sanger was a leading advocate of eugenics activity, especially negative eugenics, which advertised the decrease of sexual reproduction and sanitation of people with unwanted characteristics or economic problems. Her sights on eugenics were shaped very early by her experience in a vast family. The sixth of eleven kids, she discovered that the rich had little families while the poor had huge households. In her autobiography, My Fight for Contraception, she composed, "I associated destitution, toil, unemployment, intoxication, viciousness, quarreling, combating, debts, prisons with big family members."

4. Sanger thought using birth control was needed, as Jyotsna Sreenivasan describes, not only for the specific lady's health but also for the economy. In her 1931 pamphlet "Family members Constraint," Sanger created, "The working female can use direct action by declining to provide the market with children to be manipulated, by declining to populate the earth with servants ... Hand down this info to your neighbor and also pal employees." Sanger arranged for this pamphlet to be dispersed extensively through a Socialist labor union, the Industrial Workers of the Globe.

5. In Female and the New Race, Sanger consisted of a phase to respond to the concern, "When Should a Woman Avoid Having a Kid?"

6. On a radio program, Sanger is reported to have said that "idiots, mental defectives, epileptics, illiterates, destitute, unemployable, crooks, prostitutes, and dope ogres" should be surgically sterilized. If they desire, she stated, such individuals should additionally have the ability to select a lifelong segregated existence in labor camps.

7. Sanger's motivations regarding racial genocide are frequently overemphasized, misinterpreted, or misconstrued. There is no doubt that Sanger relied on the preeminence of the white race and also the inferiority of various other racial groups (as an example, she once composed, "It is claimed that the aboriginal Australian, the lowest well-known types of the human family members, simply an action greater than the chimpanzee in mind growth, has so little sexual control that cops authority alone prevents him from getting sex-related fulfillment on the streets.").

Yet Sanger shows up to have been driven extra by her sights on eugenics to reduce "undesirables" than by an inspiration to eliminate particular racial groups.

Sanger was consumed with preventing the birth of people with physical and mental illnesses or who were financially disadvantaged, no matter their race. Regardless of counting on the general racial prevalence of the white race, Sanger liked intelligent, middle-class African Americans to illiterate, reduced-class whites.

(This is not to reject, nevertheless, that Sanger's sights were implicit-- and occasionally explicitly racist-- or that the result of her ideas and organizations did not destroy black neighborhoods. Instead, it is simply to state that it doesn't appear that racial prevalence was her crucial motivation for supporting sanitation and birth control.).

8. In 1939, Sanger, with the Contraception Federation of America (BCFA), helped to start the Negro Project. Unlike many of her associates, she wanted the physicians associated with the project to be black to acquire the depend on the African-American neighborhood.

Some people read this declaration suggesting that Sanger is attempting to utilize preachers to conceal her real motives-- racial genocide. But, most likely, she feared that if the belief were to spread that the goal of the job was to "eradicate the population," it would impede her true eugenic goal: the elimination of the subset of the black populace that she thought about "degenerate."

In this objective, she was joined in the Negro project by numerous African-American leaders.

9. Sanger remained committed to her eugenics views till her fatality. For example, in a 1947 newsreel meeting, she stated women in starving countries should not have infants for one decade.
